"You don't love me, Brooke?" To him that was incredible.

"No, Rod. I don't. It's all gone out of me. If I had stayed in Chatham, I'd have gone on loving my idea of you. It wasn't real. It was only a young girl's dream. And, Rod, I believe strongly that ever if I had not come to love Julian, I would have come to the end of loving you...."

He drew back. "Oh! Julian!"

"We're in love with each other."

"I see."

"I don't want to hurt you — or anybody, Rod."

"I suppose you'll marry him."

"He hasn't asked me to marry him. He thinks I'm going to marry you."

"Then are you so sure...."

"Surer of that than of anything I have ever known."

"Well....". He took a deep breath. "So that's how it is. Well.... I don't suppose I'll see you again."

"Oh, but undoubtedly you will." She would always remember his birthday and seeing him would give her no emotional shock. She thought, "I'm thinking of myself as Julian's wife, seeing Rod at Barney's parties and being really glad to see him, glad that he's back with Barney again and not very far from Grace."

"I deserve this," he said.

"Don't say that. You didn't commit a crime. And I know now, too, Rod, that neither my love for you nor yours for me was ever very strong. Mine was only in my imagination...." Julian's words....

They ate little and he walked back to the hotel with her.

"I'll have to make a brand-new set of plans now," he said.

It had become painful...."You'll be successful, Rod. You always wanted that. You'll earn it." She was thanking Barney over and over.

After he left, thoughts of him remained. She hoped that she saw his future clearly—a return to Barney, a series of promotions, a series of girls. No fear that there would be a lack of girls! His second wife he would select slowly and carefully. And Brooke did not feel she was far wrong in thinking that Rod's second wife would be a pretty, restful girl with a solid family background, social position and a good income.

Funny, she thought, when she knew now that she must call Julian, she had no idea where he lived. Turning the pages of the directory quickly, she found his number and called it. A singsong Chinese voice responded.

"Mr. Carlton is in Washington," the voice informed her. "He will not return until Wednesday."

Her hand dropped. Wednesday was an eternity....

Having seen a series of trains discharge a series of oddly assorted passengers, Brooke, wearing a dark frock with a black and white print jacket and an absurd high-crowned little black hat, stood on the platform at a little before six o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. The train that was bringing Julian back would be in shortly. His Chinese servant had told her what time when she insisted upon knowing.

"How quietly I stand, she thought with hundreds of people pouring about me, bumping into me, begging my pardon, talking to friends about business appointments and what shows to see—at the most important moment of my life. Her heart pounded and yet there was no fear in her, not a single ugly doubt. "Surer of that than of anything I have ever known," she had told Rod on Sunday. Julian would come.... And everything that had happened to her had been but a preparation for this—to find herself on a late afternoon in August standing on a station platform waiting for a man named Julian Carlton.. ..

She felt loved and—safe. Beyond the moment of their meeting she did not think. There was no need for her thoughts to race ahead, planning, wondering....He would take complete charge of her. Never were minutes longer....

Then his train..Her heart was a hammer, beating crazily. The train stopped. Always, she thought, she would remember that a stout man with a scowl alighted first, followed by a foreign-looking woman with a baby, then a pretty girl in green....Then Julian, frowning, intent, his brown felt hat carelessly on his bent head, a brown gladstone bag in his hand.

He did not see her. No telepathy, she thought, her bright mouth curving. People brushed past her. Julian gave his bag to a red-cap, thrust out his determined chin and looked ahead, intent on the thoughts....

He did not see her until she touched the sleeve of his dark coat.

"Brooke!"

It didn't matter even if she did say the wrong things to him..But suddenly she couldn't say anything for loving him, for seeing in his face her thoughts—her reason for being here. For his frown faded out and his blue eyes deepened. Understanding without words....

She had to speak so loudly to be heard above the confusion that it seemed to her she was shouting for every one to hear....

"You wouldn't let me tell you that I'm not going to marry Rod—that I've been in love with you since Maine...."

He stood still, looking at her. Then he laughed. "Can't you see it still, the silly look of man in love? Oh, my darling. ..And even before I kiss you I must tell you that you are going to marry me tomorrow.."

"Darling, you never asked me. You always told me...."

When she went to him and he put his arms around her, she became a part of him....

Egg Prices Up Butter Firm

Toronto, Aug. 26—Continued improvement was shown by egg prices on the Toronto open produce market Saturday. Butter held firm.

Receipts of top-grade eggs were scarce. This, coupled with a good demand, caused an upward price revision of 1c to 2c per dozen on top quality stocks. In the graded section A-large eggs firmed to a range of 29c to 30c, A-medium to a range of 28c to 29c and grade C to 15 1-2c. A-pullet eggs were steady at 23c, and grade B at 21c. In wholesale-to-retail trading A-large eggs advanced to 33c and A-medium to 32c, both up 2c from Friday's levels.

Butter was very firm in tone, but unchanged in price. Trading was quiet as usual for Saturday. Offerings of first-grade Ontario creamery solids were light and demand was sufficient to keep receipts moving easily. This stock sold at 21 3-4c. Holders of Western butter asked 22 1-2c, but no sales were reported.

The poultry market showed a better tone during the week, but quotations stayed unchanged. Dressed poultry showed a little more activity under light receipts and a fairly good demand.

Clamor Raised For Reprisal Raids Against Berlin

Two London Newspapers Support Campaign; but Three Favor Hewing to Military Objectives Alone

London, Aug. 26 —(CP) — Five air attacks on London within little more than 48 hours brought heightened clamor from Britain's man in the street today for reprisal raids on Berlin by Royal Air Force bombers.

(The German capital had a three-hour pre-dawn air raid alarm, its fifth since the start of the war. Nazis claimed there were at least four waves of British bombers but they dropped no bombs on the city proper and only a few in the outskirts.)

While London surveyed the damage of the latest Nazi blows at this centre of Empire—one shortly before midnight and one shortly after—two morning papers supported the reprisal campaign.

The Daily Mail announced 45 per cent of its mail contained readers: "Bomb Berlin" suggestions while the tabloid Daily Mirror featured a cartoon of a bomb bearing a tag labelled "to Berlin."

But three other influential papers—The Times, Daily Express and Daily Telegraph—maintained the R.A.F. should hew to the line of attacks on Nazi military objectives.

R.A.F. Attacks on Nazi Military Objectives

Such attacks, the government said, were carried out on a large scale Saturday night. Presumably they continued last night, for radio stations in four German cities abruptly went off the air and watchers on the southeast coast saw flashes of anti-aircraft gunfire and heard explosions indicating a bombing raid on Nazi long-range gun batteries along the French channel coast.

Earlier, three loud explosions in the Dover area led residents to believe the German "Big Berthas" had opened fire again.

Of the two week-end series of night attacks on London, those of Saturday-Sunday appeared to have been the more severe. Several hundred bombs were dropped and caused at least two large fires, in the financial and the warehouse districts. Sections of the city were roped off.

Bomb Falls in Outskirts

One bomb on the outskirts blasted a huge crater only 300 yards from the home of United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy.

The high explosive, incendiary and scream bombs dropped last night and early this morning caused only "small fires and damage to property" in "the outskirts of the London area," the government announced.

However, two policemen were believed killed during the second raid by a bomb which burst in a roadway. Four bombs loosed by a lone night raider in a residential area shattered the windows of a parish church.

Raiding planes dropped flares to light up their targets and then loosed their bombs. One raider, which dropped scream bombs, was reported shot down this morning.

Weekend Bag of 104 Planes

This was the first report of a Nazi casualty after Britain added up a weekend "bag" of 104 planes for her defence forces. Of these 54 were downed yesterday, 48 by R.A.F. fighter planes and six by anti-aircraft batteries. British weekend losses were placed at 32 planes, with three pilots known safe of the 13 shot down yesterday.

Britain's air war recapitulation listed 1,175 German raiders brought down since the start of the war; 1,101 since June 18, when the direct attack on England was begun, and more than 800 since Aug. 8, first day of the mass attacks.

Two Nazi Attacks Near Dorset Coast

London was only one of the Nazi targets yesterday. The day's largest air battles occurred near the coast of Dorset, the area which includes the naval base of Portland. There the Nazis launched two attacks, the first of which resulted in defeat for the main attacking body when 34 of the estimated 130 Nazi aircraft were shot down and others were damaged severely. This foray and the subsequent one, in which "at least" three raiders were destroyed, apparently were aimed inland.

There were violent explosions and fierce anti-aircraft fire in northeast England, where a single raider's bombs killed several persons in one town. Other attacks were reported in the south, the industrial midlands and in Scotland.

Fires Started by Incendiary Bombs

In a southeast town 25 pumping machines were needed to fight fires started by incendiary bombs which fell on a school, a brewery and a lumber yard.

Portsmouth, which, together with Dover and Ramsgate, suffered damage on Saturday night, felt the after-effects yesterday, when explosion of a number of delayed-action bombs forced officials to rope off various parts of the city.

R.A.F. operations, as detailed by the Air Ministry, included Saturday night raids on Frankfurt (fires started in a synthetic oil plant), Stuttgart (the Daimler-Benz armament and armored car factory bombed more than an hour), Ludwigshaven (explosions caused by direct hits on a nitrogen plant) and Cologne (fires started in an electric power plant). Twenty airdromes in Holland, Belgium and German-occupied France also were attacked, and Milan and Sesto-Caende in Italy were bombed.

British Shipping Undiminished

On the economic front Ronald Cross, Minister of Shipping, announced Britain would "embark upon the second year of war with shipping resources under the British flag undiminished" through addition of "just over 2,000,000 tons" to the merchant fleet to offset first-year losses of slightly less than 1,900,000 tons.

Cross said "4,500,000 tons of imports in a single month (July) of intense enemy attack both by sea and by air leaves me very well satisfied" and declared that during July 25 per cent more shipping left British ports with cargoes for North America than in any month "in the most peaceful" January to April period.

Morning's Raids

A Briton residing in a section of London bombed early this morning described the raid as follows:

"I heard a distant drone of a plane but assumed it was some miles away and I did not take much notice.

"Suddenly there was a series of ear-splitting explosions.

"All the bombs were dropped in less than 3 seconds and must have been scattered from a great height because some of them were miles apart."

Later another explosion occurred as firemen were attempting to control a gas main blaze. Pieces of concrete were scattered over a wide area.

One bomb scored a direct hit on a municipally owned housing development in the capital, killing a woman and seriously injuring her husband.

Some firms carried on their work in offices placed at their disposal by business rivals or in suburban branches. Others told their employees to return home.

Houses Damaged in N. E. Scotland

A man and girl were killed in a northeast Scotland coast town when eight bombs landed in a municipal housing development. There were no direct hits but several homes were rendered uninhabitable.

Ten bombs which crashed on a residential area of a southeast coast town early this morning demolished two houses and injured several persons. One woman was seriously wounded.

Observers in one midland city attacked last night said the raid ranked as the most serious the place had undergone, both in terms of duration and casualties, but details could not be given.

Two factories were hit there, it was said, but neither seriously damaged.

In the pre-dawn hours the sky over a southeast town first was lit by flares, and the raiders or raider then dropped seven or eight bombs which fell in the residential district, killing several persons and injuring others.

Three bombs were dropped on a thickly populated southwest district during the night demolished two houses and trapped several people in the wreckage. Two were rescued after an hour. Three others alive were still trapped three hours later.

Midlands City Houses Damaged

One midlands city was attacked early today for several hours by waves of raiders. There was extensive damage to house property. Two factories were slightly damaged. The bombs started several fires, one of which was serious. Firemen checked them. Delayed action bombs exploded after the raids at one plant and on a football field.

55 ENEMY CRAFT

The communique added German attacks were made over "widely spread areas" in South England, the midlands, northeast England and Scotland.

Reports showed a small number of casualties, it said.

The text of the second communique follows:

"During last night enemy bombing attacks were made over widely spread areas in the south of England and the midlands.

"Bombs were also dropped at a few places in northeast England and in Scotland.

"At a town in the midlands fires were caused and damage was done to industrial property. At another a theatre and some shops were damaged. Bombs fell in several places on the outskirts of the London area, causing small fires and damage to property.

"Reports so far received from all areas show that the total number of casualties was small.

"It is now known that 54 enemy aircraft were destroyed during yesterday's attacks on this country, 48 being shot down by our fighters and six by (anti-aircraft) guns.

"Thirteen of our fighters are missing but the pilots of three are known to be safe."

OBITUARY

WILLIAM J. MUNDELL

(Contributed)

William J. Mundell, who was born at Melrose 64 years ago, the son of the late William J. Mundell and his wife the late Caroline McKinney, died in Montreal on July 17th., after an illness of several months duration with heart trouble. His home was in Winnipeg and when taken ill in Montreal he was in eastern Canada on business for the Western Division of the Ogilvie Flour Milling Company, Winnipeg, with which firm he was engaged as salesman for many years.

The late Mr. Mundell took up residence in Winnipeg in the year 1912 and made considerable headway in the business world. He was a man of fine character, and possessed a pleasing personality and friendly manner. By his employers and his business associates, and by many close personal friends he was held in high regard. In the city of Winnipeg and throughout the west he was widely known and held in high esteem.

The funeral took place at Winnipeg and the service was conducted in Westminster United Church. Interment was made in Elmwood cemetery.

Surviving him are his wife and sister, Miss Martha Mundell, Winnipeg. Mrs. Robert Sherman, Church Street, Belleville, is a cousin of the late Mr. Mundell.

Old friends in this district will regret to learn of his death.

SOUTHEAST COAST

One eye-witness said he saw the two bombers suddenly dart from a formation of 20 Nazi planes and head "for us accompanied by fighters which seemed to drop out of the sky."

Rush For Shelters

"People rushed for shelters as a great column of smoke rose 200 yards away from where I was standing.

"Many people who were watching the planes had thought they were British fighters."

British fighters roared to the attack and within three minutes one German machine crashed in a blazing mass near the town and the other fell into the English channel.

Air raid precautions and auxiliary fire service workers still were digging in smouldering ruins three-quarters of an hour after the attack began.

In one place they could hear a woman's screams for the wailing of a baby under a mass of wreckage.

Debris from some explosions was hurled half a mile and in some streets not one window pane was left unshattered.

what R.A.F. pilots called "sitting birds."

From personal observation, the actual damage done in the London area was small. It is more difficult to calculate the effect loss of sleep and war "nerves" will have on the people and on industrial production after 10 days or two weeks more of this.

Fires Seen Put Out

The fires started by Saturday night's raiders were as spectacular and did about as much damage as a three-alarm blaze in a North American city's financial or commercial district. They were curbed swiftly—mainly because long months of comparative peace had enabled the auxiliary fire service to learn the best defence against fires started by incendiary bombs.

One fired warehouse, full of especially inflammable material, was brought under control in little over an hour. Its contents undoubtedly are lost, but more important to London, the fire was prevented from spreading.

One factor which must be considered is the probability that German night bombing will increase in accuracy as the night attacks continue. Until this month the Germans had done most of their bombing in daylight. It is natural for the bombardiers to be inaccurate on their first night sorties.

This accounts for the comparatively light damage to military objectives, such as airports like Manston. One airfield, which Berlin reported was bombed heavily, still is being used by a fighter squadron with little loss of efficiency.

Most of the invading planes seemed to approach from the west and north. Firing was particularly heavy in the western suburbs. There were reports that pamphlets had been dropped at several points.

Eight Juveniles Found Guilty Of Twenty-nine Theft Charges

Judgment Reserved by Magistrate Butler Until August 30th

OPERATED IN GANG

Trenton, August 26 (Special) — Eight juveniles appearing in a special juvenile court here on Sattoday were found guilty on 29 charges of theft, breaking and entering and a number of other minor charges before Magistrate E. J. Butler. The Magistrate withheld passing sentences in the various cases until August 30.

The apprehension of the juveniles during the past week has cleared up a regular epidemic of minor thefts and nuisances, according to Chief Bain. "These boys have been operating in a gang and have gone from one thing to another," he stated. "Shop-lifting and stealing seems to be their favorite pastime."

Trenton police have all been working on the cases. Nineteen charges of theft from stores, three charges of breaking and entering, three charges of digging up potatoes from gardens and selling them; one charge of breaking and entering a yacht and one charge of stealing a boat were all aired in the largest juvenile court ever to be held in Trenton.

"Three of these boys are constant repeaters," Chief Bain informed the court. "The remainder of the boys are first offenders. They have all been operating in a gang."

Although there were a large number of cases the value of the articles stolen was usually very small. The boys faced various numbers of charges. One boy was found guilty on one charge, two found guilty on three charges, two found guilty on six charges, another found guilty on five charges and one found guilty on seven charges.

Angus Brown was found guilty of receiving stolen goods and ordered to pay the costs of $18.55 and repay the value of a tube to the garage where it had been stolen.

Two other juveniles were fined $5.50 when they pleaded guilty to charges of riding their bicycles on the sidewalk. The two boys are alleged to have collided with another two boys who were walking on the sidewalk, causing injury to one and requiring medical attention.

German Objectives Bombed

An Air Ministry statement said the total of German aircraft shot down yesterday had reached 55, with British losses placed at 13. Of the Nazi total, 43 were destroyed in engagements near the naval base of Portland.

In their first major drive of the war on the German capital, the Air Ministry announced, Royal Air Force planes dumped bombs on Berlin armament factories while other formations raided additional military objectives in the Ruhr and elsewhere in northwest Germany.

Hardly had these British bombers returned to their bases before German fliers began raining fire bombs over a wide area of Wales and southeast England.

Most of the incendiary bombs dumped on Wales struck in fields without causing serious damage or casualties. High explosive bombs were dropped on the northeast coast, but the only casualty was one soldier injured slightly.

Bombers Cross Path

Earlier, the British bombers streaking out across the Channel crossed paths with Nazi night raiders who bombed a town in the Midlands, industrial centre of England, causing some casualties including "a few people killed".

Bombs fell in several places on the outskirts of London during Sunday raids, but the Air Ministry said they caused but "small fires and damage to property".

Casualties reported so far from German raids last night in the Midlands included:

A man, his wife and four children, all killed when a bomber scored a direct hit on their home.

Several persons killed when a bomb landed directly on a shelter, blowing it so high it fell on the roof of a neighbouring house, in which an entire family was wiped out.

In a southwest town three children were killed this morning by a delayed action bomb while playing around a hole it made when dropped during the night.

U. S. Officials Simplify Entrance To Their Country

Ottawa, Aug. 26—(CP)—New regulations simplifying entrance of temporary visitors and border-crossing commuters to the United States, issued at Washington yesterday, were explained today at the United States legation here as follows:

1. Beginning tomorrow identification cards will be issued to commuters who cross the border daily and to Canadians contemplating visits of less than 90 days.

2. These cards will substitute for non-immigration visas formerly required of visitors.

3. Canadian passports will still be required.

4. Holders of identification cards will not be formally registered and finger-printed as are all alien residents of the United States.

The new regulations were described at the legation as "definitely simplifying the situation" with regard to visitors and commuters, and at the same time establishing United States control. The Canadian passport is the means of control by the Canadian government. The issuance of cards will enable the United States government to check against visitors with less interference with them than when a visas is required.

The cards will be issued by an immigration official or United States consul.

There is no charge for the cards, issuance of which will be "a matter of five or ten minutes."

Where Are The Poets?

(From the Vancouver Sun)

There is something radically wrong with the spirit of poetry. Here we have been engaged in a major fracas for nearly a year and not one of the poets has been inspired by these mighty movements to write a single verse rising above the level of the sort of local doggerel that radiates from enthusiastic but uninformed women and is set to music for some church bazaar.

If there was ever in the course of history a series of events calling for deep researches into human activities and their effect upon the human mind they are here provided; if there were ever soul-stirring events, that are worthy to be celebrated in the most impassioned verse they have surely been encompassed. There has been scope for every kind of Psychological hair-splitting by the poets, but not one of them has beaten his sword into a typewriter and poured forth therefrom his wealth of immortal strophes.

At a similar period in the last war, eager young Rupert Brooke had already given the world his four magnificent sonnets on the war ideal before he took ship to die of fever in the Aegean Sea; Ford Maddox Ford had already written his "Foot Sloggers," Sassoon was pouring out his undying realization in words of the futility of it all, and other great verse was in the making.

Today there is nothing of note. Kipling and Chesterton are dead and the living poets are paralyzed. Even the American school of poesy is silent and this usually highly vocal source is dried up.

"B's" Explained

Farmers across the province have been reporting that letter "B" has been appearing on the blades of oat stems, and much speculation and interest has been aroused. There has been various interpretations assigned to the mysterious appearance of the letter on the growing grain, the most popular of which has been that the letter is symbolic of British victory.

Dr. McRostie, head of the Field Husbandry Department of the Ontario Agricultural Society, is quoted as stating that "this kind of thing occurs every year. However, it is a bit more pronounced in seasons of rapid growth, such as the current year. You will notice that the letter "B" always occurs on the section of the leafblade where it bends over. The marking is simply the result of the displacement of some chlorophyl in the leaf, largely because of the bending. The disturbance does not always take the form of a "B". Frequently it is in the form of an "8", either rounded or squared, or in many combinations of angular or rounded shapes. I fully expect that in Germany they are seeing occasional swastikas on the leaves.

So there you are folks, the mystery is cleared up. The letters or other markings do not have any significance other than indicating that the season has been somewhat out of the ordinary in the matter of growth. However, it does not do any harm at all for people to read into such occurrence a symbol of encouragement. The superstition attached to the findings of the letters was quite intriguing and interesting, and we hope Dr. McRostie's explanations hasn't spoiled the fun for a lot of people.—Oshawa Times.

ITALIANS BOMB ALEXANDRIA

Alexandria, Egypt, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Italian Savoia bombers raided Alexandria early this morning on a low-flying 90-minute attack with incendiary bombs which injured three Moslems.

Large batteries of British searchlights picked up the planes, and ground defences immediately went into action. The bombers were enveloped in a cloud of anti-aircraft fire and several were believed to have been damaged.

Earlier reports said one person was killed and five were wounded.

BRITISH BLAST PORTS ON LIBYAN COAST

Nazis Make Night 'Chain Raids' on London Area, Damage Slight

New Style Raids Employed For Nuisance Value

Latest Technique Uses Fewer Planes—500 Miles of Coast Raided

London, Aug. 27 (CP)—Heavy bomber blows which left Italian industrial plants shattered and smoking from the effects of tons of explosives were announced by Britain today, harassed herself by night-long German raids and fighting off new daylight air attacks.

The Fiat Airplane, Tank and Motor Work at Turin and the Magneto Marelli factory which makes electric equipment there, and Sesto San Giavanni, near Milan, were raided by Royal Air Force pilots who made the long double flight over France and the Alps with six tons of bombs, the Air Ministry announced.

For 40 minutes bombs rained on the Turin objectives, the Air Ministry said, setting strings of fires and bright blue and white explosions. Great clouds of white smoke were sent drifting upward to 6,000 feet at Sesto San Giovanni, a statement added.

Raids Against Germany Reported.

Air raids were also reported against Germany, where Berlin had a 40-minute night alarm.

These forays were reported as new flights of German bombers ranged Britain's coast in daylight attacks after a night of alarms which opened a new phase of an "around-the-clock" air war on Britain.

"Chain raiders" kept the London area awake for more than six hours last night and 500 miles of the English coast, from northeast to southwest, in an almost continual state of alarm. New waves moved over the southeast and southwest coasts after dawn.

Four Nazi Planes Down

They were met by British fighter pilots and tabulated reports today indicated that at least four German planes were shot down.

Why The Weather?

Rising air! All architects know that if windows in a room are to ventilate well they must reach as near the ceiling as possible. In an attic they must be near the gable, so that the warm air may get out. There must be doors or low windows near the floor to let cooler air in. The common expression is: "Warm air rises and cool air falls". This statement is in error as it imputes to hot air an inherent ability to rise. Air is a substance, and can only rise if forced to do so. What happens is this: two equal volumes of air, one hot and the other cold, exist side by side; gravity pulls upon the colder or heavier mass more than it does on the warmer or lighter, with the result that cold air descends and underruns the warmer mass of air, forcing it to rise.

Cudahy Convinced United States Must Become Military Nation

Los Angeles, Aug. 27 (AP)—The United States ambassador to Belgium, John Cudahy, believes that "it is a desperate fact, but an undeniable fact, that this country must, in a military world—whether we like it or not—become a military nation."

Cudahy told the Veterans of Foreign Wars National Encampment that the United States would not prepare for war but "to preserve peace and to fight for peace.

"We all know that public opinion would never tolerate an aggressive war," he continued, "just as we know the American people harbor no imperialistic designs—and like the people of Belgium ask only to be left in peace.

"The people of Belgium did not want war, did not expect it, yet war did come like a flash of lightning. You know the consequences."

National Commander Otis N. Brown told the encampment in his opening address that "you can't make a soldier merely by putting a gun in the hand of a boy wearing a uniform.

"We, the V. F. W. Service Men, have been clamoring for adoption of a universal service plan ever since we learned by personal experience that the job of winning a war is the job for trained fighting men.

"We must bring our national defence system up to date in the shortest possible time."

Mrs. Ida S. Cohen of Roxbury, Mass., National Auxiliary President called upon the wives of veterans to "work to convince those women who are signing petitions and otherwise affiliating themselves with so-called "peace front" groups that they are being misled."

Britain Exceeding Terms of Alliance Says Fascist Editor

Rome, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Virginio Gayda, the Fascist editor, claimed in Il Giornale D'Italia Monday that Great Britain is exceeding the terms of the Anglo-Egyptian Alliance by "invading and dominating territorial waters, ports, soil, cities and camps of Egypt to make them a single, formidable instrument of war against Italy".

"England cannot demand, and Egypt cannot allow", Gayda added, "pretended Egyptian neutrality and independence to become more and more every day a protective trench work for British preparations and unexpected aggressive naval, air and sea eruption against Italian territory in Africa and against Italy herself."

He declared Italy "has the right and duty to take all defensive measures which the rules of war may impose."

Urges Discharged Men Be Kept on Strength Until They Find Job

Calgary, Aug. 27 (CP)—George Petley, Alberta Secretary of the Canadian Legion, said last night he had received a letter from the Dominion President, Alex. Walker, of Calgary, revealing the latter is in Ottawa urging upon the Dominion government that members of the Canadian Active Service Force dismissed as medically unfit be kept on military strength until they obtain employment.

Mayor La Guardia, Spokesman for Board, Says Great Deal Accomplished at First Session

MEET AGAIN TODAY

Spokesman Admits Board Will be Permanent and Would Function as Long as Necessary

Ottawa, Aug. 27—(CP)—Determination that no foreign aggressor will obtain a foothold on the western hemisphere actuates the Canada-United States permanent joint defence board which resumed sittings here this morning, according to Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York, chairman of the American section.

The board, appointed by governments of the two countries to study mutual defence methods to ensure safety of North America, opened its deliberations here yesterday under the joint chairmanship of Col. O. M. Biggar, K.C., of Ottawa and Mayor La Guardia.

The United States chairman declared, in a press interview last night, that the problem, so far as his government was concerned, boiled down to whether or not strategic points in the western hemisphere were to be used as bases for offensive operations by potential enemies of his country, or as bases for defence of the western hemisphere.

Foreign Planes Violate Territory Swiss Charge

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 27—(AP)—The Swiss high command charged today that foreign warplanes had violated Swiss territory intentionally during the night.

In a dawn communique, it stated that the times the planes crossed Switzerland and their direction made it "perfectly clear" violation of Swiss territory was "intentional."

(Switzerland already has protested twice to Britain against the flight of her bombers over this neutral state.)

Two air alarms were sounded in various Swiss cities during the night and anti-aircraft batteries fired as planes crossed and recrossed the land.

The first signal came at 11.17 p.m. last night in Berne; another alarm was sounded at 12.50 a.m. in Berne and Geneva. The last all-clear signal was not given until 2.20 a.m.

Thirteen Ships Totalling 52,899 Tons Lost in Week Aug 18

London, Aug. 27—(CP)—Thirteen British, Allied and neutral merchant ships totalling 52,899 tons were sunk by the enemy during the week ending Aug. 18, the Admiralty announced today.

The Admiralty said: "The enemy claims to have sunk 151,711 tons, or nearly three times the actual reported losses" for the period.

The total tonnage lost was slightly above the weekly average for the previous 49 weeks since the beginning of the war, the Admiralty said.

Axis losses to Aug. 26 totalling approximately 1,187,000 tons, the Admiralty reported. German losses were 923,000 tons and Italian 264,000.

Neutral shipping seized by "the enemy" amounting to 32,000 tons also has been sunk, the Admiralty reported.

The German claim that a British destroyer of the Viscount class has been sunk was authoritatively denied.

Costs Sixpence to See Air Raid Money Goes to Buy Spitfires

London, Aug. 27—(CP)—It costs sixpence (about 11 cents) to watch an air raid in Wembley, site of one of Britain's biggest football stadiums.

Air precaution wardens urge spectators to take cover when a warning sounds, and then take up a sixpence collection from those who prefer to watch.

The money goes to buy Spitfire fighting planes.

Britons also are turning German raids to account in these ways:

Nazi planes which have been shot down are placed on exhibition to raise defence funds.

Women are using the hours they spend in air raid shelters to knit "comforts" for service men.

In Chatham, air raid wardens are growing winter cabbage atop their lookout post in an earthworks barricade.

Bloody Border Clash Between Rumanian and Soviet Troops Reported

Foreign Military Attachè at Bucharest Estimates More Than 300 Soldiers Killed and Loss of at Least Two Fighting Planes—Fighting Believed to Have Taken Place in Northern Moldavia

Budapest, Aug. 27 (AP)—Diplomatic dispatches from Bucharest today reported a bloody border clash between Rumanian and Russian troops, resulting in hundreds of dead on both sides and the loss of of at least two fighting planes.

The fighting, which the dispatches said occurred just north of Dorohol, in northern Moldavia, was reported to have started last Sunday and lasted several hours. It was resumed yesterday.

A foreign military attache at Bucharest who wrote the dispatches estimated that more than 300 soldiers were slain.

Just two months ago Rumania bowed to a Russian ultimatum. Agreeing to cede to the Soviet Union Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina.

As the Russians marched in early in July to take over their gains there were clashes between the retiring Rumanians and Soviet troops.

Dorohoi is close to the new border formed by the Bessarabia and Bucovina cessions.

The fighting was said to have occurred when Soviet troops crossed the border into Rumania. They were understood to have penetrated deeply before being forced back. The clash was said to have involved Rumanian troops being sent to Transylvania.

Four Russian warplanes which flew over Rumanian territory were attacked by six Rumanian pursuit ships, two of which were shot down, These sources said.

Commander of Submarine Brings Boat Home to Britain With Periscopes Shot Away

A Scottish Port, Aug. 11—(Delayed by censor)—(CP)—Tall, bearded Commander Ben Bryan of the submarine Sealion told today how an enemy merchant ship rammed his vessel just outside a German naval base, ripping away the deck-rails and tearing both periscopes loose.

The dented and damaged Sealion came home Aug. 10 after a blind trip across the North Sea with the wreckage of the periscopes lashed to her deck.

Commander Bryan said that at the start of his North Sea patrol he sank the only German vessel he could find—a 3,300-ton storeship, and then ventured close to the German base.

There the Sealion came among the ships of a German convoy and spent an exciting hour stalking the game.

Two prospective victims shifted course in time to escape. One turned directly toward the Sealion at close quarters.

"There was a grinding shock overhead," said the commander, "and we realized she had struck our periscopes. This grinding noise was followed by depth charges. Plunging to the bottom, the Sealion lay silent until the immediate danger passed."

Then on two successive nights the submarine cautiously came to the surface and made temporary repairs, going back to the bottom in the daytime. Finally, in shape to travel, though without her "eyes," the submarine escaped German waters and came home.

The Sealion, completed in December, 1934, is a 670-ton vessel with a normal crew of 40.

Canadians to Take Prominent Part in Army of Attack When Britain Goes on the Offensive

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 27—(CP Cable)—When the Empire opens its big offensive push against Germany and Italy, it is authoritatively stated, Canada's overseas forces may be expected to shed their present role of defenders of the United Kingdom for a prominent place in the army of attack.

Where the offensive blow may fall or when it will be launched will be decided by developments, but Prime Minister Churchill has said that the military machine is being built with a view to transforming Britain's defensive war into one of offence in 1941 and 1942.

A high official who discussed long range strategy paid the Canadians the compliment of classing them among the "best trained and best equipped troops we have to hurl against the axis." He pointed out that they crossed the Atlantic for service in France and that the vanguard of Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton's men already had landed in that country when France collapsed before the Nazi juggernaut.

In the present phase the Canadian 1st Division under Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes and other Canadians in the corps of Dominion and British troops commanded by Gen. McNaughton are filling an important role in the army now defending the British Isles.

However, if Hitler's air offensive fails to knock Britain to her granite knees—and officials are ultraconfident it must fail—the axis powers are expected to try a military adventure in another direction. It must be realized that the collapse of air attacks will not mean the end of the war but only the end of one phase of the war.

While probing into the future cannot be more than conjecture at present, the possibility is foreseen of Hitler striking at Gibraltar through Spain in an effort to slam that doorway to the Mediterranean. While Gen. Francisco Franco and the Spanish army are understood to be opposed to any German orientation, Spain's Fascist Palangists are strong for it.

It is possible that Italy's feints toward Greece may be a cloak for a thrust in some other direction. For instance, Mussolini could be preparing a push on Egypt, where a military reverse to Britain would strain the fabric of the eastern sector of the Empire.

Clarksville, Tenn., Aug. 27 (C.P.)—A Negro was brought before Judge Ridley R. Goodpasture on a charge of stealing a watermelon from a patch. Two dollars and costs for trespassing."

IMPROMPTU CONCERTS

Audiences Stay on After Show is Over—'More Like New Year's Party Than Raid'

Press Staff Writer).

London, Aug. 27 (AP)—Robbed of their sleep by nocturnal Nazi bombers, thousands of Londoners danced and sang until almost dawn today, ignoring intermittent sounds of gunfire and the drone of airplane motors overhead.

The air raid alarm came as homebodies were retiring and as West End theatres were thronged with amusement seekers. When the German bombers kept sweeping over in relays and the all-clear signal failed to sound, many decided to make a night of it.

In most theatres the audiences stayed on when the shows were over and responded with zest to stage managers' suggestions for impromptu concerts.

Adrift in Ocean 6 Days, 25 Men in Lifeboat are Rescued

Twelve of Men Rescued for Second Time from Torpedoed Vessel

LAND AT GALWAY

London, Aug. 27—(CP)—Rescued at sea after being adrift in a lifeboat for six days in the North Atlantic, 23 survivors of a torpedoed vessel were landed yesterday at Galway, Ireland.

Seventeen of the men were British sailors. The remainder were other Europeans. They were picked up by the Norwegian vessel Varegg.

For 12 of the 25 it was the second escape from death in a torpedoing in the Atlantic. One of them was the second wireless operator aboard the Montreal-bound liner Athenia which was sunk on Sept. 3, the first day of the war.

The men were at sea in a lifeboat last week from Monday to Saturday. An officer said the lifeboat had in tow a raft with 30 men but was forced to cut it loose. The name of their vessel was not given.

Libyan War Ports Bombarded, Heavy Blow for Italians

British Penetrate Bardia and Fire 'At Point Blank Range'

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 27—(AP)—Britis hnaval blows against Bardia and Bomba in Italian Libya were reported today to have inflicted a severe setback on Italy's North African forces.

The navy announced that its forces Aug. 24, for the second time within a week, had "successfully bombarded" both Libyan war ports, making the Bardia attack "at point blank range." Full details have not been disclosed, however.

Many observers here believe Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, the Italian Commander, will be forced to start a drive against Egypt soon despite any reverses because, they say, constant British air and sea bombardments, with consequent disorganization of war preparations, cannot be withstood indefinitely.

Graziani Concentrates on Capuzzo

Apparently pre-occupied with preparations on the western desert, these sources said, the Italians let the British units move into the heart of the port of Bardia and blast away at military objectives virtually unmolested.

Graziani, they said, is known to have concentrated on re-garrisoning bomb-blasted Fort Capuzzo as a possible front line base but, apparently, at the cost of leaving his rearguard unprotected.

A naval communique issued early Tuesday said:

"During the night of Aug. 23-24 our naval forces attacked the Italian harbor at Bardia, where there were troops concentrations, and the seaplane base at Bomba (also on the Libyan coast.)

"Both places were successfully bombarded and at Bardia our forces penetrated into the harbor and engaged targets at point blank range.

"Our ships suffered no casualties."

Naval Anti-Aircraft Guns Cause Heavy Loss to Hun Planes

London, Aug. 27 (CP)—The Admiralty stated today that naval anti-aircraft had accounted for 122 German planes up to August 12, and that an additional 64 probably had been destroyed and 45 damaged. The fleet air arm shot down an additional 28 planes and damage 25 others, many of which "can be considered lost," the Admiralty said.

EGYPT'S CABINET RE-FORMED BY PREMIER HASSAN

Cabinet Crisis Faced Two Months After Government Formed

BRITAIN PLEDGES AID

Cairo, Aug. 27—(AP)—Egypt's political situation was confused today when Premier Hassan Sabry Pasha announced that his cabinet was holding office despite an earlier announcement that it had resigned.

"There is no change," the Premier declared. "The cabinet has not resigned. I did not go to the palace in that connection and I have told the press not to anticipate events."

Earlier it had been said that his cabinet, after less than two months in office, had submitted its resignation and that the Premier had begun immediately to form a new cabinet at the request of King Farouk.

The Premier's statement mystified political circles, but informed sources expressed belief that difficulties within the cabinet probably had been quickly patched up and the resignation withdrawn.

Yesterday Britain and Egypt exchanged new pledges of good-will as the two nations observed the fourth anniversary of their 20-year treaty of alliance.

In a broadcast address, Hafez Afifi Pasha, former Ambassador to London and one of the signers of the 1936 pact, declared that if it were not for Britain's help Egypt "would already have been invaded by Italy or some other power."

He told his countrymen it would be a great mistake to believe that if Italy attacked Egypt it would be because of the presence of British troops in the country.

"For years Italy has planned offensive measures against Egypt," he said. "She has massed in Libya a great army for which there is no normal need. She has sent poor families to Tripoli, ostensibly as settlers but in reality as the nucleus of an armed force.

Wishes to Restore Empire

"Italy wishes to restore the ancient Roman Empire. She cannot be trusted and her promises are merely intended to lull us into a false sense of security."

Sir Miles Lampson, British Ambassador, also addressed the Egyptian people by radio, reaffirming British friendship and declaring that Britain soon would launch "a great counter-offensive" to smash Nazism and Fascism and "liberate the tortured inhabitants" of countries now in their grasp.

For the moment, he said, Britain was compelled by the defeat of France to stand on the defensive, but he added:—

"We are still marshalling behind the protective screen of our naval supremacy and vast resources of our empire in men and materials.

"When the moment comes—and it is not far away—we shall launch our great counter-offensive."

POLICE ARE BUSY REGISTERING FIRE ARMS

With citizens responding valiantly to the request of the Dominion Government regarding the registration of rifles, shot guns and other small fire arms, local and city police have devoted practically all of their time to this registration thus far this week.

"For the greater part we find that persons in possession of rifles and shot guns use them only for hunting purposes, while small arms are souvenirs," revealed Chief Kidd today as citizens continued to appear at the police station seeking registration cards for their personally owned fire arms.

However, Inspector Frank Gardner, of the Provincial Police district headquarters stationed here, today revealed the Dominion Government has passed an order-in-council increasing penalties for non-registration of rifles and shotguns. The order, published in the current edition of the Canada Gazette, imposes a penalty of $500 fine or two years' imprisonment, or both, for cases of conviction on indictment. This penalty is in addition to one previously imposed of $50 fine or 30 days, or both, in cases on summary conviction.

Registration of rifles and shotguns is being carried on in Canada at present and all such firearms must be registered by Sept. 15.

OPENINGS IN NAVY FOR YOUNG MEN

Canadian youths desirous of joining the navy, with the object in view of obtaining advancement in this field, may communicate with the commanding officer of the R.C.N.V.R. barracks at Kingston this week.

The qualifications required are suggested as sailing experience on craft larger than dinghys, age between 25 and 45 years, education senior matriculation or university, and of good health.

"These qualifications only pertain to Canadian youths seeking advancement or commissions in the navy, but communication should be made to the commanding officer in Kingston this week by those interested," revealed Mr. Jeffs, who is now employed as a mail carrier in Belleville, but who still takes a marked interest in his beloved navy.

INSTRUCTOR GIVEN HANDSOME BILLFOLD

The Belleville Collegiate Institute Machine Shop was the scene of an impromptu presentation last evening after shop hours when the outgoing members of the machine shop class presented their instructor, Mr. G. A. Ferguson with a handsome billfold. Mr. Ferguson responded very fittingly to the thoughtful gift of the students, who had been under his instruction for the past two months under a national scheme of Federal Government fitting these young men for industrial positions.

Several of the students left their classes this morning to take positions with an industrial company a short distance from Belleville, but the remainder of the class will continue for the balance of the week.

Expect Hundreds Of Arrests in Lottery Probe

Philadelphia, Aug. 27—(AP)—Investigation of a huge lottery centred in Philadelphia, spread today to half dozen eastern states and State Police Commissioner Lynn G. Adams predicted that "there probably will be 500 or 600 arrests."

City detectives and State Police in two raids yesterday arrested seven men and seized a large number of lottery tickets, printing and binding machinery and paper stock.

Magistrate Edward Williams held the men in $3,500 bail for further hearing Sept. 4. Detectives sought two others named as "higher ups."

Assistant City Solicitor James Francis Ryan said the tickets were distributed from Philadelphia to nearby states and sold for 25 and 50 cents. The "payoff" he said, ranged as high as $500 daily with a special weekly prize of $2,500.

Adams described the raids as the end of an 18-months "long, long chase of the biggest lottery in the United States."

Opera Stars are Mostly Foreign Because of Better Opportunities N. Y. Teacher Tells Rotarians

Edgar Schofield Gives Interesting Address to Clubmen at Country Club—Is Versatile Entertainer

JACK DEACON SINGS

The answer to the question, "Why are the majority of operatic singers either foreign born or of foreign extraction," that has long puzzled lovers of music in particular and a great number of people in general, was satisfactorily answered yesterday when Mr. Edgar Schofield, of New York City internationally known singing instructor, and intimate friend of great opera stars, gave Belleville Rotarians a fine word-picture of the origin and progress of vocal music since its inception in the 15th century.

Mr. Schofield, not only proved to be a speaker of ability, but demonstrated his versatility as a raconteur and impersonator with a number of humorous skits and stories. His imitation of the famous negro comedian, "Bert Williams, and stories in Scottish and Yorkshire dialect" practically brought down the house.

The speaker paid sterling tribute to Mr. Jack Deacon, former pupil, who studied with him in New York for a period of four years. "Edward Johnson, Metropolitan Opera impresario," Mr. Schofield said, "considered Mr. Deacon's voice superior to that of the great Tito Schipa."

The Italians were the first to develop a real aria or melody for voice, Mr. Schofield said. This occurred in the 15th century and previous to this vocal music consisted of canticles. Their composers produced a higher form of music and originated schools for voice. This instruction usually lasted seven years and only a few pupils were chosen.

Neglect Art

Countries like the U.S.A. and Canada are tremendously rich, he pointed out, and people devote all their energies to national resources and neglect art to a certain degree. England is essentially an oratorio country and not interested in opera. For all this Canada has developed some splendid opera stars. Mr. Schofield said, quoting Edward Johnson, for four years leading tenor at Milan, Italy. Another was Louisa Edvina. The present sensation in N.Y. singing circles, he said, was a Canadian, Miss Jean Watson, formerly known as Jean MacLaughlin. She is achieving great success and scored a tremendous triumph in the recent New York Bach Festival.

One of the most important reasons, the majority of opera stars are foreign-born, the speaker said, was because Latin countries and Germany have special opera seasons of their own. Some of them are short, it is true, but they afford young singers an opportunity to appear and sing on the stage. These opera companies are operated along the same lines as American baseball leagues. Singers start in low grade companies and as they improve are promoted to the better class of singers.

American and Canadian singers have not had the theatres to grow up in, Mr. Schofield declared. The Metropolitan Opera in New York and a few smaller houses in other cities are the only theatres available. This continent is not opera-minded, he added, and young singers not having a workshop to work in, are obliged to go abroad.

Progress Made

However, remarkable progress has been made in the past few years and today 60% of the 150 singers on the roster of the Metropolitan are of Anglo-Saxon origin. This is due to the excellent management on the part of Edward Johnson of the Metropolitan Opera and a further tribute to the ability of English-speaking singers.

"The present world chaos and struggle is indirectly presenting an opportunity to American and Canadian singers, as they have never had before," he continued. "Foreign singers cannot come to America, because of the war, and our youngsters are taking advantage of the fact."

He described the meteoric triumph of Laurence Tibbet, famous operatic baritone who swept into fame overnight after playing an obscure part in "Falstaff" with Antonio Scotti in the title role. The reaction of the audience to the young baritone was terrific, he said, and for the first time in the history of the Metropolitan, the curtain was raised to allow the singer to acknowledge his ovations.

"It was that psychological moment that comes to nearly all of us at some time or other," he said, "and Tibbett showed he was ready for it. He has made more money with his voice than any other singer in the world."

A highlight of the luncheon, held at the Bay of Quinte Country Club, was the vocal offerings of Jack Deacon. The popular Belleville tenor was heard in two numbers, the accompaniment for which was played by his talented wife. Mr. Deacon, incidentally, introduced the speaker while club appreciation was expressed by Rotarian Charles Dolan. Mr. Dolan, by the way, a bridegroom of eleven days, received an ovation from his fellow-clubmen upon his return from his honeymoon, while Fred Deacon, Jr., celebrated the arrival of a young Deacon at his home recently with the presentation to members of choice cigars.

President Percy McGuire was in the chair, with Rotarians Jack Hartwick and "Sandy" Burrows acting as sergeant-at-arms and song-leader respectively.

CATTLE SHEDS ALREADY FILLED

Part of Midway Already Located at Fair Grounds for Annual Exhibition

With entries in all divisions of livestock taxing accommodations to fullest capacity, the 1940 edition of the Belleville and District Fair which opens for three days on Thursday, August 29th, will provide for its patrons the largest number of cattle, horses, poultry and swine in the history of the Belleville Agricultural Society.

New cattle sheds, erected this year to accommodate overflow entries are already filled, according to Secretary Arthur Burke, and arrangements are now under way to take care of surplus stock. Horse entries are exceptionally fine, as are all other phases of livestock.

The Fair will be officially opened at 2 p.m. Daylight Saving Time on Thursday by His Worship Mayor Glen Thompson of Belleville, who will be assisted by Warden John L. Churcher of Hastings County and Warden James H. Rutter, Prince Edward County.

Committee officials effectively spiked rumors that have been prevalent in the city during the past few days to the effect there will be no midway attraction at the Fair. This was denied by officials today who pointed to the fact that the midway is already here in part and will be here in its entirety tomorrow in readiness for opening day. Vaudeville entertainment of the highest calibre obtainable will be in front of the grandstand every afternoon and evening of the three-day exhibition.

Another feature of the Fair will be the giving away on Friday and Saturday nights respectively, of two motor vehicles to persons holding lucky admission tickets. Winners will have the option of selecting an automobile or a farm tractor. Draws will be made at an hour to be announced later.

Thoroughbred running horses from Eastern Canada will entertain lovers of this form of racing during the afternoons. Three heats will comprise a race.

All-in-all the Fair promises to be one that will uphold the traditions of the Agricultural Society.

Police Blotter

With the registration of all types of fire arms at its peak, local police authorities have been busied making out registration cards, leaving exceedingly little time for the detection of crime. However, crime has been at a low ebb in Belleville during the past few days giving the authorities plenty of time to devote to the registration of arms.

Matthew Corby, Belleville, reported the theft of his bicycle to the police yesterday after he had been apprehended on a minor charge preferred under the L.C.A. It was while he was held temporarily in custody on Sunday that his bicycle was stolen from its accustomed parking position. Corby informed the police. Efforts to locate the bike were promised, in the meantime Corby is being held pending trial.

There has been a marked decrease in the number of transients seeking shelter at the police station since the recent national registration in Canada, police authorities readily agreed after surveying their transient register today. Only five such persons were given shelter at the police station thus far this week.

Driveshed, Several Radios Destroyed by Fire Saturday

Fire Alleged to Have Started from Sparks from a Bon Fire

OTHER ITEMS

Picton, Aug. 27 (Special)—A driveshed, two stacks of hay and a henhouse on the farm of Mrs. S. B. Denike, at Cressy, were destroyed by fire late Saturday afternoon. In the driveshed were several radios which Geoffrey Denike had been repairing.

The fire is alleged to have been caused by sparks from a bonfire where weeds were being burned. Due to the lack of fire-fighting equipment it was impossible to prevent the spread of the flames, but volunteer fire-fighters were able to save the house nearby. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

OBITUARY

MRS. ANNIE M. HADLEY (Frankford)

Frankford, August 27 (Special)—After an illness of one and a half years' duration, Mrs. Annie Maude Hadley, widow of Solomon Hadley, passed away at her residence in Frankford on Sunday afternoon, August 25th.

The late Mrs. Hadley, who was in her 67th. year, was born in Frankford, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob N. Anderson. All her life was passed in the village where she was born and in the community she was held in high regard. In religion she was a member of the United Church in Frankford and when health permitted she took an active part in church work, being a member of the Women's Missionary Society and the Woman's Auxiliary. By many friends she will be much missed.

Surviving her are four daughters, Mrs. Harold Noble, Rochester, N.Y.; Mrs. James Phaff, Rochester, N.Y.; Mrs Clayton Kemp, Frankford, and Miss Ruby Hadley of Frankford; three sons, Mr. Roy V. Hadley, Norwood; Mr. Harold Hadley, Frankford, and Mr. Keith G. Hadley, Trenton; one sister, Mrs. P. R. Harnish, Rochester, N.Y., and one brother, Mr. Everett Anderson, Detroit, Mich.

The funeral took place this Tuesday afternoon August 27th., to the United Church in Frankford, where an impressive service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. J. F. Lane. Interment was made in Frankford cemetery.

JOHN MARTIN McCREERY

John Martin McCreery passed away suddenly at the family residence, 259 George Street on Monday evening, August 26th.

The late Mr. McCreery was a resident in this city, by his pleasing personality and friendly manner, he made many friends to whom his sudden passing has brought sincere feelings of regret.

John Martin McCreery was born 58 years ago in Glencoe, Ontario, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. S. J. McCreery. For many years he was a prominent resident of Cranbrooke, B.C., where he was engaged in business and upon retiring he came to make his home in Belleville. In religion he was a member of the Presbyterian church.

LATE MISS LILLIAN FISH

The committal service for the late Miss Lillian Fish, a former resident of Belleville, who died in Rochester, N.Y., recently will be conducted at the Belleville Cemetery on Wednesday morning, August 28th., at 10 o'clock.

The late Miss Fish was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Fish of Belleville, and sister of Mrs. Edna MacAllister of Rochester, N.Y.

Ignition Keys Of Police Car Wrapped in Parcel

It's a good thing there were no emergency police calls at the Belleville police station early last evening. If there had been police authorities would have had to seek emergency ignition keys before using the city police cruiser, simply because the ignition keys of the police car were neatly wrapped into a bundle, that contained Raymond Zufelt's hunting rifle.

It all happened quite innocently. Mr. Zufelt appeared at the police station to register his hunting guns, as provided by the recent Dominion Government order-in-council. After registering his fire arms Mr. Zufelt carefully wrapped his hunting weapons inside a heavy paper wrapping and departed for his home quite satisfied, that he had complied with the law.

Later city police observed that the ignition keys of the police cruiser were not in their accustomed place reposing upon the sergeant's desk, which is also used to rest fire arms, while they are being registered. A quick search of the premises revealed the keys were not at the police station, although an emergency set was available in Chief Kidd's office.

Sensing that some innocent citizen might have accidentally swept the keys off the desk along with their fire arms when leaving, the police referred back to the list of those who had registered their fire arms during the past hour and after calling two others, finally located Mr. Zufelt, who much to his own surprise found the keys of the police car wrapped neatly in the package, that contained his rifles.

As is usually the case with such stories—the keys were returned, a few scarlet faces seen and everything ended without further incident.

INCREASED BUYING LIFTS MEAT PRICE

Beef Prices in Chicago Highest in Three Years and Hog Prices in Almost a Year

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP)—The United States housewife's increased buying of beef and pork has helped to lift the farm price of cattle to the highest level in three years and of hogs to the highest in almost a year.

Livestock men said that business stimulation and employment resulting from the National Defence program apparently were improving the meat consumer's buying power. They cited army manoeuvres in various sections of the country as a factor in improved consumption.

Housewives are paying more for most meat cuts than they did a year ago. Retail prices here last week on the whole were the highest of the year. Wholesale pork loins have advanced to 23 cents a pound, highest since last September. Top loins of beef were quoted around 35 cents a pound wholesale, 25 per cent higher than a year ago.

Yesterday's 25 to 50 cents advance brought the average price of killing steers in Chicago to around $11 a hundredweight, highest since the fall of 1937. The extreme top paid for choice cattle was $12.90. Around $13 was paid earlier in the year but this was for specialty cattle which sold far above the market for ordinary beef. The average weekly price of choice and prime steers is now around $12, highest since April, 1939. In 1939 this peak soared to $18.

Searchlights Dog German Raiders Keeping Them off

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 27—(CP)— From a roof-top I watched London's longest air raid of the war today, heard the distant dull thud of exploding bombs and saw the vast fireworks display in the skies of the Empire capital which spelled death for Nazi airmen, and death for the victims of their bombs.

Scores of searchlights sent long probing beams into the blackness, sometimes concentrating at one spot, at other times converging at separate points.

Five hours after the sirens had screamed for the third time in the day the peculiar crescendo note of a German plane was still audible overhead at intervals.

Once in a while there was the sullen crunch of a far-off bomb, then the brilliant flashes of the "ack-ack" guns, the dancing white ribbons of the searchlights — then silent darkness again enveloping the great city.

It seemed as if the anti-aircraft guns were giving the visitors the heaviest barrage they had yet offered Nazi raiders.

The searchlights dogged the planes. I saw them creep after one, catch it apparently beyond the suburbs and saw a bright flash. There was the thud of a bomb falling.

Then the ribbons of light faded, only to spring to life again as soon as another plane was heard.

There seemed to be less than a dozen planes—and they came individually, sweeping in a great circular tour of the city.

By 3 a.m. more than five hours after sirens shrilled the first alarm, the raids appeared to taper off.

From the roof-top the centre of London looked dead black. There was a drone of motors to the west, and a strong concentration of searchlights flicked on. The noise faded, and the lights snapped off after groping dumbly for several minutes.

In the gloom near the embankment there was the periodic clatter of a night-prowling streetcar.

ROBT. E. SHERWOOD ASSAILS NAZIS

Robert Emmet Sherwood, U. S. playwright, in his Sunday evening address broadcast over the CBC in the series "Let's Face the Facts," spoke of the tremendous threat under which the world lives today and urged "we must be prepared, everyone of us, to fight it, to the death . . . and we can be confident of victory. Our common tradition of freedom has been tested on a thousand battlefields from Waterloo to Gettysburg. It is now meeting its supreme test on the white cliffs of Dover.

"It will survive because it is essentially true and therefore indomitably strong.

"It is founded on the conviction by which humanity itself can survive—the conviction that there is divinity in man—there is honor in man—there is genius in man—there is the capacity for wisdom, for tolerance, for beauty, for love, and above all, for creation.

"We know that these qualities are inconquerable. That is the knowledge that made us free. That is the faith that the dive-bombers and tanks can never destroy."

Here spoke a citizen of the United States who saw service in the First Great War with the 42nd Highlanders of Montreal when he was rejected for enlistment in the U. S. forces. He is one who is a complete expression of the democratic spirit.

The boasted totalitarianism of Hitler's state he ridiculed when he said, "A state is not efficient in which, for every hundred workers, there must be forty policemen to see that the hundred workers don't slack and twenty storm troopers to watch the policemen and a dozen secret agents to watch the watchers."

Democratic opposition to the nazi ideal could not be better expressed than in the words of Robert Sherwood, that "the nazi ideal of government can succeed if men consent to abandon their humanity and accept the status of beasts. But it is impossible for men born and bred in the British tradition to do this. It is impossible for Americans. We all share this common tradition. The generations behind us have shared it since Magna Charta, more than seven hundred years ago."

Mr. Sherwood expresses the viewpoint of all that democratic world which is against the ideals of nazism.

EVIDENCES OF HUN BRUTALITY

Evidences have not been wanting of the ruthlessness of the enemy. Monday's paper told of instances which have been brought to light of wanton bombing and machine-gunning of children playing on a beach, and of the destruction of a creamery in Southeast Ireland in Eire by a German bomber as a result of which three girls lost their lives and one was injured.

The ruthless air raids over Britain resulting in deaths of civilians in centres where there are no military objectives are further evidence of the brutal and inhuman spirit which inhabits the nazis.

Against this can be shown the British code of honor which will direct men out in boats into places of grave danger for the purpose of rescuing enemy fliers from the waters of the channel when their planes have crashed into the sea.

On the British side is a high code of honor which shows generosity in war to a foe. On the nazi side are destructiveness and wantonness so that even innocent children at their games are not safe from the enemy planes.

The British code of honor is that which means survival, the nazi code means death to itself for it cannot survive as it is opposed to every high principle which is essential to organized society.

MILTON'S GRAVE AND HITLER'S BOMB

The grave of John Milton, one of the champions of British liberty in the 17th century and the author of "Paradise Lost," one of the greatest poems in world literature, was mentioned in news from England this week when a German bomb struck the Church of St. Giles, outside which there is a statue of Milton, the blind poet, and inside which is his grave covered with stone slabs. The grave escaped damage in the Saturday night raids on "the city" of London. The church was not so fortunate for a bomb blew a hole in the western wall of the church and shattered most of the windows.

Milton in his day figured in stormy events. It was he who wrote Areopagitica, a vindication of the freedom of the press which brought him great prominence as a man of letters. Deep in the political life of the England of his day he espoused the popular side. At times he was in real danger. One of his works was ordered burned by the public hangman and order was given for his arrest. Though he found a hiding place he was discovered and taken prisoner but The Act of Indemnity put an end to these troubles. He was living in the sixties of the seventeenth century at Chalfont St. Giles in a cottage which is believed to be still standing. In 1658 he had begun at the age of fifty the work 'Paradise Lost' which had long been in his mind and it was finished in five years. For this on its publication seven years later in 1670 he received ten pounds and his widow subsequently received eight pounds.

This austere Puritan ranks high among English poets, second only to Shakespeare in the opinion of many.

Buried at St. Giles Cripplegate, Milton still speaks to the world. Wordsworth spoke of him as of the race of those "who the faith and morals hold that Milton held." In this day of totalitarianism, nazism and fascism, Milton represents a rebuke to the spirit of evil which is represented in these forces of destruction, nazism, fascism and totalarianism. The contrast between Milton's principles of liberty and Hitler's nazism is all the difference between light and darkness, and between good and evil. The influence of Milton lingers in the British race and helps to inspire the people of this day in their struggle against the mad, selfish and brutal ideals of nazism and fascism.

Glorious Story of Squadron Of Planes Which Fought in Norway Against Great Odds

London, Eng., — At last can be revealed the tragic but glorious story of an R.A.F. squadron of gladiators, meeting vastly superior numbers of enemy airmen, and fighting on in Narvik until hardly a man survived while every machine was lost.

For nine days this squadron's magnificent pilots were almost continually in the air, and in that time shot down 25 enemy aircraft. Another five enemy machines were peppered so badly that it is doubtful whether any of them could ever take the air again.

The odds against them were always heavy, and the weather was atrocious, with low clouds hiding the dangerous mountain terrain and intense cold.

It was from the ill-fated aircraft carrier Glorious that these pilots operated, the Gladiator type being adapted for taking off from her decks. None of the pilots had any experience of working from an aircraft carrier, none knew the rugged country over which they put up such a heroic fight.

Rammed the Enemy

Almost the first casualty was when one pilot crashed into a mountain in rugged country. A missing Gladiator was found wrecked with a Heinkel near it. The R.A.F. pilot had apparently rammed his opponent against the mountainside.

Outnumbered

There were only sixteen gladiators attached to the Glorious, and rarely were more than two of them in the air at one time. Five days after the arrival in Norway only nine of the 16 were serviceable, and another four went out of service the next day. That shows the toll taken by the continuous operations against the enemy. On some days there were 40 or more sorties against the enemy, and on one day there were 55.

The remaining five had the task of facing whatever forces the Germans could muster against them. One crashed in taking off from a sodden airfield, and two were bogged.

The other two cleared the air of enemy machines. One flight lieutenant shot down two out of three Junkers troop carriers and badly damaged the third. He afterwards chased a group of Heinkels, shot down two in flames and put the others to flight.

Cleared the Way

After this sweeping feat, German machines kept away for seven hours, in which time 3,000 British troops were evacuated from Rognan to Fauske. Disaster might have come with enemy aircraft about.

But that disaster was averted by the heroism of the R.A.F. men. The remaining two pilots remained in the air on that fateful May 27, when the British troops stood is as great a peril as their comrades of the B.E.F. later did at Dunkirk of finding their efforts to embark menaced by Nazi airmen.

The two remaining R.A.F. pilots kept in the air until dawn next day, landing only for refuelling and getting more ammunition. The Norwegians had made the sodden ground stable with snow shields. A dozen enemy aircraft tried to make the landing ground untenable by violent machine gunning. Three men on the ground operated two Lewis guns until the Germans had been driven off by the ground fire and attacks by the two R.A.F. men above.

Fourteen to Two

That morning one of the R.A.F. men, aided by a naval plane from the fleet air arm attacked between 10 and 14 Junkers bombers and Messerschmitt 110's stopping them dive-bombing toward a jetty. One German crashed and sank. One of our machines was hit and the pilot was wounded. He managed to make a crash landing in the hills. The other pilot had beaten off an attack by the rest of the enemy, and although he was wounded and his machine damaged he made a safe landing with his Gladiator.

Host of Enemy Planes

As the time for evacuating Narvik itself approached, the Germans sent over hosts of aircraft. Four Gladiators went up to face the odds. They shot down six Heinkels and a Junkers, while two more Junkers crashed and were certainly lost, although officially not credited to the squadron.

Those airmen of the Gladiator squadron who did not fall in battle or perish under the bitter Arctic conditions were doomed with their remaining battered aircraft which kept the air in such incredible conditions. After the last of the troops were evacuated from Narvik, the machines were taken aboard the Glorious, which shortly afterwards was sunk.

Refresher Course

(Hamilton Spectator)

Advanced at first more as a theory of social salvage than an as economic process, the refresher courses in mechanics which were inaugurated this summer in the larger vocational schools of Ontario have fully justified themselves and proved to be aids to industry and to the men concerned.

To choose but one centre, forty men have been given employment as a result of the "brushing up" they received in the refresher courses, while 110 others are said to have been given a new lease of life by reason of their latent skill being revived and their efficiency restored. Most important of all, they have recovered their self-confidence and will be able to perform the tasks for which they are best fitted. Equally gratifying results have attended similar efforts in other cities.

Unfortunately, when vocational schools open for regular classes in September, it may be necessary to discontinue these refresher courses. Officials believe that if the courses could continue for another month or two many more men would be able to take advantage of the sympathetic instruction which has been instrumental in reawakening the skill of middle-aged and elderly mechanics who were unemployed for long periods.

Industry is reported generally to have been wholeheartedly behind the plan, and proof of its success is found in the fact that many repeat calls for men have been received. In other instances industrialists were so impressed with the thoroughness of the training given that they had some of their regular employees attend the courses for special instruction. A number of students also were given practical training in pattern and foundry work, welding and general machine-shop operations.

The Dominion-Provincial Emergency War Training Course, as the plan is officially known, has been praised as being one of the most effective contributions to meet the demand, under war pressure, for skilled labour. A shortage of such labour still exists, and observers predict that it will grow more acute, if anything. In view of that, it will be a pity if the courses are discontinued, especially if another two or three months would result in many more men being trained.

NEW AIR RAID PRECAUTION TAKEN

Saint John, N.B., Aug. 27—(AP)—New air raid precaution regulations were announced today by Mayor D. L. MacLaren, A.R.P. Director for this district, with the approval of Brigadier G. G. Anglin, Officer Commanding Military District No. 7.

Heavy penalties are provided for violations.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

No Laxatives, Early Operation Treatment For Acute Appendicitis

There are still a large number who disregard any pain in the right lower part of the abdomen. In most cases as the pain is due to gas or to a spasm which passes away within a few minutes to an hour, it is not surprising that when the pain remains longer than an hour in most cases it is still considered as due to gas or spasm. Even when the pain is directly over the appendix, McBurney's point as it is called, it may not be due to appendicitis.

As most pains in this region are due to gas or to something eaten, the first thought is to "drive" the gas or irritating substance through the intestine and out of the body by means of purgatives. In its efforts to drive wastes out of the intestine, a purgative greatly increases the movement of the walls of the intestine. If the appendix is inflamed, these movements may cause further inflammation and perhaps rupture of the appendix. Some idea of how dangerous purgatives or laxatives can be in appendicitis was shown in the survey made by the Medical Society of Philadelphia. The survey showed that in cases where a laxative had been given, 7 percent of the patients died, but where no laxative had been given only 2 percent died. That is, when a laxative was given one patient out of 14 died, but when there had been no laxative, 1 out of 46 died. When only one dose of laxative or purgative had been given 1 in 17 died, but when more than one dose had been given one in five died.

What then should be done when a severe pain occurs in the lower right side of abdomen?

Dr. Harold B. Wood in Hygeia some weeks ago advised that the patient should lie down, preferably on his back. No laxative or cathartic should be given by mouth. Most physician advise against the use of an enema but Dr. Wood states that where there is good reason to believe that the intestine must be emptied a small enema—a pint of warm water containing a teaspoonful of table salt—may be given slowly. If pain continues for over an hour a physician should be called. In the Philadelphia survey which I have mentioned before it was shown that when cases with acute appendicitis were operated upon within 24 hours, only about 2 per cent died; of those admitted next day, 4 percent died, and those on and after the third day, 8 to 10 per cent died.

No laxatives and early operation saves many lives.

Free Frenchman

(Halifax Chronicle)

French guns, aboard French warships, manned by Free Frenchmen, have been firing at German bombers over the English Channel—and with results. While the Petain regime continues to obey the wishes of the Axis masters and develop a brand of Fascism in France, Free Frenchmen in large numbers continue to fight, as allies of British forces.

The Free Frenchmen in Great Britain form a striking force of some size. Already some French ships have been commissioned and manned by these French crews to strike new blows at Germany. And travelers returning from Great Britain report that great numbers of French sailors are to be seen there awaiting their chance to resume the fight against the German enemy.

Their ranks are to grow still further as more Free Frenchmen come to Great Britain from overseas. The force of Free Frenchmen which General de Gaulle is organizing will do important work in the struggle. It is a symbol of the undying spirit of the true France, a spirit which will yet bring many more Frenchmen back into the fight. The force will form a nucleus on which a great force can be built, when the German invaders have been driven out of French territory and France again can raise a mighty army to help carry the war into Germany.

There has been no announcement as yet to reveal whether or not any of the Free Frenchmen will be absorbed into Canadian services, but there would be certain obvious advantages in such a move. French naval men, of course, who are trained in the routine and equipment of the French navy, would serve most efficiently on French ships. But French merchant sailors or soldiers might, be absorbed into such Canadian units as have French-speaking officers and men. That would be simpler, at least, than trying to place them in British units where the language difficulty would be a major problem.

But wherever they are placed, there is no question that many Free Frenchmen are eager to see Nazi Germany defeated and their homeland freed.

Cuba imported 11,106 radio sets in the first six months of this year, compared with 8310 in the first half of last year.

Why France Fell

Not all the lessons of the French military collapse last May are on the grim side. At least one big factor in that tragedy may be called almost reassuring for the British and such others as may be called upon to hold the lists against Hitler. In his Philadelphia speech the other day Ambassador Bullitt, speaking from first-hand information, made it plain that the breakdown of France was due to unpreparedness, but also to surprise.

Of the unpreparedness of France, and for that matter of England in lesser degree, we have been long informed. A good many French workers were jealous of their recently won short hours and other privileges. A good many experts thought that France should not build too many airplanes before the outbreak of hostilities so as not to be caught with obsolete fighting models. It thus came about that at one time airplane output in France sank to thirty-seven machines a month while Germany was producing a thousand a month.

Surprise Came First

But the French disaster was not solely the result of unpreparedness, as Ambassador Bullitt plainly shows. If, in the course of three months fighting, let us say, German planes and tanks had worn down French planes and tanks, then French defeat would have been brought about by unpreparedness. But we are not discussing a defeat but a collapse. We are discussing the destruction of the French armies in virtually three or four days.

On the 10th of May, says Mr. Bullitt, the French were confident that their country could not be conquered. On the 13th of May "the Germans had smashed through the center of the French Army and France was doomed." That fatal break-through was not primarily the work of fifth colmnists, airplanes and tanks. Mr. Bullitt mentions the spies and traitors and he stressed the totally new method of attack which the French had to face—waves of bombing planes and tanks co-ordinated by radio. But first place in the French disaster Mr. Bullitt gave to surprise. "It was the strength of the German Army and the skill of its leaders that enabled Germany to strike the fatal blow. The blow was struck just where the French did not expect it."

Fake End Run

Premier Reynaud told the same story when he first gave the shattering news to the world. When the Germans broke through on a sixty-mile front north of Sedan it was not because they had 2,000 airplanes against 500 French planes or had 10,000 tanks against a much smaller French number. Actually the Germans seemed to have found no one facing them. Reynaud charged that the armies which should have been in place on the Meuse were not there.

Hitler told the same story in his last speech before the Reichstag, boasting of the surprise he had sprung on the enemy. His rush into the Netherlands and Belgium was a fake run around the enemy's left end; the actual blow was delivered between center and guard. The ruse was all the more successful because the run around the end was the historic German method.

Hole Opens Up

When the German parachute troops swooped down on Holland and on the Liege forts the Allies believed it was the 1914 Schlieffen plan once more in operation. Half of the Allies swung north and a hole sixty-miles wide was opened up in the center. In our current vocabulary, German planes and tanks blast through and roar through. But it would seem to be closer to the facts to say that on the Meuse the Germans raced through—comparatively speaking, of course. There was Allied resistance, but it was desperately late. They had been lured out of position. They could not get set. About the broken French Army on the Meuse have been used words like "volatilized." When an army is more than shattered or pulverized, when it is "vaporized", when it melts away into thin air, it is not defeat. It bespeaks total confusion.

No Air Doom

It is in this sense that a fuller study of the French collapse may bring a fair amount of cheer to embattled Britain—to be sure, along with new anxieties. For if German strategy completely fooled the Allies once on land, it may conceivably do so again in the course of the battle for England. But on the other hand, removing the element of surprise is, makes the English picture brighter to recognize that the French collapse was due to something more than a shortage of planes and tanks.

In the matter of air unreadiness England too has sinned, though far less heavily than France did; the disparity between British and German air strength is not so radical as to make German control of the air over Britain too certain. But even in France it was not control of the air that put virtually the whole country under the German heel in the space of a month. The occupation of the whole Atlantic Coast, the fall of Paris, the tragic-comic eviction of hundreds of thousands of French garrison troops from their impregnable Maginot Line — these were primarily the result of German strategy outguessing the Allies on the Meuse. The arithmetic of the airplanes by itself may not be decisive.—N.Y. Times.

WEARY OF 'SHOW' PEOPLE TURN IN

Many Londoners Go to Bed and Do Not Hear 'All Clear' Signal

By MILO THOMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 27—(AP)—Half of metropolitan London's population had to ask this morning how long the night's air raid lasted.

They had given up the show and gone to bed—missing the all clear signal—while theatregoers staged song fests and dances.

How can one go to bed while the grinding beat of a German bomber still overhead comes to the ears? At any moment a blast might end your existence.

But so might a bolt of lightning in any thunderstorm.

Shrug And Turn In

You think of the odds, shrug and turn in.

Watching the show wearies you like sitting at a grand fireworks display for hours—and then having to see it all over again. You give up, knowing there will be other shows.

For those who do watch there is a horrid splendor about these night raids.

Your feelings are mixed. For short periods you feel that you personally are the hunted one—but most of the time it is the fellow somewhere up above who is hunted.

The black sky becomes a garden of unimaginably tall flowers, usually in swaying clusters. The stems, of course, are the searchlight beams and they blossom where they touch downy clouds.

The heads come together as if the flowers are reaching unnaturally for a bee buzzing above.

Illusion of a Garden

The ground under your feet and the wall against which you lean tremble as guns speak about you and there seem suddenly to be lightning bugs among the flowers.

The droning bee up there is the hunted thing now and you belong with those who are stalking it.

Discretion comes to you when the stalks and blossoms are all about you and you look up into a cone of light and hear the bee almost directly overhead.

The illusion of a garden vanishes.

You knew too well there is no bee, but a Nazi bomber ready to deal death.

If they start the ack-acks going, there is a good chance that in his twisting dive to get out of range he may have to jettison his bomb load at your feet.

So you seek shelter a moment until your ears tells you the plane is circling over another part of the city or a scrunch discloses he thinks he has found an objective and dropped a bomb...another..two more.

Somewhere unlucky watchers who stood as you did may be dying. That's a side of it you cannot dwell upon.

Rumanian Armed Forces Clash With Russian, Hungarian Air Forces

Budapest, Aug. 27—(AP)—Rumanian armed forces clashed today with Soviet Russian and Hungarian air forces and with Russian troops.

A Rumanian fighter plane shot down a Hungarian bomber over Hungarian soil this morning, the Foreign Office announced.

At the same time, reports reached Budapest diplomats of a skirmish on the Russian-Rumanian frontier Sunday morning with the loss of hundreds of troops on both sides. At least two Rumanian planes were shot down, the reports said.

Bucharest was full of reports, which officials refused to confirm or deny, that there had been encounters between Hungarian and Rumanian planes over the disputed province of Transylvania.

BRITISH MORALE STAYS UNSHAKEN DESPITE RAIDS

No Evidence is Found of Devastation, Bulk of Explosives Evidently Falling Harmlessly in Fields and Gardens — No Signs of Panic

(By Edwin Johnson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Aug. 27—(CP Cable)—In spite of days of ceaseless air raids climaxed by last night's most sustained offensive since the outbreak of the war, the morale of the British people remains unshaken.

That is the impression gained after a personal tour covering several hundred miles through areas which have been special targets in Hitler's latest aerial "war of nerves."

With Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, General Officer Commanding the Canadian 2nd Division, we have been privileged to visit practically all the so-called "hot spots" which have been bombed, shelled and machine-gunned without let-up within recent weeks. Wherever we went, citizens had accepted the ordeal with calm coolness and resolute determination to carry on.

Tour of Coast Zone

Within the past 24 hours we have toured more than 200 miles of the southeast coastal zone which according to some reports, has been reduced to a shambles by enemy attacks. Free to move about at will we motored through Folkestone, Dover, Ramsgate, Margate and other centres where the enemy has been concentrating his hammer blows.

There is no evidence of devastation. A number of houses and shops lay in ruins and some roads were temporarily blocked by craters, but the bulk of the explosives apparently had been dropped harmlessly in fields and gardens.

Taking into consideration the vast number of bombs dropped in that section of the country, the damage is considered "exceedingly small."

Although we passed through five separate zones of attack, the wail of the sirens produced only an orderly movement to shelter. There was no sign of panic and for the most part clusters of people stood in the streets peering into the sky.

Cheer Rescue of Pilot

At Herne May hundreds of persons lined the boardwalk to watch the progress of a dogfight being waged high in the air between squadrons of Nazi bombers and British fighters. A motorboat suddenly sped to sea to rescue a British pilot who had bailed out after destroying four enemy machines. The crowds gave a roaring cheer as he was brought ashore.

In a field near Dover lay a Messerschmitt whose pilot escaped injury after making a pancake landing. A bent propellor appeared to be the only damage to the machine.

On the way back to camp we travelled more than 200 miles during the time of a six-hour warning but the only result of the bombing we could see were flames which shot up from incendiary bombs dropped on woodlands some miles from Canadian encampment. Members of a western Ontario Scottish regiment had the fire under control before it made any appreciable headway.

British Bombers Extend Attacks

BODY DISCOVERED BY 11-YEAR-OLD

Came Across Partially-Burned Body on a Roadside on August 11th

Magog, Que., Aug. 27—(CP)—Discovery of the body of Jeffrey Munn, slain 53-year-old retired farmer of Hamilton, Ont., was described today before a coroner's jury by 11-year-old John Wilson of nearby McGowan's Point, Que.

Several hundred townfolk crowded in the Magog council chamber listened intently as the youngster told how he came across the partially-burned body of Munn on a roadside on the evening of Aug. 11.

The boy said he was travelling in a horse-drawn rig when he saw "a blanket and a hand sticking out from underneath." The body was lying in a ditch.

Questioned by Crown Prosecutor Cesaire Gervais, young Wilson admitted he was "afraid." He said he did not mention the discovery to anybody then because he was "too much afraid." He told his father the next day.

The youngster began to cry when shown police photographs of the body taken on the scene. Comforted by his father, he identified the pictures but added: "I did not see as much as that. I saw the right arm coming out from under the rug."

Expected to testify later were four young women and a man, detained in Montreal last week as material witnesses. The five, their names withheld by police who said they were Montrealers, were brought here today and taken to police cells.

AMPLE ELECTRIC POWER REPORT

Annual Report of Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario

Toronto, Aug. 27 (CP)—There is ample electric power available in all Ontario districts to enable the province's war effort to be speeded up and maintained at a greatly increased level, according to the 32nd annual report of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario released today.

The report was released by Dr. T. H. Hogg, Commission Chairman and Chief Engineer.

At the end of 1939, total investment of the Commission, together with investment of co-operating municipalities and distributing systems, was approximately $446,000,000, last October the Commission was serving 856 municipalities.

Total revenue collected by municipal utilities was $35,289,790, and total cost of operations, including sinking fund and depreciation, was $34,422,881. Thus a surplus in operations for these municipalities was shown at $867,000 for the year.

The report noted that during 25 years, cost to the consumer has been steadily reduced. For residential service the average cost per kilowatt-hour had dropped from 5.08 cents in 1914 to 1.26 cents in 1939. For commercial lighting service a similar reduction has been made of four cents to 1.58 cents.

In 1939 rapid expansion of rural primary lines continued and more than 13,000 additional consumers in rural districts were served. More than 100,000 customers now are receiving service on farms and hamlets throughout Ontario.

Letters From the Troops

Following is a letter written by Ex-Alderman Sgt. E. J. Baldree, now "somewhere in England" with the Canadian forces, to City Editor Claude Tice of this newspaper:

Field Security Police,
H. Q. 2nd Cdn. Div.
Base Post Office
Canada

11-8-40

Hello C. D.:

Well here we are in Dear Old Blighty and as expected in training, and how. We had a very pleasant trip over and received a very boisterous welcome all along the shores of these old islands. The people were swell, mostly Scotch, and thousands of them. We are now stationed in England at a pretty little town, but so far we haven't had a chance to see much of it due to blackouts, all lights are out at 9.04 p.m. The blackout time is shown in the press daily.

I met quite a few Belleville boys in fact some came over on the same boat and everyone seemed eager, not just for adventure, but to get to grips with the Dictators' slaves, especially the boys that have been over here since December.

We have very nice quarters, all individual beds, not the double deck type which are used quite a bit in Canadian camps. Steam heat and there is electric lighting but I can't say much about that because we have never had them turned on, you see we do not use the window boards and these boards must be put in place before the lights can be used, and as it makes it awful dark for Reveille and are so much bother we'd rather leave the lights off. Well C. D., it's getting quite dark so I'd better ring off with regards to yourself, R. D. Arnott, Major Thompson and my friends in Belleville and of course my family.

CIII2 Sgt. E. J. Baldree.

'France Fell Because Staff Prepared for War of 1919 Not of 1940'

Pierre Cot, One-Time Air Minister, Says General Staff Ignored Repeated Warnings

BRITAIN WILL WIN

New York, Aug. 27—(CP)—France fell because her general staff prepared "for the war of 1919—and not for the war of 1940," in the opinion of Pierre Cot, one-time Air Minister, Commerce Minister and Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs for France.

Giving what he emphasized were his first impressions and not final judgments of the reasons for France's downfall, Cot said last night in a broadcast interview with Johannes Steel, foreign news commentator, that France's military leaders refused to listen to repeated warnings of the state of the country's military machine for a war against Germany.

'Did Nothing, Said Nothing'

In the 10 months following the Polish campaign, "which should have opened the eyes of our generals," the French General Staff, "attached to its antiquated doctrines, did nothing, they studied nothing, they understood nothing," Cot charged.

He said in 1936, while Air Minister, he submitted to the permanent committee a recommendation that the French air defence and air force be doubled. The High Military Committee on which he said sat Edouard Daladier, Gen. Marte Gustave Gamelin and Marshal Petain, decided against it.

The same thing happened in the matter of tanks, he said. Gen. Charles De Gaulle, the leader of the French forces fighting on with Britain, realized what part tanks would play in the war but, Cot charged, the French General Staff considered him "an incompetent officer" and refused to apply his methods.

'Prophetic Report' Ignored

As late as Jan. 16, 1940, Cot said, Gen. De Gaulle addressed a "prophetic report" to his superiors but they would not listen.

To undo the mistakes of Gamelin France should have placed a young general like De Gaulle in command, not Maxime Weygand, 70 and seven years older than Gamelin, the former Air Minister said. "A study of the military orders issued by Weygand will amaze the world, once they are issued."

Cot charged that not nearly all of France's resources were thrown into the battle and "in capitulating without engaging all our forces, Petain and Weygand gave our country to Hitler." He said less than one-half of France's 3,000 first-line airplanes were sent into battle—the rest kept in North Africa, in the Alps and behind the Maginot Line.

"Germany, on the other hand, threw her entire force into the balance."

Says No Bridges Destroyed to Hinder Foe

He charged nothing was destroyed to hinder the German advance, "not a bridge, not a road, not a railroad track, not a munition plant was blown." Had this been done, the Germans would have needed a minimum of two months to go through France.

And in these two months France could have transported a large part of her armies to continue the fight from North Africa. "Churchill proposed just this—but Petain and Weygand refused. If France had continued to fight with her fleet and her airforce intact, and her great armies in North Africa, the situation would have been today entirely different. During this summer we would have been able to wipe out the Italian colonial empire."

Britain Will Win, Cot Says

Britain, from where Cot has arrived recently to take up university work here, will hold out successfully, he said. Her morale is much better and everyone is determined not to submit to national socialism. Telling of the accuracy of British claims regarding German planes shot down, Cot concluded:

"We must help England— for England is not fighting only for herself, but for liberty and democracy. If England should be defeated liberty will disappear from the world. Believe me—there will never be peace in Europe, or anywhere in the world as long as Hitler lives."

ROADS CLOGGED WITH PEASANTS

Leaving Southern Dobruja Fearing Bulgarians May Occupy Territory

Silistra, Rumania, Aug. 27 (AP)—Roads leading out of Southern Dobruja are clogged with peasant caravans and the bank of the Danube is jammed with refugees seeking to leave districts they fear soon may be occupied by the Bulgarian Army.

About 150,000 Rumanians live in this borderland which their government took from Bulgaria in the second Balkan war twenty-seven years ago and now has agreed tentatively to relinquish.

Ignorant of the exact status of negotiations between the two countries, peasants and townsfolk trudge shoulder to shoulder toward the "old kingdom." They have received permission to carry with them grain, furniture, clothing and anything else they want to save.

"I guess it has to be," a Silistra shopkeeper said.

"They call it the new order of Europe, but it is hard to pull yourself up by the roots from the place in which you have lived happily for so many years.

"We are Rumanians, however, and we wish to continue to live under the Rumanian flag.

Both Rumania and Bulgaria hope for proposed transfer of territory to proceed smoothly but already refugees are reporting bandit raids in small villages resulting in deaths and pillaging.

Six Rumanian gendarmes were reported slain at one place.

DOUBLE SHOOTING IS BEING PROBED

Mrs. M. L. Wilson of Sudbury Shoots Five-Year-Old Son and Then Turns Gun on Self

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 27—(CP) — Authorities today sought a motive for the double shooting of Mrs. Martin L. Wilson, 28, of Sudbury, and her five-year-old son, Gerald. Police said Mrs. Wilson shot the boy through the temple with a .22 calibre rifle yesterday and then turned the gun on herself.

Mr. Wilson returned from work to find the body of his wife at the foot of the cellar steps and that of his son lying on an upstairs bed. Mrs. Wilson died shortly afterward and the boy after admittance to hospital.

Neighbors, who have known the Wilsons for three years, could give no reason for the tragedy.

Mrs. Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lee of Niagara Falls, Ont., was married seven years ago at Niagara Falls, N.Y. The couple moved to Sudbury following their marriage. Gerald was their only child.

Police were notified after Wilson collapsed on the steps of the neighboring home of Euclid Dupuis. Dupuis and Wilson are cranemen at the International Nickel Company.

Survivors, besides her husband and parents, are three sisters and two brothers, all of Niagara Falls, Ont. They are Mrs. C. Paye, Mrs. B. Kinghorn, Miss Doris Lee and Frederick and Ronald Lee.

All R.C.A.F. Stations "Protected Places"

Ottawa, Aug. 27—(CP)— All Royal Canadian Air Force stations, airdromes, depots and other establishments have been designated "protected places" for the purposes of regulation three of the Defence of Canada Regulations, according to a notice published last night in an extra edition of the Canada Gazette.

Regulation three exempts, in the interests of the safety of the state or the efficient prosecution of the war, all persons from entering such premises without authorized permission from the Minister of National Defence for Air.

You Can't Keep a Good Man Down!

"My Ben was always ambitious," says Mrs. Dale, "but I knew I must help him get rid of a sluggish system. It dragged on him like a ball and chain."

Mrs. Dale was right. This dull, logy feeling is a handicap! And often it's due only to a lack of bulk in the diet.

Post's Bran Flakes help to prevent "ball and chain" feeling. They provide natural bulk in the form of bran to keep the food wastes moving promptly.

"Now that Ben eats Post's Bran Flakes regularly," says his mother, "he's getting ahead so fast!" "And what a swell tasting cereal they are!" adds Ben.

HELP keep your family free from the effects of faulty elimination by serving Post's Bran Flakes regularly. They are so appetizing—so convenient. If this does not readily relieve constipation due to lack of bulk it's time to consult a physician.

Campaign Started To Trace Persons Failing to Register

Ottawa, Aug. 27—(CP)—Federal, provincial and municipal police will immediately begin "an intensive campaign" to trace persons who have failed to register, according to an announcement by the Department of National War Services.

The department announced that a letter had gone forward to the attorneys-general of each province requesting the provincial and municipal police to conduct such a campaign.

"They are being particularly asked," the announcement said, "to have traffic officers require the production of registration certificates."

The R.C.M.P. are conducting a similar campaign.

The law provides that persons who without legal excuse have not registered, are liable to a fine of not more than $200 or imprisonment for three months or both and an additional penalty of $10 a day for every day following the date on which they should have registered.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Uneasy Conscience

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been in love with a certain man for many years. About five years ago we had a quarrel, and I married another man for spite.

Recently, my husband was placed in a hospital for serious illness, and shortly afterward I started corresponding with my former boy friend. I left my home town and went to live with this man's relatives and now he is willing to pay for my divorce so that we can be married.

I received a letter from my mother, who is near my husband and visits him regularly, saying that he is heartbroken and wants me to visit him, which I've never done as I think it's best to make a clean break. If I write or visit him, I know it will only re-open the old wound, and if I go back to him, my former boy friend said we'd be through for good.

I have a chance of being happy always, but still my conscience is bothering me as to whether I did the right thing by leaving so suddenly without even saying goodbye to my husband. Could you please tell me what I ought to do?

W.G.

It seems to me your conscience is entitled to a few twinges, not to say a good hard ache, considering what you've done. When you married for spite you took the bit in your teeth and followed your own bent. Now your husband is ill in hospital, wants desperately to see you and you decline to visit him. There is such a thing, my dear, as being a good sport, and as you married this man to spite another, and your husband is now ill, do the decent thing and see him.

Finds a Steady Job, Then Marry

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Did you ever hear of a man falling in love with the first girl he ever met? Well I did. I've written her many letters and now that she is visiting here, I'm sorry I ever wrote those letters. How would I go about asking her forgiveness?

I want to marry this girl, but don't know how to go about it. I have nothing to offer her, but I am very talented. If she'd say "yes" to my proposal, I'd have something to look forward to. I can paint, draw sketches, design, do intricate block print work, sculpture and many other phases of work, which, as you know would give me above average wages.

I don't mean to ask her to marry me right away, but I would expect to save up five hundred dollars. I couldn't ever bear the thought of marrying anyone else, and the thought of her going home worries me sick. Please give me an idea how to approach her on the marriage question.

Problem Child

What could you have put in those letters that make you regret having written them? I wish you had been a little clearer on this point. And don't you think it would be more prudent to wait until these various arts and crafts, in which you tell me you are so proficient land you in a steady job before making an offer of marriage to the one and only girl?

Sad as it is, the world has its full quota of gifted people who find it hard to turn a penny. But as all girls are flattered by a proposal of marriage, you might tell her of your artistic prospects and sound her out as to how she feels about them.

GOOD MANNERS

What to Say in Writing a "Bread and Butter" Letter

These are the days we go a-visiting. What is the proper thing to do when we return from the visit?

Our "bread and butter" note, the whimsical name given to the letter that carries our thanks back to our hostess for her hospitality, should be written within a day or two after our return home, when the "first, fine rapture" of our visit is still glowing in our memories. It should be written to the hostess of the home in which we have been a guest . . . . our first letter of thanks should not be written to any other member of the family. It need not be long, but it should be prompt, and it should be articulate. That is, we should try to express as well as we possibly can our gratitude and appreciation of the kindness of the home that we have shared.

My first suggestion for writing a thank-you-for-your-hospitality letter is, Write from the point of view of your hostess. That is, put yourself in her place and consider what you would like to be thanked for, if you were she. Before she made her plans for inviting guests, she probably had to consider how many she would be able to invite and for how long. Therefore, don't take her hospitality for granted; realize that, whether the household is an elaborate one or a very simple one, entertaining means extra planning, time, expense; and adaptation on the part of all the members of the family. We have to be a pretty nice guest to deserve all this, and our letter thanking for this friendliness and thoughtfulness, must be a fine letter.

Then there are special plans made for our entertainment and happiness: an especially lovely room was assigned to us, looking on some quiet trees that our hostess knew would bring us a needed rest; plans were made for us to meet the choicest friends of the family; our favorite sports were planned for; a tea, a bridge party, a luncheon, a dinner, a dance given in our honour, motor rides, picnics arranged for us. These special plans call for special thanks. It is so easy to take thoughtfulness for granted so easy to forget to write the thank-you that make the planner so happy that we have the sensitiveness and the vision to realize that she had tried to choose just the things that would make us happiest.

If there were no special entertainment-plans — and often this freedom from having to go to parties is a vacation in itself—there are elements of the home that were unusually appealing to our happy relaxation; a lovely garden that brought refreshing leisure, delightful books for us to read, a piano to play, a varied collection of records —a car for us to drive or to ride in. We should reassure our hostess of the delight that we found in these "browsy" pleasures.

Don't think that I am advising you to write about all these things! The fact is that I have seen so many bread-and-butter letters that were so stiff and formal and so inarticulate in their sparse, sweeping, inclusive statements that I am trying to draw from the usual visits a detail or several details that will check up with your experience to be thanked for. To write, "Thank you for a wonderful visit", or "You gave me a marvelous time" or "I had a lovely visit with you", is a thank-you and an attempt at expressing appreciation, but it is more or less meaningless because it is too broad, too casual, too indefinite. Do not be content with writing a vague thank-you.

She wore her wedding gown of white marquisette over satin, lace inserts at hip-line, and long train which fell gracefully from the shoulders; her finger tip veil of white illusion was held in place by a coronet of pearls; she wore lace gauntlets and carried a beautiful Colonial bouquet of cream roses and bouvardia. Her attendants were his sister, Miss Barbara Tennent, London, Miss Marilyn Broderick, Detroit, Mich., as junior bridesmaid and Miss Carol Broderick also of Detroit, Mich., cousin of the bride. They were gowned alike in two-toned net in miniature pink with short, puffed sleeves, skirt and sleeves trimmed with pink velvet bows. On their heads they wore net calottes, with pink velvet bows and net gauntlets. They carried Colonial bouquets of mauve and pink sweetpeas from which fell long streamers of pale mauve and pink satin. Dr. Reginald Burr of Kingston, was his brother's best man. Mr. Reginald Lamon, London, and Mr. Whitney Shannon, Toronto, were ushers.

During the reception which followed at the home of the bride's parents, Patrick Street, London, Mrs. Tennent, mother of the bride, received wearing a lovely shell pink sheer, floor length, long sleeves, with small French Ravenna velvet turban; Mrs. Burr, mother of the groom, chose a gown of Elizabeth blue chiffon, floor length, with black velvet hat with ostrich tips. DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Stomach-Ache

Usually, a stomach-ache can be taken as a sign that a child has been eating the wrong foods, or has not been eliminating properly, or hasn't been chewing his food as thoroughly as he should—that is, he has been eating too fast. Nine time out of ten stomach-aches are caused either by constipation or indigestion, and all a parent needs to do to prevent these cases of stomach-ache is to watch for and correct faulty eating and elimination habits in the child.

In the tenth case, however, the stomach-ache may be a sign of something serious. It is a symptom of a score of diseases. Consequently in no case should the parent take the ailment lightly. What may seem to be a simple stomach disorder, for which it would be a "waste of money" to call the doctor, could be some serious abdominal ailment.

A child often is unable to describe accurately what he feels. A doctor who is called to see a child complaining only of stomach-ache, may immediately see other symptoms of something ominous. I recall more than one case in my 30 years of practise in this country district, of being called in to treat a child with stomach-ache and finding a condition that the parents had not suspected.

One of the common causes of abdominal pain in a child, and one which is frequently taken for ordinary stomach-ache, is appendicitis. In such a case the child will probably first display a lack of interest in food. This is accompanied by a feeling of nausea and followed by an acute pain in the abdomen. This pain may be constant or recurrent depending on whether the obstruction in the appendix is partial or not.

Such cases are often complicated and made more dangerous by medications attempted by parents who guess the child has only a touch of indigestion or constipation. A number of times I have been called to attend children suffering from appendicitis who have been given a laxative by the mother. This is the very worst thing that could be done in a case of inflamed appendix, for it stimulates the action of the digestive tract, increases the congestion at the appendix and very frequently causes it to rupture. When this happens, the poisons of the diseased organ are released and spread through the abdominal cavity.

Appendicitis isn't the only serious ailment that is often mistaken for ordinary stomach-ache. Frequently an abdominal pain felt over a wide area, with a tenseness of the muscles on the side affected, will be suspected of being appendicitis when actually it is a case of lobar pneumonia. The similiar symptoms occur only when the pneumonia affects the lower lobe.

Frequently, too, diaphragmatic pleurisy makes its debut as a mere stomach-ache. Sometimes a child may suffer an obstruction of the bowel or intestine. A membrane has grown across the tube effectively stopping any material from passing further along the intestine. This serious condition too is heralded by a stomach-ache.

A child suffering from some infection of the nose and throat, such as tonsilitis, will complain of severe stomach-ache. Usually it is accompanied by diarrhoea and vomiting and very often we find that the throat infection has spread to the wall of the bowel.

These are only a few of the more or less serious diseases that are confused with plain stomach-ache. Hence the wisdom of having every case of stomach-ache carefully diagnosed.

Eat, and Grow Thinner

This is a good time of the year to start a war against an excess of curves and super fluous poundage.

By HELEN FOLLETT

If the bath room scales have the laugh on you, and the reducing bogey stares you in the eye, this is a good time of the year to start a war against an excess of curves and superfluous poundage. There aren't as many parties as in the winter season to tempt you to partake of the good things of the table. There are delightful exercises that will help such as swimming, hiking, tennis, golf.

Get fixed in your mind a list of groceries that are your good friends, that won't add an ounce. Make a list of enemy foods which include starches, fats and sweets. Cereals, white bread-substitute, toasted rye with very little butter, no cream, no pastries or potatoes. Take tea and coffee clear; you'll like them that way after a short period. Beans and peas are not so good.

There's almost no limit to the foods one can eat; they include lean meats, fish that is not fat, poultry, string beans, cabbage, tomatoes, onions, spinach, carrots, all the leafy green things of the garden that make delicious salads. Take clear broths instead of cream soups. Drink buttermilk and unsweetened lemonade. Cottage cheese fills one up, doesn't add to weight.

By careful dieting it is possible to lose six or eight pounds a month, which are enough.

* * *

Rapid reducing is a menace to the health and what it does to the human phiz is something terrible. Adipose tissues on the portrait go into a state of dissolution, the skin is too large a fit and wrinkles result.

Even moderate reducing means that the complexion must have attention. After the soapy cleansing at night and the warm rinsing, the flesh should have a brisk tapping with a heavy cream to make the blood streams gallop and to keep the fibers firm. After the massage a quick friction with an ice cube. No joy in regaining the youthful shape if the face goes ancient.

You can STILL visit friends in the United States by LONG DISTANCE

Here's a happy thought! Call your friends or relations in the United States. (After 7 p.m. and all day Sunday, rates are lower.) Take them by surprise! Tell them to come "North" for a visit. Explain that it's still easy to cross the friendliest border in the world, and that there are no irksome regulations to restrict their freedom here. Be thrilled by the quick and easy voice-to-voice exchange of greetings and goodwill.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, August 28

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A VERY lively and enterprising day, with the forces and faculties keyed up to some worthwhile achievements, is read from the prevailing astral operations. The mentality will be disposed to be keen, alert and agrgessive as well as being sound, purposeful and dependable, even though prone to be attracted by creative and expansive objectives of major proportions. In very determined attack the support of superiors, employers or those in power is assured.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of excellent opportunity for expansion and growth, especially where new ideas and projects of major importance are practically developed and aggressively attacked. This energetic and strenuous personal initiative to employers, superiors or those whose cooperation for promotion and development is essential. Group action is destined to be definite and decisive, particularly when social humanitarian or even political issues are at stake.

A child born on this day should be energetic, enterprising, forceful and resourceful, attaining place and prestige by its personal initiative.

ARGYLLS ISSUED WITH UNIFORMS

Belleville's Senior N.P.A.M. Unit Goes in Training at Peterborough Next Week

Spick and span in their new "Tank" uniforms of khaki denim battle-dress and black tams, the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank), Belleville's senior N.P.A.M. unit will leave for Peterborough during the early part of next week, where the regiment will go through its regulation camp-training period of two weeks.

According to an Ottawa announcement last week, the Argylls have been selected as one of four N.P.A.M. units to undergo special mechanized training, in readiness, should the occasion demand, for the enlargement of the proposed armoured brigade which will form part of the Canadian divisions overseas.

The regiment, some four hundred strong, was issued with the new uniforms yesterday. Drills from this point on will be undergone by uniformed militiamen instead of the "shirt-sleeved volunteers" as has been the custom to date.

Belleville's civilian soldiers have responded magnificently to the syllabus of training as laid down by militia headquarters, and given by the competent staff of instructors of the regiment, according to senior officers of the unit. Each drill sees progress made, and the Argyll's, it present adaptability to things military, and enthusiasm shown in the various phases of training, can be judged as a criterion, should rank with the cream of the N.P.A.M. units in this particular district.

Preliminary Hearing Against R. McFarlane Adjourned Till Friday

The preliminary hearing into charges laid against Robert McFarlane, 21-year-old Frankford, bridegroom, charged separately with his seventeen-year-old bride, Alice Archer McFarlane with the murder of her infant son, Gordon Archer, was further adjourned today until Friday, August 30th.

The hearing laid over from Friday, August 23rd., when sixteen witnesses were called by County Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson, was further adjourned because of the inability of Mrs. Mountenay, an important witness to appear, through serious illness.

The witness, who is a patient in Belleville General Hospital, will give her evidence under affidavitt this week. This will be presented by the Crown at the adjourned hearing on Friday, when Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., presiding official will, in all probability, hand down his judgment.

Mrs. Alice Archer McFarlane, whose hearing into murder charges concluded last week, was formally committed for trial by the magistrate. If her husband is committed the youthful couple will stand trial at the Fall Assizes of the Supreme Court which sits here sometime in October.

The wire-bound body of the eighteen-months-old baby boy, was found floating in the Trent River, near Trenton, on July 25th.

SAYS ONLY OGPU COULD DO IT

Sylvia Ageloff, Friend of Slayer of Leon Trotsky, Makes Statement

Mexico City, Aug. 27—(AP)—Sylvia Ageloff, friend of Frank Jackson, slayer of Leon Trotsky, declared early this morning that "only a member of the Ogpu (Russian secret police) would be capable of such an act" as Trotsky's slaying. Before Trotsky died last Thursday he blamed the Ogpu.

Agents of the District Attorney, after questioning the Brooklyn, N. Y., woman for several hours, made public a transcript of her examination during which she also said that:

Her full name is Sylvia Ageloff Maslow. She is 32.

During 1935-36 she worked as propaganda director for James P. Cannon of New York, head of the Socialist Workers Party in the United States.

She knew nothing about Jackson's plan to kill the exiled Bolshevik.

She met Jackson in Paris in 1938 while he was studying journalism at the Sorbonne. She described him as "kind and gentle in Paris but very irritable" when she met him again in Mexico.

Jackson was transferred unexpectedly last night from a hospital room to a neighboring police station, shortly after a newspaper published reports that Soviet agents had arrived in Mexico City and planned to liberate him.

Princess Juliana At St. Catharines

Hamilton, Aug. 27—(CP)—Princess Juliana of The Netherlands arrived here by automobile today and joined the Governor-General the Earl of Athlone and his consort, Princess Alice, in their private railway car.

From here the vice-regal party proceeded by automobile to St. Catharines, Ont.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Hitler-Beast of Berlin"

A startling picture of life in the German "underground"—where the German patriots are fighting dictatorship on the "home front" with every weapon their ingenuity and meagre resources can command, is "Hitler-Beast of Berlin," which will be the sensational feature attraction opening next at the McCarthy theatre.

According to advance information released by the management, "Hitler-Beast of Berlin" is remarkable in that this frank, honest and sincere screen document does not advocate war or hate, or does it contain any propaganda whatever.

With amazing frankness and generous detail, plus a large and enthusiastic cast of first rate players, this remarkable picture recounts the story of a young, married German intellectual, one of the leaders of the "underground" opposition to the Nazi regime, who risks his life almost daily in order to spread the gospel of common fellowship among the German people faltering between humanity and Hitlerism. More than thirty principals headed by Roland Drew, Steffi Duna, Greta Grandstedt, Allan Ladd and Lucien Prival have the credit of bringing realistically to the screen the characters woven around the theme of the story which was adopted from Shepard Traube's powerful story, "Goose Step."

The management of the McCarthy theatre declares that "Hitler-Beast of Berlin" will go down in screen history, not only because it shows, for the first time on the screen, how the anti-Nazi forces operate their illegal radio stations, printing presses and how they distribute their illicit, yet accurate and truthful news from the world outside Germany to the eager citizens who would otherwise be kept in ignorance of everything except what Hitler wants them to know. "Hitler-Beast of Berlin" is a film document every loyal Canadian should see.

On the same program will be presented a laugh-packed Buster Keaton comedy, an amusing cartoon "The Millionnaire Hobo" and "Tomorrow's Stars" an interesting Baseball sports subject.

"The Man With Nine Lives"

The king of horror, Boris Karloff in his latest, most blood-curdling screen feature presentation "The Man With Nine Lives" is now showing at the McCarthy theatre. This is the picture Karloff himself dares you to see and unless you have good nerves we certainly back up Mr. Karloff, because "The Man With Nine Lives" is a thriller-diller, if the proper phrase is thriller-diller, for terrifying thrills which hold you with breath-taking tension for seventy-five minutes. Andy Clyde in "Money Squawks", latest Fox News and an interesting screen tour through Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C., three excellent added attractions and splendid variety to the program and if you think that "The Man With Nine Lives" will not cause you a nightmare, the McCarthy theatre is the place to go at once.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Enemy Agent"

Revealing the work of G-Men as they fight to halt spy activity and prevent theft of vital military plane designs from U.S. aircraft factories, Universal's timely film, "Enemy Agent" is now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

For sheer "newspaper headline" realism, suspense and fast action, few pictures have more to offer.

Featuring Richard Cromwell, Helen Vinson, Robert Armstrong and Jack LaRue, the story is told in and around the giant aircraft factories of Southern California. The screen-play by Sam Robins and Edmund L. Hartman dramatizes newspaper stories on spy activities and is charged with genuine excitement.

Colorful Role

Cromwell turns in one of his most convincing performances as the young plane draftsman who fights to clear himself of spy charges. Helen Vinson is excellent as the pretty secret service operative who lures the spies into a trap set for them by Robert Armstrong, who plays the G-Man assigned to the case.

Philip Dorn, noted Holland-Dutch actor recently brought to this country, reveals exceptional talent as the brilliant spy-ring chief and central figure in the story.

Cinema Notables

Others who add to the picture's flavor and quality are Jack Arnold, Jack Carson and Marjorie Reynolds. Director Lew Landers handled each scene for full suspense and thrills, and Ben Pivar was the associate producer. The graphic photography is credited to Jerome Ash.

The added special attraction features Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy, Ann Harding and Frank Morgan in "When Ladies Meet."

AT THE BELLE

"Today We Live"

The greatly anticipated "Today We Live," now on the Belle Theatre screen is one of the major productions from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Joan Crawford and Gary Cooper, who play the leading roles, have never before appeared together on the screen.

Their first co-starring appearance is an auspicious event for it takes place in a filmization of a story by the brilliant American writer, William Faulkner, whose novels, "Sanctuary," and "Light in August" created a literary furor. Faulkner has written a story about the dramatic experiences of an English society girl who offers her services to England in an ambulance unit and falls in love with an American flyer. The production was directed by Howard Hawks, who produced the successful "Scarface," and the supporting cast includes Robert Young, Franchot Tone, Roscoe Karns, Louise Closser Hale, Rollo Lloyd and Hilda Vaughn.

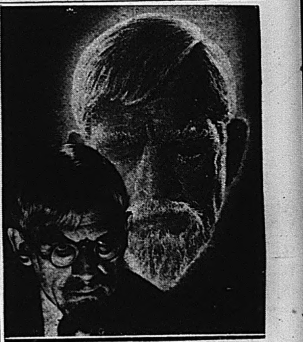
In "Today We Live," Miss Crawford finds herself the centre of an emotional conflict between three men, two of whom lose their lives in her behalf. The powerful story shifts from the aristocratic country estate of the heroine to dynamic episodes in the battle zones of the war, with what is said to be one of the most terrific climaxes ever devised for the screen occurring when one of the star's lovers gets a "death order" to blow up a ship from which there will be no return. Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer is said to have placed all the facilities at its disposal to Director Hawks in the filming of this picture, which is reported to be one of the outstanding talkie productions of the year.

"The Captain is a Lady"

Based on the Rachel Crothers stage hit, "Old Lady 31," the hilarious comedy hit, "The Captain is a Lady," brings together one of the largest casts of character players ever assembled on the screen. The story of an "old salt" who takes refuge from poverty in an Old Ladies' Home, the film affords an opportunity to such great character players as Charles Coburn, Beulah Bondi, Helen Broderick, Billie Burke and Helen Westley to bring their richest and most lovable characterizations to the screen. All the humor and pathos in the lives of little people in a New England fishing village is brought into focus by the interaction of a gusty old sailor who "loves to tell a good 'un" and the mid-Victorian ladies who dare to take him into their midst.

Highlights of the Belle News of the Hour includes President Roosevelt and Prime Minister King confer on United States-Canada defense plan, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor sworn in as Governor of Bahamas, British defy blitzkrieg and the running of the famous Kentucky derby of harness racing, staged at Gosher Park, New York.

Shown above is Mewa, the movie-acting lion now at the Belleville Fair Grounds where he will be a featured attraction under the direction of Captain Billy Reid, at the Belleville Fair this week. Mewa, it will be remembered, appeared with Dorothy Lamour in "The Jungle Princess."



Boris Karloff, king of horror, in his most terrifying role, "The Man With Nine Lives," the picture he dares you to see—is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

CALGARY BRONKS OPEN THE SEASON AGAINST BOMBERS

Mixture of Veterans and Rookies Tackle Canadian Champions Friday

LOSE FIVE STARS

Some Players Secured from Edmonton Eskimos, That Club Having Disbanded

Calgary, Aug. 27—(CP)—Calgary Bronks' new deal in football, aimed at knocking Winnipeg Blue Bombers from the throne room, begins Friday night when a mixture of veterans and rookies tackle the Canadian champions in the opening game of the western inter-provincial union.

Larry Haynes, Bronks' new coach, a native of Stavely, Alta., and only Canadian-born mentor in the three-team circuit, said his objective is to keep the team intact for more than a year in the hope of bringing Calgary its first western football title since 1911.

"The players have spirit and are determined to avenge the 28-7 trimming Bombers plastered on them in the western final last fall," he said.

Bronks lost seven of their experienced stars, including five former American players, since last season and have found outside replacements for only four positions.

Al Hoptowit, formerly of Washington State College and a 1938 all-star inside, turned professional this year with Philadelphia in the National League. Johnny McKee, 1939 all-star snap, and Bob Zwank, a fety middle, returned to their United States homes. The veteran, Jack Lawrence, retired and Gobbo Gilkes, a Calgary product, joined the Royal Canadian Air Force. "Bizz" Bishing and Lyn Warren, backfield stars last year, reported they were unable to leave their jobs in a New Jersey shipyard.

"We won't have a first string of experienced veterans and our line won't be as strong," Haynes says. However Bronks obtained Gordon Gelhaye, 280-pound 1939 Canadian Press all-star middle, from the defunct Edmonton Eskimos along with Louis Rimstad, an inside, and Russ Rennie, an end, from the same team.

Problem of replacing McKee may be solved in Al LaBerge, formerly of the University of Saskatoon huskies.

Chuck Millman, of Stratford, Ont., who played defence for Calgary Stampeders, western senior hockey champions, is a line prospect.

Joe Turner, a Calgary product, who as assistant coach at Queen's University last year, has returned. He is considered Bronks' best defensive man, said Haynes.

AMSTERDAM BUYS HURLER

Amsterdam, N.Y., Aug. 27—(AP)—Daffin Backstrom, former Drew University pitcher, has been purchased by Amsterdam of the Canadian-American League from Newark, N.J. The righthander was with Akron for a short period.

PURCHASED FOR $160,000.

"Bahram," hailed as the world's champion racehorse while he was owned by the Aga Khan, is shown here being exercised by Dr. Clarence R. Richards at Gleyndon, Md. Bahram recently arrived in the United States after he had been purchased from the Khan for $160,000 by a syndicate of American sportsmen. It is believed the horse was brought to the U.S. for breeding purposes.

ANOTHER ONE FOR THE YANKEES

The New York Yankees showed the stuff that made them world's champions as they swamped the Cleveland Indians 15 to 2 at the Yankee stadium. One of the many Yankee runs is shown being scored here. Crosetti slides safely across the plate on Gordon's sacrifice fly in the third inning. Hemsley is the Indian catcher, Summers calls the play. The win put the Yankees in third place.

SHELL 'OILERS' LOSE FIRST GAME TO TANNERS 12-4

BAWDEN WILD

Local Hurler Walks Six, Three of These Coming in First Inning

A streak of wildness by Johnnie Bawden coupled with heavy hitting by the Kingston Tanners, gave that team a one-game advantage with the Shell "Oilers" of Belleville in the first game of the Intermediate "A" softball playdowns, played at Kingston on Monday night, the home team winning by a count of 12-4. The second game of the series will be played at Coleman Flats on Wednesday night and the Oilers should get back in the running with a win on their own diamond. Tanners were full value for their win last evening as they hit when hits were needed, they played heads-up ball at all times and "Cowboy" Smith restricted the locals to a half dozen hits and four runs.

The ball game was won and lost in the first frame, when the opposition scored four runs on three walks and two doubles and put the contest on ice in the fourth with a five-run outburst with Tabby Gow climaxing the rally with a home-run clout to deep right field. After this outburst The Oilers defeated the Tanners four to three in runs scored but the damage had been done. Bawden warmed up as the game progressed and in the late frames had the Tanners eating out of his hand as has been the case for many years, when these two teams met. Kingston thinks this is their year to go out in the playdowns but Harold Bawden's squad are far from defeated and should even the series on Wednesday night.

Coasted to Victory

"Cowboy" Smith with the peculiar delivery, simply coasted to victory, after given a four run lead in the first frame. He allowed but six hits, walked two and struck out five assisting his own cause with two hits in four attempts, one of the blows scoring a brace of runs. Bawden on the other hand was extremely wild walking six and striking out but four. The Tanners secured eleven hits off his delivery. Johnny was bothered by the ball in use in the game, it being a smooth stitched ball instead of the raised seams he is accustomed to. The Oilers had only two chances to score runs in the second and fifth, being set down in order in the remaining frames. The outfield of the Tanners played very consistent ball shagging all the flies in sight, while the Belleville outfield was away off color, fielding poorly hard hit balls and dropping fly balls in the pinches.

Detroit Manager Thinks Tigers Have Real Chance

Philadelphia, Aug. 27 — (AP)—Given a few "better breaks," Manager Del Baker thinks his Detroit Tigers have a "good chance" of edging out Cleveland for the American League pennant.

"I know our chances are good," he declared, after rain forced postponement of yesterday's game with the Athletics. "But so are those of the other contenders — especially New York."

Weak at the plate, Detroit dropped three straight games to the Yankees on the current eastern invasion.

As for Cleveland's three games in front, Baker admits the Indians have an edge in pitching and a little tighter defence, "But beyond that, everything favors the Tigers."

Beset all year with injuries, Detroit is still without the services of Charley Gehringer, veteran second baseman who pulled a muscle in his leg.

"We need Gehringer out there," Baker declared. "This young fellow Dutch Meyer we bought from Knoxville in the southern league is filling in admirably, yet—" He didn't finish but you got the idea.

FERRIER RULED OUT OF TOURNEY

Australian Champion Designated Pro. by the Amateur Moguls

New York, Aug. 27 (AP)—The United States Golf Association took all the international flavor and a lot of the interest out of the 1940 National Amateur Championship by ruling out Jim Ferrier yesterday, but there still are enough good golfers left to make a whale of a tournament out of today's sectional qualifying spree.

Counting out Ferrier and the ten former champions who don't have to play in the sectional rounds, 747 players remain on the list. After today's 36-hole tests in 28 locations, only 140 of them will remain to go into the championship tourney at New York's winged foot club Sept. 9-14.

The last-minute disqualification of Ferrier, amateur and open champion of Australia, was as bewildering to the fans as it was to Jim. It was based upon the publication in Australia of a profusely illustrated book called "Jim Ferrier's Golf Shots."

The U.S.G.A. contention is that it is a book of instruction and as Ferrier received royalties from it, that makes him ineligible under the U.S.G.A. amateur rule. Ferrier argues the book merely analyzes his own unorthodox style without trying to tell other golfers how to play.

With Ferrier out, the leading candidates for the title seem to be the 10 exempt players—Marvin (Bud) Ward, the 1939 winner; Willie Turnesa, Johnny Goodman, Johnny Fischer, George T. Dunlap, Jess Sweetser, Francis Ouimet, Max Marston, Jesse Guilford and Chick Evans.

Sports Roundup

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 27 (AP)—Steamboat Johnson, the veteran umpire, had his feelings hurt when he reached Birmingham the other day and found one of his books, "Standing the Gaff" being advertised for a dime......One of Ben Hogan's admirers figures that prior to the start of the P.G.A. tourney yesterday, Ben, who has won $9,405 in purses this year, was paid off at the rate of $1.80 for every shot......The Tigers are growling about the American League schedule which gives the Indians four days' rest between two-three game series with Detroit.

Remember these?

Last night's Petey Scalzo-Jimmy Perrin fight show was the most elaborate New Orleans has staged since the three-day carnival of champions back in 1892, when all this happened:—

Sept. 5—Jack McAuliffe, world's lightweight champion, kayoed Billy Myer in 15 rounds.

Sept. 6—George Dixon knocked out Jack Skelly in eight rounds to defend his featherweight title.

Sept. 7—James J. Corbett knocked out John L. Sullivan in 21 rounds to win the heavyweight title.

Add Look-Alikes—Lester Patrick of the New York hockey Rangers and Buck Shaw, Santa Clara football coach......Larry French of the Cubs probably will be the next National League pitcher to crash the 200-victory circle, but not this season......and Old Mose Grove needs only eight more wins to make it 300 in the American League......Cairmen Cook, the old lightweight contender, has invented a chest and lung developer which will go on the market soon.

CANNIFTON WINS TUMMON TROPHY FROM LATTA NINE

'Sluggers' Score 10-5 Victory in Fifth and Deciding Game at Shannonville

SOME STALLING

Cannifton Secures Edge They Never Relinquish by Scoring Seven in Second

Cannifton "Sluggers" were crowned champions of the South Hastings Baseball League for the second year in succession Monday evening at Shannonville, defeating Latta in the fifth and deciding contest of the playoff series by a 10-5 score, thereby retaining possession of the Tummon Trophy, which they won for the first time last season. It was a hollow victory however, in which the champions repeated their last year's performance. For although it was a championship game it was anything but championship ball and many of the fans went home dissatisfied and with a nasty taste in their mouth.

Baseball fans go to see ball games and to witness a contest in which sportsmanship plays a paramount part. They do not go to see a display such as was seen in Shannonville last evening when considerable stalling was in evidence in an effort to force the game to be called for darkness before the necessary seven innings were played.

It has all happened before of course and even in the series just concluded neither team can claim a white sheet in this respect. It might save the day at the time and stave off defeat until another game, but in the long run it certainly does not pay and nothing will kill the fan's interest more quickly.

Too Dark to Play in Fifth

In all fairness to Cannifton however, it must be said that it was not their fault that they happened to run up a seven-run lead in the second inning, or that it got too dark to play ball in the fifth frame, when they were leading 8-2. The game should have been called at this point and the fans would have been spared the exhibition, which followed. The climax came in the final inning, when with two men out the Latta fans stormed the field pleading and demanding Umpire Carson to call the game.

Carson called "play ball", however, and with the fans still crowding the baselines, the Cannifton hurler tossed three strikes across the plate and the game was over.

As for the game it was a case of a wrong guess by the Latta management, who sent young Garfield Hall back to repeat his mound performance of last Friday, when he set the Cannifton lads down with four small hits to put his team back in the running. It wasn't Hall's night and after weathering a storm in the first inning, a seven run barrage in the second, together with Latta errors, drove him to cover with Marsh coming in to relieve him.

From then on until the fifth it was a ball game, with Marsh for Latta, and May for Cannifton, turning the opposition back in rapid-fire order. Latta scored once in the third, when Meraw singled and counted on a Cannifton overthrow at second. They scored another in the fifth, when Goulet singled and counted on Park's one base blow. After that it was more by luck than good playing, that batters were retired and although several more runs were counted before the game was finished, it didn't make any difference.

May scattered eight Latta hits and struck out seven, while Cannifton collected eleven hits off the deliveries of three Latta hurlers. Empson for Cannifton led all hitters of the night collecting a double and two singles while Bleekman hit three singles. Parks was the only Latta batter to get more than one hit, getting a double and a single.

The lineups:

Cannifton: E. Jarrell c; Empson ss; L. Jarrell lf; Collins 2b; Bleekman cf; Gannon 3b; Cearley 1b; O. May p; I. May and Smallhorn rf.

Latta: Meraw 2b; Parks 1b; Marsh lf and p; Callaghan c; Wagar ss; Harrison cf; Foster 3b; C. Hall rf; G. Hall p and Goulet rf.

Cannifton	170 000 2	10	11	2
Latta	001 010 2	5	8	5

Umpires: Carson, plate, and Houston, bases.

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

You can take this one for what it's worth and regardless—it's a good golf yarn.

It seems Joe Cather had tried for years to induce a Scotch friend of his to take up golf, but with little avail until last week end when Joe and his friend took to the links at the Belleville Golf Club.

After preliminary explanations as to the fundamentals of the game and explaining the principal idea was to knock the ball into the cup on the next green, Joe teed a ball up for his friend, who took a mighty swing and the ball sailed high up and far away, alighting on the green and bouncing smack into the cup for a "oner."

Joe gasped with surprise, but his Scotch friend merely turned and said—"Fer a moment, laddie, I thought I'd missed it."

N.B.—there was no further comment from Joe.

The Oshawa junior softball nine to appear at the Flats here this evening is known as the Westmounts. A lad named McConkey is their ace moundsman, but the local Uptowns clipped his deliveries for an even dozen safeties last Saturday, even though the Westmounts trounced the Uptowns 15 to 5. Wilson, their first baseman, is the Westmount's big hitter, while McMullen and McLaughlin also swing potent bats. Incidentally McLaughlin, who is Canadian horse shoe pitching champion, will not be with the Westmounts here this evening as the lad is defending his quoit-pitching title at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto. Last Saturday Red Townsend's kids counted five doubles and a triple off McConkey, but the whole trouble seemed to lodge around the local battery, free trips via the four ball route and passed balls spelling the locals' downfall. However, Skipper Townsend seems quite confident his kids can knot the series here this evening and it would be a good idea if the fans turned out to give the local kids an evening of verbal and moral support.

Just whether there are interested local swimmers or not we have no idea, but on August 31st the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association will hold their annual one mile men and women's swim championship at the Canadian National Exhibition. Splendid prizes are awaiting the respective winners in all classes. All of which recalls the fact that Marvin Nelson of Fort Dodge, Iowa, swam to victory in the Canadian National Exhibition's 15-mile marathon swim at Toronto, 10 years ago today. The "Iowa Flash" who won the same event in 1933 and 1934, cut through the choppy Lake Ontario waters in the record-breaking time of seven hours, 43 minutes.

Regis (Pep) Kelly, forward with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, narrowly escaped injury last Saturday when the automobile he was driving left the highway near North Bay and turned over. Joseph Bell, passenger in the vehicle, also escaped injury. Kelly told police he was crowded off the road by another car.

"Doc" Empson's Cannifton nine are repeaters as champions of the South Hastings Baseball League and retain the Tummon Trophy for another year at least. The "Sluggers" defeated Latta in a fifth and final game at Shannonville last evening, but the sorrowful part of the entire series is the fact that many of these important games were not played over the regulation nine innings route. When league play-off time rolls around the executive heads should have sufficient foresight to commence such games at least two hours before sundown. This does not only hold good for baseball, but softball and all such team games as are played throughout the early summer months when there is at least an hour's more daylight to be utilized than at present. Perhaps another year arrangements of a more amicable nature may be arrived at, but in the meantime the Cannifton nine are again league champions to which we add 'congratulations.'

The Shell "Oilers" just weren't in the softball picture at Kingston last night. The "Tanners" got off to an early start, scoring four in the initial frame, and behind pitcher "Cowboy" Smith played air-tight ball from then on. Tabby Gow's Limestone City mushballers tallied four soft counters in that initial frame, three walks filling the bases, and two hits did the rest. Incidentally the Kingston league uses a different type of softball than either Reach or Spalding and this type of ball is as smooth as a billard ball, which proved about as useful in Bawden's hands as a tub of butter. However, with our own type of softball being used here on Wednesday the Shell gang feel that Bawden will have much better control and the locals much more confidence.

This lad "Cowboy" Smith really handcuffed the locals in Kingston last night, not a single Belleville batter getting more than one hit as Smith allowed just six stingy singles. Shell rallied to make an eighth-inning bid, but their effort came slightly too late. The Tanners tallied 11 hits, including Tabby Gow's fourth inning circuit smash with two aboard. But with a different type of ball in use, the locals are optimistic regarding the knotting of the series here Wednesday.

Here's what George Campbell, sports editor of the Oshawa press, had to say regarding Saturday's Belleville at Oshawa junior O.A.S.A., which continues here this evening:

"From our viewpoint, Belleville's junior team doesn't appear nearly as strong as last year. Hook, their ace hurler, hasn't got the control or speed he had last season while his infield is not nearly as strong and the entire team not nearly as potent with the bat. Bronos should be able to win right in Belleville tomorrow evening, providing they come up with their usual brand of ball."

CLEVELAND MOUND STARS

Cleveland Indians Gain Ground Over Yankees and Detroit by Beating Washington Senators

Indians Hold Three-Game Margin Over Tigers and Six Over Yankees

CARDINALS BEATEN

Bucky Walters Wins 18th Game of Season by Restricting Phillies to Five Hits

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

It's a tough task to shake baseball's league leaders out of the treetops in August, even when they look as if they're ripe for a fall.

Cleveland Indians, who once this season gained the American League led by losing four straight, seemed in danger of dropping off their precarious perch in the throes of another four-game losing streak last week-end.

But they stopped it yesterday by edging out Washington Senators 4-3 while both second-place Detroit Tigers and third-place New York Yankees were kept idle by rain. As a result, the Indians increased their advantage over the Tigers to three games and over the Yanks to six.

Meanwhile Cincinnati Reds split a double bill with Philadelphia Phillies without harming their 7 1-2 game advantage in the National League because Brooklyn Dodgers also were rained out.

Feller in Relief Role

Cleveland's conquest of the Senators was made possible by Bob Feller although he didn't get credit for the game. The fireballer went to the rescue of Mel Harder in the seventh and shutout the Senators in the last three stanzas.

Bucky Walters pitched and batted the Reds to a 3-2 victory in the first game. He held the tailenders to five hits and batted in two of Cincinnati's own runs, one with a homer. It was Bucky's 18th win.

Sylvester Johnson, the 39-year-old, retaliated in the nightcap with a three-hit performance, that left the Reds gasping.

Carl Hubbell made his third appearance in four days and saved New York Giants a 10-5 verdict over Chicago Cubs. Harry Gumbert faltered with an 8-1 lead and "Hub" pitched five shutout innings.

Another fine relief showing was that of Boston's Jim Bagby in helping the Red Sox to a 7-6 decision over St. Louis Browns. He allowed only two hits in the last 6 2-3 innings.

Boston Bees basted more water on the St. Louis Cardinals' conflagration by winning a night game 3-1 with Nick Strincevich hurling five-hit ball.

"BEAN BALL" PROTECTOR

Jackie Hayes, 2nd baseman for the Chicago White Sox, is shown wearing a batter's protective headgear while awaiting his turn to go to the plate against the Athletics at Shibe park. Hayes has been having trouble with his eyes lately and his batting has been impaired by the fear that he might not see a "bean ball" in time to duck. The helmet evidently had the desired psychological effect because Hayes, lead-off man for his team, was high man with two hits out of three trips to the plate.

ANOTHER SCREWBALL

Cincinnati—(CP)—Johnny Hutchings, rookie Cincinnati pitcher, has a screwball that compares favorably with that thrown by King Carl Hubbell.

HUGHES HURLS 2-HITTER AGAINST SYRACUSE CHIEFS

Only 21 Men Faced Baltimore Chucker in Last Seven Frames

NEWARK WINS

Trailing 3-1 in Ninth Team Puts on Rally That Nets Seven Runs

(By The Associated Press)

Evidentaly a two-weeks layoff was just the medicine Tommy Hughes, Baltimore's right-hander, needed to bring the Orioles out of a painful slump.

Hughes was out of action because of an operation for an infected hand when Orioles hit the skids. They lost seven out of eight games last week.

Last night Hughes returned to pitch a brilliant two-hit game that buried Syracuse Chiefs, 5-1. At the same time Newark Bears bowled over Jersey City 8-4. As a result Baltimore moved back into their place again while Newark sliced a half game off Rochester's margin and now trails the league leaders by only four games.

Hughes started badly in the first inning by walking Ed Leip, who scored Chiefs' only run on Goody Rosen's double. But Tommy settled down after that and really went to work. He retired the next 21 men in order.

Newark's Bears, who aren't giving up to Jersey City in one game any more than they're giving up to Rochester in the pennant race, put on one of those fictional finishes against the Little Giants.

Trailing 3-1 going into the ninth inning, they drove Hughie east to the showers, nicked Roy Henshaw for a couple of hits and then finished up with three off Bill Harris to score seven runs. Big George Washburn marked up his 16th triumph.

PITCHERS ASK 20 VICTORIES

Five in Major Leagues Seem Likely to Achieve it This Season

New York, Aug. 27 —(CP)— Goal of all pitchers is a 20-game winning season. A year ago four pitchers from each major league achieved this feat—Bob Feller of Cleveland, Red Ruffing of the New York Yankees, Dutch Leonard of Washington and Buck Newsom of Detroit in the American league and Curt Davis of the St. Louis Cardinals, Luke Hamlin of Brooklyn and Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer of Cincinnati in the National.

This season only five tossers appear fairly sure of hitting the 20 figure, unless others put on a late stretch spurt. Current pace-setters are Cleveland's Feller with 20 and six and Al Milnar with 14 and seven, Detroit's Newsom with 14 and two, Cincinnati's Derringer with 16 and nine and Walters with 16 won and eight lost.

Others with outside chances are Washington's Leonard with 12 and 10, Chicago Cubs' Claude Passeau with 12 and 11, Cleveland's Al Smith with 12 and five, Philadelphia Phillies' Hugh Mulcahy with 12 and 12 and Brooklyn's Whit Wyatt, perhaps the National league's "hottest" pitcher now, with 12 and nine.

She's a Tomboy Of First Water

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 27—(CP)— Verna Lee Stone, 13 and small for her age, is Louisville's only girl caddie.

Freckled and red-haired, she is known to golfers merely as "Red" and she's good at ball-hawking and at the game herself. "Red" is a regular fellow — a tomboy of the first water. When it is cold she'll get out and rough it with the boys in a football game. She's equal in strength to most lads of her age at softball and she often cleans house at marbles.

Verna got her start at seven, when she became the only caddie at a private course. Later she graduated to another club. Her best score to date is a 42 for nine holes and her low at 18 is 88. "Red" has a natural swing and her tee shots average around 150 yards, except during dry spells when she often knocks one for 200. She gets in about three rounds a week.

She wants to be a champion and has plenty of determination to make the grade some day.

MANAGER VITT SMILES UPON HIS ACE SLUGGER

One of the reasons that the Cleveland Indians are maintaining first place in the American league is the slugging of Hal Trosky, who is pictured here shouldering a load of bats while Manager Oscar Vitt smiles benevolently at his ace slugger.

Damage Suffered by Britain's Armed Services and Multiplex Commercial System Almost Nil

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 26—(CP Cable) — It is almost three weeks since Hitler started unleashing heavy aerial blows against the United Kingdom but the damage suffered by Britain's armed and multiplex commercial system—the vital sinews of war—is little more than a pinprick.

Until Hitler has managed to cripple one or other of these, his attempt to deliver a knockout blow via the sky must be regarded as a failure.

And it is that to date, regardless of the Nazis' bombastic communiques on the Luftwaffe's thrusts and over-dramatized news reports emanating from England itself.

During the week-end raiders levelled large-scale attacks at the London area, bombed the central part of the metropolis for the first time and rained bombs on the industrial midlands for several hours. But nowhere were the casualties large or the damage great.

The London area and the midlands are among the most populated districts on this island of teeming millions. It would seem that even bombs loosed at random would be bound to cause havoc. But the categoric statement that damage in either area is not great can be made following an inspection of parts of London which are scarred a trifle by bombs and a survey of official government reports from the midlands.

I have been privileged to see highly secret reports after word from Canada of sensation stories on raids reaching the Dominion via the United States, causing a misconception of the true state of affairs in Britain.

Only 175 Dropped

The official British communique, borne out by the minute details I scanned, read: "It is now known that during last night's raids on towns in the midlands some casualties were caused, a few people being killed. Municipal, industrial and residential property was damaged."

The German statement on the raids spoke of tons of bombs being dropped during attacks on airplane, munitions and other factories. It implied wholesale destruction of plants from which British war supplies are now pouring in an ever-increasing stream.

The official government details—and it must be remembered that the government hardly can keep the details from itself—showed less than 175 high explosive bombs dropped over an industrial area covering approximately 4,000 square miles in seven hours of intermittent attacking.

Production Not Curtailed

Almost without exception, reports on industrial plants which are damaged included the reassuring statement "production will not be curtailed." In one instance where a plant roof was wrecked it was pointed out that production would be below normal for a few days until the roof could be replaced. The night shift could not operate without lights and the lights could not be turned on in a roofless plant to shoot an inviting beacon into the sky.

In all the far-flung midlands the total casualties would not have taxed to capacity a Canadian street car and the fatalities among them totalled about 25 per cent.

In Saturday night's raid on central London a small block of buildings one mile from the office of The Canadian Press housing concerns in no way connected with the war effort was gutted by fire. There was not a single casualty.

Less Than Dozen Killed

The raids over the metropolitan area, which stretches 15 miles in every direction from the heart of London, struck down fatally less than a dozen out of the millions upon millions who live there.

I drove through the streets of Ramsgate after Hitler's air arm had showered that east coast seaport with explosive and incendiary bombs throughout Saturday's daylight hours. An American news agency correspondent reported that "hundreds of private homes were demolished."

I counted far less than 100 houses which could be classed as demolished and the official reports from Ramsgate authorities agree. Sure, a great total of civilian property was damaged, but much of this has no more than the windows blown out and the slates lifted from the roofs or a shrapnel hole through the wall.

Workers' Houses Suffer

Bungalows and workers' houses were the heaviest sufferers in the raids. The closest thing to a military objective destroyed was the gasworks.

A stroll among the people who suffer hardship and loss in such raids and the song "There will always be an England" becomes the golden truth.

A grey-haired seafaring man of 65 stopped poking among the ruins of his humble bungalow to predict: "If our boys can smash one of Hitler's war plants for every 500 English homes he destroys we will soon have him where we want him."

The neighbors had to take him in. He said he'd build again "right where the old place stood."

SPEAKS FOR GOLF COURSES

London—(CP)—The Minister of Agriculture considers indiscriminate ploughing up of golf courses to make them impracticable for landings of enemy aircraft is unnecessary.

Declare Nazi Subs Trailed Their Ship Until Fog Intervened

Toronto, Aug. 27 (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. John Boham, among 86 war guests who arrived from England during the week-end, said Monday that German submarines trailed their ship until fog concealed it. "I think we sunk one submarine with the depth charges our ship let loose," Mrs. Boham said.

The couple, staying with their son, John Jr., said English people are so unperturbed by air-raid alarms that some sleep in their air-raid shelters to avoid being awakened by the wail of sirens.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was sewing on her electric sewing machine and I was crawling under her bed to see how it would feel to be a stream line train going through a tunnel, thinking, G, wouldn't I feel lucky if I found a dime under here?

Wich I didn't, or even a cent, and I thought, I bet if I was Lucky Leroy Shooster I'd of found something but G wizzickers, the way it is, even if I had of found a dime ma would proberly of made me give it up, that's the kind of luck I have, so what's a use?

And I started to wonder what really would of happened if I had found one, and I said to ma, Hay ma, is findings keepings under a bed?

Findings is never keepings if the owner can be found, ma said. What did you find? she said, and I said, Well G, ma, I didn't absilutely say I actually found anything.

I knew you didn't say so, but I know you of yore from passed experience, ma said. Was it money? she said, and I said, Well if it was, ma, I mean supposing it was a dime under a lot of old dust that might of been there for years, could I keep it, ma?

There's no dust of the ages allowed to settle anywhere in this house, and as a matter of fact I dropped my bag on the floor this morning and some change strewed out and I thought I got it all but a stray dime must of strayed under the bed, ma said. So kindly hand it right over, she said, and I said, But Jimminy Chrissmas, ma, I didn't find any. I just asked you so I'll know what to expect in case I ever do find one under there, I said.

Sounding as if she felt unlucky for not getting a unexpected dime back and making me feel partly lucky for not finding one and having to give it right up.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 27 —(AP)— Both buyers and sellers continued to make idle gestures in today's stock market.

The list got off to a hesitant start in dealings that were in touching distance of a 24-year low. Scattered leaders managed to tack on inconsequential gains but as many were on the losing side or unchanged near the fourth hour.

Among resistant stocks were Sperry, Anaconda, Kennecott, North American, Pullman, Texas Corp. and Great Northern.

Backward were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Westinghouse, Pennsylvania and International Nickel.

Canadian issues generally were inactive. Canada 4s, in the Bond Market, dipped slightly.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 27. —(CP)—Gold stocks worked up a little enthusiasm today on Toronto Exchange Other groups were unchanged to slightly lower. Volume expanded to 106,000 shares.

Broulan was the trading feature and the price firmed 6 cents or more on a report that the directors might shortly authorize a dividend. Kerr-Addison, Central Patricia, Wright-Hargreaves and Madsen were narrowly higher. Waite-Amulet, down 20 cents to $3, showed about the only change in base Metals.

Mild weakness was displayed by the Industrials. C.P.R., International Pete and Walkers common were slightly lower.

Plane Searches For Missing Men

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 27—(CP)—An airplane left Sudbury today to comb the Manitoulin area for John Currey, 18, and Bill McGinnelty, 16, missing since Sunday when they left Blind River for Gore Bay in a motorboat. The plane will search the south shore of the mainland, east of Blind River to the mouth of the Spanish River.

Judge A. B. Currey of Gore Bay, father of one of the youths, said the boat carried enough gasoline to cover approximately 70 miles and was confident that the boys had merely missed their course on one of the many small islands in the area.

A plane scoured the north shore of Manitoulin Island yesterday.

Eggs and Butter Advance in Price

Toronto, Aug. 27—Brisk demand and a growing scarcity of top-grade supplies combined yesterday to give egg prices their biggest one-day increase of the current year to date on the Toronto open produce market.

A-large eggs, which traded Saturday at 29c to 30c in the graded section, rose sharply to 34c yesterday. Other prices in this group were as follows at the close: A-medium eggs, 33c; A-pullet, 26c; Grade B, 23c and Grade C, 16c. The advance was so sudden that dealers didn't have time to properly adjust prices to the retail trade before the market closed. Consequently, top-quality eggs in some instances sold to retailers at the same price level that wholesalers were buying their stocks at the close of trading.

Demand for eggs was very keen and receipts of A-grades were scarce. Country dealers were asking prices higher than buyers seemed inclined to pay. A premium of 1 cent was obtainable during the afternoon on shipments of government-inspected eggs.

Butter advanced in both sections of trading. The odd sale of first-grade Ontario creamery solids was made at 21 3-4c early in the day, but the price later moved to 22c. Offerings were very light. Demand was not heavy but showed some improvement from last week. No. 1 creamery prints sold to retailers at 23 1-4c to 23 3-4c, up 1-4c from Saturday.

REAR-END CRASH RESULTS IN DAMAGE TO LIGHTER VEHICLE

Considerable property damage resulted to a motor car on Pinnacle Street shortly before noon today when the vehicle collided with the rear of a truck, as both vehicles were proceeding in a northerly direction. Maurice Compton, Toronto, was driving his automobile behind a truck, driven by Bruce W. Hunt, of this city. Mr. Hunt stopped suddenly to pick up a passenger, while Mr. Compton could not bring his motor car to a stop in sufficient time to avoid a collision with the rear of Mr. Hunt's truck. Detective Fred Isard investigated and found that damage amounting to over $75.00 resulted to the radiator, grill and headlights of Mr. Compton's car, while the truck was only damaged about the rear fender.

PLAIN ENGLISH

Board Sets Record

Mayor La Guardia expressed belief the board set a record by getting down to work yesterday after only 6 1-2 minutes devoted to opening formalities and exchanges of courtesies.

"We got right down to work and we used plain English," he said. "We decided at once to abandon the complex and involved language of diplomacy and to get down to real issues."

He said the board was permanent and would function as long as necessary to complete the task assigned to it. "And I can assure you there will be no minority report from this board," he added.

While the board is sitting in Canada it will be presided over by Col. Biggar, Canadian section chairman, and in the United States Mayor La Guardia will be the presiding officer.

Appointed Last Week

The board, with six members from each country, largely representative of the armed services of both countries, was appointed last week following the meeting at Ogdensburg, N.Y., between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, when agreement was reached on this method of studying mutual problems involved in maintaining safety of the northern half of the western hemisphere.

No details of the deliberations or agenda were made public. It was understood the opening session was devoted to a presentation by spokesmen for both countries of their ideas of immediate defence problems and what was expected of the board in the way of recommendations.

Technical assistants will be attached to the board for advice and it is possible some visits will be made to sites of proposed Canadian defence bases which may be handed over to the United States for establishment of army, navy and air forces.

Translate Doctrine Into Action

"This is the Monroe Doctrine translated into action," said Mayor La Guardia when he and Col. Biggar submitted to questions by Ottawa correspondents at a reception given late last night at the American Legation residence by J. Pierrepont Moffat, United States Minister to Canada.

In the presence of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Defence Minister Ralston, members of the board and government officials, Mayor La Guardia discussed the objectives of the board and cleverly parried questions which he believed should not be answered.

United States defence forces were "nothing to brag about" at the moment, he said, "but they will be in a few weeks." He said there would be no scarcity of United States aviators "when the time comes."

Mayor Parries Question

"Would it be impertinent to ask what you mean by 'When the time comes?'" asked a correspondent.

"Yes," Mayor La Guardia replied.

Study of Atlantic defences provided "plenty of mileage" for the board at the moment, Mayor La Guardia said when asked if the Pacific Coast was also being considered. He said the board was restricting its studies to the purely practical questions of defence as distinguished from economic and material arrangements which might be necessary as between the two countries.

"On one thing there is uniformity within the board," he said. "We do not expect any foreign power will obtain a foothold on the western hemisphere."

Either late today or some time tomorrow the board is expected to adjourn and meet again at an early date either in Ottawa or Washington.

Members of the board were hastily summoned from important official tasks in the United States and Canada and will require some time to arrange their duties and responsibilities before devoting their full time to the new activity.

WIND-BLOWN BILL IS OVERTAKEN

Canadian currency rose sharply on the Belleville market this morning but as the money rose only before a stiff breeze and not on the trade board it caused no flurry of excitement on the part of the market "bears."

A market vendor had his cash box weighted down with some paper bags on his display table when a sudden gust of wind caught the papers and sent the money box crashing to the pavement. Away went one of the bills scudding across the market with the farmer in close pursuit of his "folding money," while his wife calmly picked up the scattered coins lying on the pavement. After a short chase, however, the bill was overtaken by the owner and restored to a safer place.

Armed Gunmen Rob Youth of Money In Father's Shop

Toronto, Aug. 27—(CP)—An armed gunman held up Milton Wright, 18, in his father's hardware store here last night and escaped with between $40 and $50, leaving the youth bound hand and foot.

Milton told police that two men entered the store and one of them drew a revolver and said "this is a stick-up". The gunman's hand shook, "evidently from the effects of drinking," the boy said.

NEW STYLE RAIDS

Despite the great "nuisance" of the night raiders, comparatively few casualties and only scattered instances of damage to private property were reported. But for the first time the Germans used the mass raid at night, sending forty bombers against one northeast town, where they demolished two shops and killed at least two persons.

Little Damage Done

The government said bombs fell "on one district on the outskirts of Central London," but "little damage was caused and the number of casualties was small." Other bombs fell in the suburbs.

Several inmates of a poorhouse in a southeastern town were killed in that town's worst raid of the war, and a number of casualties also were reported in the Midlands, where there were three heavy night raids.

Meanwhile, Britain's own bombers were busy carrying the war to the enemy. The Air Ministry announced that "R.A.F. bombers delivered a successful attack upon a number of important military objectives in Germany and Italy last night."

(The Italian admitted hits on the Fiat factory at Turin. Berlin had a 40-minute alarm in the night.)

Nazis Employ New Technique

The Germans in a new technique accounting for the record length of the London raid employed a force estimated at 50 planes which flew high over the capital at regular intervals singly or in small groups, chain fashion.

Some of the raiders, far above the balloon barrages, kept as high as 20,000 feet—almost four miles—and appeared as silvery specks as anti-aircraft searchlights picked them out. They kept coming, approaching London from the south and circling over the metropolitan area and then departing, apparently only to appear later again at a scheduled interval.

Despite their great height, two of them were brought down in flames by anti-aircraft fire in the London area.

Comparatively Few Bombs Dropped

Relatively few bombs were dropped considering the length of the raid and damage generally was believed small. Whistling bombs were dropped in one London area. German bombers also spent one of their busiest nights of the war outside of London, attacking a coastline of over 500 miles from northeast to southeast England and along the south coast to southwest England and penetrating inland to the Midlands.

The raiders roamed singly or in small groups, in some cases striking repeatedly at a single point in a manner similar to that of the "chain raid" on London.

They concentrated for several hours on one southwest town, for example. The planes came over at regular intervals, sometimes singly and sometimes several at a time, and dropped a large number of high explosive and a small number of incendiary bombs.

Air raids precaution officials considered the damage small in relation to the intensity and length of the raids although property was destroyed and there were a number of casualties, some fatal.

Previous night raids have included simultaneous thrusts at widely scattered points, with each attack lasting only briefly.

"Chain Raid" for Nuisance Value

Many observers thought the "chain raid" was executed for its nuisance value—to keep Londoners from sleeping and to hold up production. With this new technique comparatively few planes were employed and yet London's millions were kept under continuous alarm for most of the night.

The all-clear signal was sounded about 3.40 a.m., slightly more than an even six hours after the first alarm. (Censorship prevents publication of exact times.) It was the third air raid of the day for London and the seventh since Saturday morning.

London Not Still During Raid

Whatever the Germans hoped for with the new style raid, London was not still. Through the entire attack some traffic continued to move and, although millions sat in air raid shelters, many stayed on street corners to watch the searchlight display and whatever else they could see of the raid.

Theatre crowds sang and danced and there was much singing in the shelters as Londoners "made a night of it". In one west end theatre the audience remained in their seats and saw an entire second performance.

The Germans also attacked the Midlands last night, where fires were started and industrial property was damaged in two towns and some persons were killed, and in the northeast and southeast of England, where first reports indicated damage was slight. One bomber was brought down in the Midlands.

At Least 46 Nazi Planes Downed on Monday

These raids capped yesterday's unusually intense warfare all over Britain, when at least 46 German planes were brought down. The government listed 15 British planes as missing with 11 of the pilots safe.

Houses were damaged in London suburbs in last night's raid, but casualties apparently were few.

A bomb demolished a house in one London area. Air raid wardens dug the occupants from the debris. The householder was killed but his wife and two other occupants survived.

There were several casualties in the neighborhood. Two were taken to a hospital and the rest were treated at First Aid posts.

One Associated Press employee telephoned his office from his suburban home that he and his wife had arrived just 10 minutes after a bomb fell 10 yards from their home. The explosion shattered all the windows, shooting splinters of glass into the walls like arrows. One corner of the brick house was blown away.

Fourteen bombs fell in this neighborhood but there were no casualties.

Convalescent Patients Taken to Trench Shelters

Convalescent patients in a London hospital were taken to trench shelters during the raid and others too ill to be moved out of the building were placed on mattresses under their beds. The hospital was shaken by the explosion of two bombs in the vicinity but no damage was done to it.

One of the attacks on the fringe of a London suburb was made by a dive bomber which loosed three comparatively light bombs. The only damage was done to roads, in which craters were dug, and to an indoor bowling green building, the glass roof of which was smashed.

Windows, Doors Damaged

In another London suburb four bombs fell in a residential district, breaking windows and blowing in doors. Little other damage was reported.

In a southwestern town, described as having had its "worst raid of the war," two bombs fell on a poorhouse, killing several people and injuring several.

A number of casualties were reported from a midland town which had three heavy raids during the night. High explosives and incendiary bombs were dropped.

There were a number of reports of persons being machine-gunned from the air during raids in the midlands and the southwest, but only one death was listed. Several were reported wounded.

Buildings were demolished in one coastal town and a woman was killed. It was feared that other bodies might be buried under the debris.

At another town in the northeast a large number of houses were razed, but only five persons were injured. Incendiary bombs fell over a wide area.

LONDONERS SING,

At the Hippodrome, Prime Minister Winston Churchill's son-in-law the comedian Vic Oliver, organized an informal "songfest."

Like New Year's Party

At Price's theatre Arthur Riscoe called for "partners for the girls," and Generals, Royal Air Force officers and Naval men stormed the stage. Riscoe said it "was more like a New Year's party than an air raid."

Aircraftman H. Kapinsky of the Royal Canadian Air Force, who was selling shoes in Cleveland, Ohio, six months ago to earn money for a musical education, was the life of the party at the Hippodrome, where he got a chance to display his tenor voice by singing "Irish Eyes are Smiling."

Family groups had singing parties or played cards in air raid shelters.

Many persons caught away from home when the sirens shrilled their warnings went without supper because the large restaurants closed their doors during the raid. Regulations compelled pubs to close also, but cafes and milk bars remained open and did a rushing business.

Hundreds Stay on Street

Hundreds, defying possible danger, remained on street corners to watch the spectacle as search lights and bursts from anti-aircraft guns lighted the skies. Many walked leisurely home when they were unable to get transportation.

Buses and taxis reappeared as if by magic when the all-clear signal finally was sounded at about 3.40 a.m.

I had a half-hour's ride in one from a hotel in the western residential district to Fleet Street while the raid was at its height. Whenever we came near anything that looked like a military objective the driver, who seemed to know his way by instinct in the blackout, pushed the accelerator down to the floor and took the corners on two wheels.

Bus Passengers March to Harmonica Music

When we reached my destination he seemed to lose all interest in speed and sauntered off to the nearest shop for a cup of tea—although the sky still was bright with pyrotechnics.

Henry Jackson, an Associated Press employee, was in a bus en route to the office when the air raid warning sounded. Escorted by the bus conductor, playing a harmonica, the passengers marched off to an air raid shelter singing "Tipperary" and "Pack Up Your Troubles in the Old Kit Bag."

They continued the journey when the conductor announced "Jerry seems to have buzzed off," but it took Jackson five hours and 20 minutes to complete a 10-mile journey that normally takes an hour.

Internment Camp in Germany Described by Released Prisoner

Organizer of U.S. Volunteer Ambulance Corps With French Army Says Camp 'Short on Food'

MUCH ENTERTAINMENT

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, JR.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 27 — (AP)—"Short on food and water but long on entertainment" is the description by an American of a German internment camp where he was held for three months.

The former prisoner is Alfred Raymond of Chicago, one of the organizers of the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps which served with the French army.

Raymond and three comrades — Murray Shipley of Cincinnati; Louis Wehrle of Ft. Wayne, Ind., and Marcus Clark of Hollywood, Calif.—were released from the camp near Dresden last Friday and reached Geneva yesterday. They had been prisoners since they were captured at Montcomet, Northern France, last May 17.

"Our camp, which was divided into three parts, contained 18,000 French, Polish and Belgian officers and men," Raymond said.

'Seldom Thirsty, Almost Always Hungry

He said the entire camp depended for its water supply on a town of 6,000 inhabitants and water therefore was limited.

"We were seldom thirsty," he continued, "but almost always hungry.

"Daily rations were a fifth of a loaf of bread, small rations of soup, one vegetable and sometimes coffee. That wasn't enough for active men, but I suppose the Germans were doing the best they could."

Raymond said the Germans apparently were speeding up delivery of mail to prisoners, although "naturally everything is censored."

All the prisoners pooled what news they received in letter from France into a bulletin which was read at each night's assembly, he said.

DISAGREE OVER PAISH'S WORDS

U.S. Isolationist Senator and British Financier Give Versions of What Was Said

Washington, Aug. 27—(AP)—Senator Burton Wheeler (Dem.-Montana), United States Isolationist leader, and Sir George Paish, British economist, disagreed today as to just what Sir George said about his connection with the entry of the United States into the first Great War.

Wheeler's account, which brought demands in the Senate yesterday for Sir George's expulsion from the country, was to this effect:

Sir George visited him at his office a few days ago. During the conversation, the economist asserted:

"I am responsible for getting this country into the last war and I intend to get it into this one."

Sir George's Version

Sir George, on the other hand, said this was what happened:

He called on Senator Wheeler. In the course of their talk he mentioned that, as a British financial adviser during the last war, he had "placed information at the disposal of my government." This information was subsequently turned over to the United States by the British government and its character was such, Sir George asserted, that it influenced the decision of the United States to enter the conflict.

Senator Wheeler, presenting his version of the incident to the Senate, said he had told Sir George that his "I am responsible" assertion was a "broad statement." The economist, he said, thereupon "qualified it to the extent of saying, 'well, everything short of war'."

Isolationist's Comment

Senator Carter Glass (Dem.-Virginia), another Isolationist said that "if any Englishman were to come to my office with any such proposal I would drive him out, and I think any Senator of self-respect should have driven him out."

He added that "the Senator should have taken steps to acquaint the officials of this country with this man's behavior and if there is not a law to put him out, he should be put out anyway."

Senator Ernest Lundeen (Fl.-Minnesota) said that Sir George was an "emissary" of Great Britain and "should be deported."

London, Aug. 27 (CP)—A foreign office spokesman described Sir George Paish today as an "elderly gentleman with a distinguished past" who is in the United States on private business and "has no authority to speak for His Majesty's government."

SMELT INCREASE IN LOCAL WATERS

Fish Liberated in Great Lake Waters a Few Years Ago

South Bay, Aug. 27—Commercial fishermen report that smelt are on the increase in local waters. These fish were liberated in Great Lake waters a few years ago, and are caught in large numbers in Lake Michigan, but not until recently are they becoming more numerous in these waters.

Tomato Crop Damage

Some farmers in this district suffered damage to their tomato crops by a heavy frost Friday morning. Vegetables in many local gardens were killed by the sudden drop in temperature, and it is believed to be one of the earliest frosts on record.

Fisherman's Paradise

Bass fishermen inform this paper that catches of fish taken from Point Traverse waters have been fine, and during last week many beauties were landed by Izaak Walton followers. Mr. and Mrs. Halton Bly and Mr. and Mrs. Folds of Rochester, N.Y., are guests at the "White House" this week. Mr. Bly is an ardent angler and has taken many a large one from these waters.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A six-hour single-file German air raid on London—apparently an imitation of British raids months ago on north German harbors and airports—appeared today to have had little effect, while reports were carried by the British Broadcasting Corporation that the Royal Air Force had bombed buildings in the Willelmstrasse.

The BBC's report, heard in New York soon after the Air Ministry and the German High Command mentioned raids on the German capital, said bombs had fallen among government buildings in the group which includes Hitler's ornate chancellery.

Other important military objectives in the Reich received their usual nightly visits and six tons of R.A.F. bombs were dropped on Italian military factories, including the Fiat motor plant at Turin, in the north, and a magneto plant not far away.

Germain Raids Failures in Comparison

Germany's raids on Britain in comparison appeared failures although there were some casualties. They kept some Londoners out of bed until extraordinary late hours for them—the raids did not end until around 3:40 a.m.—but persons became fed up and went home to bed despite the fact the all-clear had not sounded.

Those with more staying power remained in theatres, danced, sang or stood around the streets watching the searchlights pick the planes out and the ground defences hammer at them with anti-aircraft shells.

Police and A.R.P. officers sought to discourage such practices without much success, but Wembley A. R. P. men contrived to make money to buy more Spitfires for the R.A.F. by demanding sixpence a head from those who would not take cover. It was a sporting venture to a lot of Londoners to pay sixpence for the risk of having their heads knocked off and the response was reported good.

Why R.A.F. Marksmanship so Good

Many observers have been wondering why R.A.F. marksmanship in raids over Germany appears so much better than retaliatory marksmanship, especially when the British fliers have to go much farther to reach Germany than have Germans taking off from France to reach Britain.

The answer, in the opinion of some, lies in the superior preparations the R.A.F. made during the days when they were carrying out leaflet raids and people were calling it a "phoney" war. There were also many photographic flights over German targets which since have been blasted.

It may be recalled that German air activity against Britain in the early stages of the war was confined to raids on Scapa Flow, the Orkneys and the north of Scotland. They resulted in some damage to naval craft and mortality amongst rabbits and sheep.

Nazis Given No Chance to Photograph

The enemy raiders in those days were chased unmercifully by Hurricanes and Spitfires of the R.A.F. and had little or no opportunity to do much photography.

On the other hand the R. A. F. photo raiders of that time seemed to have little trouble with ground defences or enemy fighters. Their casualties were small and they returned with remarkable pictures, many of which were published. The fact they were able to obtain such pictures indicated they were not hard pressed. One of the essentials to good aerial photography is level flight, which means comparative freedom from attack.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Diurnal wind changes! Although not always discernible, there are progressive changes in wind direction during the day. The explanation is that the wind blows away from the warmest region, because the sun's heat expands the air and causes it to move outward. In the morning on almost calm days, the wind will be in the east, in the forenoon in the south, and in the late afternoon in the west; or as some say, "the wind follows the sun" At night there are return currents

These diurnal shifts are obscured by strong cyclonic winds but they do strengthen or weaken these winds according to their motion at the time.

ENEMY PLANES OVER PORT SAID

First Raid of War Over This Port Causes No Damage Nor Casualties

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 28—(AP)—Alexandria, British naval base, and Port Said, at the northern entrance to the Suez Canal, were raided by enemy airplanes early today, but no damage was caused and there were no casualties, a British naval communique announced.

It was the first raid of the war upon Port Said, which is guarded by the British fleet in its control of the canal and by British land forces in military agreement between Britain and Egypt.

Alexandria frequently has been attacked by Italian planes. The communique said:

"The commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean announces: An air raid over Alexandria and Port Said took place early this morning. There were no casualties and no damage was caused."

A dispatch direct from Alexandria said that this Egyptian port, at which the British fleet is based, had a 17-minute air raid alarm at dawn during which "foreign" planes flew over the city, but dropped no bombs.

COAL MINE BLAST KILLS 10 MEN

Explosion in Mine in Arkansas Occurs 1,700 Feet Under Ground

Bates, Ark., Aug. 28—(AP)—Ten men, the entire night crew of the Bates Coal Corporation mine, were killed by an explosion deep down in the slope-type shaft here a few minutes after they went to work late yesterday.

State Mine Inspector J. W. Fitzjarrell of Fort Smith pressed an investigation in an effort to determine the cause of the blast which occurred approximately 1,700 feet under ground.

The mine is a few miles east of the Oklahoma border. Ben H. Bedwell, mine manager, said the miners appeared to have been killed instantly.

Joint Defence Board's Task Most Important Piece of Work

New York Herald Tribune Says Necessity to Have Joint Plans is Urgent

IDENTITY OF INTEREST

New York, Aug. 28—(CP)— The New York Herald Tribune said today the Canadian-United States Joint Defence Board is engaged in "one of the most important pieces of work being done today" to hold the bridge over which war may come to the North American continent.

Reviewing the "conversations in Canada," The Tribune said "the facts are so plain, the necessity to have joint plans ready, joint bases prepared" is so urgent that few, even isolationists wish to interpose any objection to the board's work.

The editorial said:

"The identity of interest between the two countries is so obvious, the necessity which would compel the United States to defend Canada — whether there had ever been a Monroe Doctrine or not, whether the President had ever made his Kingston speech in 1938 or not—is so imperative, that isolationist sentiment, which has cavilled at so many other essential defence measures, has hardly criticized the appointment of the joint board....

"The very fact that Canada is a nation at war is no argument against this action; it is the overwhelming argument for it. This paper has made no secret of its belief that American relations with the British Commonwealth is the first point for present action in defence of the United States. Because we believe Britain to be the last bridgehead of democracy in Europe we have urged the dispatch of the world war destroyers and the lending of every other aid which can help to hold it. Because Canada has become the bridge itself over which war may reach this continent, we have urged not simply military conversations but a full treaty of mutual assistance and any other action that will hold the bridge, and tell the world in time that the bridge will be held. That is the work on which the joint board is engaged It is one of the most important pieces of work being done today."

HON. C. A. DUNNING TO BE CHAIRMAN

Former Minister of Finance Will Head Subscription Committee for Second War Loan

Ottawa. Aug. 28—(CP)—Hon. Charles Dunning former Minister of Finance, will be chairman of the National Subscription Committee for the second war loan, a post which he filled with the first war loan, Finance Minister Ilsley announced Tuesday

Books for the second war loan, in which a total of between $250,000,000 and $300,000,000 will be sought will open Sept. 9.

"We are delighted that Mr. Dunning has again agreed to assume this responsibility," said Mr. Ilsley. "Mr. Dunning carried out his task with distinction and success in our first war loan campaign and it is a matter of satisfaction that we can again have the benefit of his years of experience in this work."

The first war loan was issued in January when $200,000,000 was sought. The loan was heavily oversubscribed but subscriptions were accepted for only the amount announced, in keeping with the government's policy of recent years.

EVACUEES KILLED IN GARDEN

London, Aug. 28—(CP)—One of those killed in last night's air raids on England was a 12-year-old boy who had been evacuated from London for a "safer" place in southeast England. The boy and a 18-year-old girl were killed when a bomb fell in the garden of the home in which they were living.

FIVE BARNS AT ONTARIO HOSPITAL HAMILTON, BURN

Conflagration Spread So Rapidly Firemen Could Not Check Blaze

PRESSURE LOW

Hamilton, Aug. 28—(CP)— Fire which started in a horse barn, destroyed five large barns at the Ontario Hospital, Mount Hamilton, here this morning.

The conflagration spread so rapidly that neither asylum crews nor city firemen could check the blaze. The fire finally burned itself out after destroying one of the largest barns in Southern Ontario and four other big frame structures on the asylum property.

Originating in the horse barn, which houses about 20 teams which were in the fields, the flames jumped to the huge cow barn, also empty of animals. This soon blazed fiercely and the flames then enveloped three other barns and a threshing outfit.

All the buildings were heavily stocked with hay and grain. A large supply of oil cake for the cattle created a tremendous heat and smoke.

Water pressure was so low that firemen were unable to get near enough to the flames to play their hoses upon them and were compelled to stand by while the conflagration burned itself out.

No early estimate of the loss was made, but it is expected that it will run into tens of thousands of dollars

They said also that about the same time a Rumanian plane was fired on by a Russian pursuit plane but escaped into the clouds

In another aerial clash two Soviet planes were reported shot down yesterday by six Rumanian fighters.

1,400 CHILDREN ALREADY MOVED

Minister of Resources Gives This Information at Press Interview

Ottawa. Aug. 28—(CP)— Some 1,400 children have been moved from their homes in the United Kingdom to Canada under the "assisted" or government scheme, Resources Minister Crerar announced Tuesday.

The Minister said the majority of children now in Canada had come on transportation provided by parents or friends and came to homes offered by relatives in Canada. He was now glad to say that the government scheme had got underway.

Mr. Crerar spoke over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, introducing R. Keith Jopson, British Liaison Officer with the Canadian Advisory Committee for overseas children.

"In several thousand Canadian homes there are tonight," he said. "British children who have arrived in Canada within the past four months—almost half of them within the past 30 days. Thousands of additional homes have been offered and we hope within a reasonable time to receive children to fill these homes."

Reports received, he said, showed that the children received were of excellent type. "I bespeak for these children a place not only in the homes but also in the hearts of our people."

"Some publicity was recently given in the press to the arrival in Canada of a six year old Scot who, while not lacking in either physical or mental vigor had not yet learned to obey I trust that the climate of Canada, plus the firm hand of a grandfather to whom he was destined, will work wonders for this lad from the land of the cakes and heather."

ACTORS CONTINUE TRAINING

Toronto. Aug. 28—(CP)—Three motion picture actors who passed initial tests in the Royal Canadian Air Force at Ottawa arrived here last night to continue their training at the manning depot. All British subjects, the actors are Patric Knowles, Robert Coots and Colin Tapley. They went to Ottawa from Hollywood several weeks ago and joined the Air Force as aircraftmen.

Some Aliens in U. S. Line Up 10 Hours Before Registration

Washington, Aug. 28 —(AP)— Some aliens lined up 10 hours before the registration offices opened, others brought their own interpreters in eagerness to cooperate, and one individual wanted a duplicate set of his fingerprints to hang "in the parlor," as the United States job of registering approximately 3,600,000 aliens got off to a good start.

Reports from local officials in major centres throughout the country indicated that business was brisk on the opening day of registration yesterday. Several points reported that unexpectedly heavy initial demands exhausted their supplies of registration blanks, and in some cities registrants had to be told to come back another day because of overtaxed facilities.

Registration offices said non-citizens volunteered expressions of approval for the program, and there was competition for the distinction of being the first to register. Clerks in New Jersey found non-citizens "touchy" about the designation: Alien. Use of the word brought the protest: "Me? I'm an American."

Third Division To Concentrate In the Maritimes

Artillery Range to Be Acquired at Tracadie N. B.— Division to Be Fully Equipped

Ottawa, Aug. 28—(CP)—Canada's 3rd Division will be concentrated in the Maritime Provinces between Oct. 1 and 15, Defence Minister Ralston announced at a press conference today.

The division will be fully equipped with motor transport, field guns (18 pounders), Howitzers and Lewis or Bren machine guns. An artillery range has been acquired near Tracadie, N.B.

By Dec. 15, the Minister said, the 4th Division will be fully equipped with motor transport and armed with Howitzers and field guns, although units of the division will be at their various training centres.

Front Line on English Channel

In high good humor, the Minister began the conference by saying, "our front line is on the English Channel and our drive is to put everything we have there even if it means going short over here.

"The 1st Division is over there and I don't want anybody to think it is simply training. It is ready to take part in any show that comes along.

"The 1st Division has now an allotted and specific task. It has already been chosen for five jobs. It had not been called upon to do them because of necessary changing of orders by the High Command. This was before the present phase of the war.

Present at Phase

"We get too much into the attitude, 'what's that fellow (Hitler) going to do next?' The present is just a phase which is to be followed by a (British) offensive. We can't tell when or where but the Canadians will paly their part as well then as they are doing in active defence.

"I am tremendously bucked up and as a matter of fact I have cabled McNaughton (Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Corps Commander) to that effect this morning."

FIVE SOUGHT FOR CRACKING SAFE AT KINCARDINE

Toronto, Aug. 28—(CP) — Provincial police officers are reported to have traded shots today with five alleged safe-breakers in a wild chase that led from Brampton, 15 miles northwest of here, to Toronto. The men are wanted for cracking a safe at Kincardine.

One of the men in the bandit car is believed by police to be toting a sawed-off shotgun. The car itself was found abandoned in Toronto, punctured by six bullets. As far as was known, none of the fugitives was wounded.

An alarm was spread through Ontario after a gang broke into the Murray Creamery at Kincardine and stole a safe containing $400 from the loading platform. Two boys saw them flee in an automobile and district police at Walkerton were notified.

Provincial Constable Ray Hodgson and Traffic Officer Fred Herman of Brampton spotted the wanted car and pursued. The shots were fired on the highway south of Brampton.

SUICIDE VERICT RETURNED

London, Aug. 28—(CP)—A verdict of "suicide while the balance of her mind was disturbed" was returned today at an inquest into the death of a 73-year-old woman who asphyxiated herself during London's six-hour raid alarm Monday night. The husband said his wife had been in poor health.

TWO GERMAN WAR PRISONERS ESCAPE PRISON CAMP

Non-Commissioned Naval Officer and Airman Leave Under Cover of Darkness

FIRED ON BY GUARDS

Toronto, Aug. 28—(CP)—The intelligence section of Toronto military headquarters received a report today that two German war prisoners who escaped from an internment camp in Sudbury district last night had been surrounded.

Search for the men—Theodor Steyrer and Hans Kibart—was carried on by skilled bush trackers, called in from Manitoulin Island and other points, by Mounted Police, Railway Police and prison guards. It led through rock, bush and lake country. Once the men were sighted and fired at, but not recaptured.

Steyrer had been wounded in the thigh and knee when originally captured in England and guards on the scene reported their belief that he was hit again last night.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant, who criticised delay in announcement of the recent escape of Guenther Lorentz from another Ontario prison camp, expressed satisfaction today at the promptness with which Ottawa announced the present break-out.

Ottawa, Aug. 28 —(CP)— Two German prisoners of war escaped from an internment camp in the Sudbury area late yesterday after being partially buried by their companions in a trench in the recreation grounds during a football match, Defence Minister Ralston told a press conference today. They are still at large.

Confronted with these additional escapes, the Minister said he took

Vichy Discloses 'Rebellion' In French Africa

Petain Government Calls It 'British-Inspired Rebellion' in Chad Territory

Vichy, France, Aug. 28 —(AP)— The Petain government disclosed today what it called "a British-inspired rebellion" in France's African Empire.

The government declared that "all necessary dispositions have been taken to localize the situation."

(Gen. Charles de Gaulle, the leader of all free Frenchmen, announced yesterday that the Governor of Chad, French territory in the heart of Africa, had notified him of a decision to fight on at the side of Britain, rather than yield to the Vichy government).

The "rebellious situation" arose, the announcement said, when the military Governor of the Chad region, Col. De Larmina, went to British West Africa after making contact with Gen. De Gaulle.

It was not made clear whether the Chad "rebellion" had spread to other regions of French Africa.

JACK McLAUGHLIN HOOKS FINE 'LUNGE

While casting for bass at Chisholm's Rapids last evening Jack McLaughlin, well-known Belleville angler, hooked a 12-pound maskinonge, which he is proudly displaying to his friends today. Jack was angling with Ab Wonnacott, when he made his strike. "I was extremely lucky to land my strike as the safety hook on my bass hook broke just as I hauled the muskie into the landing net. Fortunately the hooks of the lure caught into the landing net and made the fish secure, or I might not have landed the first 'lunge' I've caught in two years," admitted Mr. McLaughlin today.

SPRINGER SPANIEL IN CITY POUND

A chocolate and white colored springer spaniel dog was found wandering at large by County Constable Thos. Thorne, custodian of the city dog pound yesterday. The canine, a valuable dog with a long tail, is confined to the dog pound and will be destroyed tomorrow unless claimed by its owner today. No dog tag was found with the animal to establish ownership, however.

CONSTRUCTION STARTS ON R.C.A.F. SCHOOL

Construction work will begin this week on the buildings and hangars for the Air Gunnery and Bombing School which is being built as part of the British Commonwealth Air Training Scheme, according to a news item in the Picton Times.

The contract totals nearly one million dollars and calls for the completion of 42 buildings and several minor lean-tos with November 15th set as the date of completion.

It is estimated that at least five hundred men, the majority of whom will be carpenters, will start work almost immediately. In time it is expected that probably as many as 700 men will be employed.

Upon completion, men of the British Commonwealth Air Training Scheme from England, New Zealand, Australia and various other sections of the Empire, numbering an estimated 836, will arrive periodically to complete their training. It is also expected that 70 different types of aircraft will be lodged in the Picton airport.

POTATO PRICES LIKELY TO RISE

Farmer's in the city today forecast a rise in the price of potatoes due to the ravages of recent frosts. NOT COMPULSORY FOR INDIANS TO REGISTER SAYS G. H. STOKES, M.P.

Owing to a slight misunderstanding which in some cases arose over the decision of the Indian Department to permit Indians to register under the National Registration regulations Mr. George H. Stokes, M.P., for Hastings South, brings to our attention the fact that it was not made compulsory for Indians living on reserves to register. Registrars were instructed to register such persons when they came in but it was certainly not made compulsory, stated Mr. Stokes.

This, of course, referred to Indians living on reserves and receiving the Government Bounty. When not residing on a reserve, Indians were required to register and such persons must be in possession of a registration certificate when seeking work outside.

34TH BATTERY GOES TO PETAWAWA

Carrying on the traditions of their predecessors who, in the past, as one of Canada's crack artillery units, have won many military honors, the 34th Field Battery, R.C.A. N.P.A.M., of Belleville will leave this city for training camp at Petawawa early next week, according to information received at the unit's headquarters here this morning.

The local unit is in command of Captain W. E. Hare, of Cobourg, who has many years of military service. Second in Command is Lt. D. H. Prink with B. S. M J. Stock. The Orderly Room Sergeant is Sgt. Layton Thompson.

The boys will continue training on Thursday and Friday evening of this week until they proceed to camp early next week. They are all looking forward to the training period of from Sept. 2nd. to Sept. 15th. at Petawawa and are all in fine fettle for the period of elementary training at the famous military camp.

Police Blotter

Edwin Welch, 426 Bleecker Ave., reported a minor accident to city police last night but was unable to identify the party concerned. Mr. Welch was driving his motor car westerly on Emily St., when a lad on a bicycle rode out of the nearby Canadian National Railway yards and crashed into the side of Mr. Welch's motor car.

The motorist stopped immediately but the lad picked himself up off the street and remounted his bicycle to ride away apparently uninjured and before Mr. Welch could ascertain his name. The matter was immediately reported to police, however.

Motorcycle Patrolman Harry Caldwell found a motor car, which had apparently been abandoned on Highway No. 2 east of Belleville late last night. Subsequent investigations revealed the vehicle had exhausted its supply of petrol and the driver was merely away endeavouring to replenish the same.

Only three transients sought shelter at the police station last night, there being a marked decrease in the number of transients patrolling the province since National Registration went into effect city police revealed today.

COUNCIL GRANTS A.L.I. $1,000 AT SPECIAL MEETING

Money Will be Used for Recreational Equipment and Personal Comforts for the Personnel

OTHER BUSINESS

At a special meeting of the City Council held in the City Hall on Tuesday night, the members voted the sum of $1,000 to the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Battalion before their departure on Monday for training at Petawawa for a period of 2 weeks. The vote was unanimous on grant provided and session was a short one as this was only business of importance to be decided. Mayor Glencoe Thompson was in the chair and City Engineer Charles A. Mott was acting City Clerk, Mr. Wilfrid Holmes being called from the chamber before the business was concluded.

The recommendation proposed by Ald. Eddie Logan and seconded by Ald. Harry Rollins stated: "Recommended that the request of the Commanding Officer of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Battalion for a grant be acceded to and that a grant of $1,000 be made to provide recreational equipment, personal comforts and other necessities which are not provided for by the Department of National Defence." The members were fully agreed that this grant should be made as nearly all the members of the Battalion are Belleville born or have lived in the city for some years. The money granted will allow the boys to have plenty of recreation and personal comforts during their sojourn at camp.

William Dix of the permanent staff of the Public Works Department was granted leave of absence with pay in order to allow him to attend the military camp with the A.L.I. from September 2nd to Sept. 16th.

The City Engineer was instructed to demolish the city owned dwelling listed as 32 and 34 Great St. James Street at once. There being no further business the council adjourned.

Ald. A. M. Kennedy, Chairman of Fire was welcomed back to his seat in the council after a lengthy and serious illness. Ald. Kennedy is again feeling fine and ready for a fall of hard work in the interest of the city.

Thomas Hallam, C. N. R. Engineer, Retires Wednesday

Thomas Hallam, C.N.R. engineer and Great War Veteran has completed his last run and from now on will live retired after completing 28 years of service with the company augmented by a number of years of railway service with the Midland Railway in England before coming to Canada. Mr. Hallam on completing his last run on Tuesday afternoon was met at the North Station by veteran and active engineers in the service and complimented on his faithful service and wished happiness and good health in the years to come.

He entered the service on June 17th, 1912 as a fireman and was classed as an engineer in 1915. On February 5th, 1917 Mr. Hallam enlisted in the skilled Railway Corps of the Canadian Army and until the close of hostilities in 1918, piloted an engine in France. He returned in 1919 and immediately assumed his duties as a fireman but was quickly promoted to engineer a position he has held for many years with distinction to himself and the company he represented. Mr. Hallam has pulled freight trains east and west out of the Belleville terminal and was well liked both by officials and the employees with whom he served. "Tom" as he is familiarly known is an ardent Britisher and will have plenty of time to devote to veterans' activities as well as reminiscing with other retired engineers of a life that has passed them by.

33,000 REGISTER IN THIS RIDING

3,008 Males, Single and Widowers Between Ages of 19 and 45 Eligible for Military Training

Approximately 33,000 persons registered in the electoral district of South Hastings during the period of National Registration which was completed last Wednesday according to information given out by Registrar Col. W. R. Rierdon, this morning.

Of this number there were 3,008 males between the ages of 19 and 45 inclusive, who are eligible for compulsory military training. In Belleville there are 1,023 males, single and widowers without dependents, who are liable to be called up for military training, 592 in Trenton and 102 in Tweed.

Thurlow Township had 296 eligibles, while Hungerford comes next with 278. Sidney is third in line with 230, while there are 209 in Tyendinaga.

The greatest predominance of males eligible for compulsory training comes within the younger age groups but registrars stated they were surprised at the number of single males and widowers without dependents in the older age groups. The numbers of eligible males in each age group for the entire electoral district ranges from 331 for the 19-year-old class to a low of 28 for the 44-year-old class.

Almost a gradual decline in the numbers of males in each progressing age group is noted with the biggest jump being between the 25 and 26-year-old classes.

Argyll Infantry to Parade In Complete Battle Dress

Route March Planned Previous to Unit Leaving for N.P.A.M. Camp at Petawawa

OFFICERS NAMED

Appearing for the first time in their khaki-colored battle dress uniforms, the officers and men of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank), nearly 600 strong, will parade in Belleville on Friday night. It will mark the first time in the city that a Non-Permanent Active Militia unit has paraded in full battle dress since the inception of the N.P.A.M. in Canada. Lieut.-Col. A. B. Gribble will be in command when the unit parades.

Following Friday evening's parade, over a route of city streets, 375 officers and men of all ranks will be named to attend an elementary recruit training camp at Petawawa military training centre, it was officially announced this morning. "The entire unit will not be taken to the elementary training camp at Petawawa at this time, our quota being 375 men and officers for the initial fall training period of the N.P.A.M. However, we hope the remainder of the unit will be afforded this privilege at a later date", stated Lieut.-Col. Gribble to The Ontario Intelligencer today.

Conventional Dress

The new uniforms with which the Argyll Light Infantry has been equipped consists of the conventional Canadian Army battle dress, military shoes and berets. Friday evening's dress parade will be headed by the two battalion bands, brass and pipe.

The senior officers who will be in charge of the Argyll Light Infantry during their two-week training period at Petawawa will include Lieut.-Col. A. B. Gribble O.C., Major B. C. Sisler, Company Commanders—Captains Weese, Lazier, Cameron and Keele, Major H. Alford as Adjutant, Captain Fred Douglas as paymaster, Captain A. H. Ketcheson as Quartermaster and Hon. Major Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne as Padre. Other subordinate officers to train with the unit will be named later, it was stated.

Wheels of Industry To Turn as Usual

The wheels of Belleville industry and business will be kept rolling along the usual channels during the next two weeks despite the fact that upwards of five hundred of the city's non-permanent active militiamen will leave the city for the regulation two-weeks period of camp-training.

A survey of a number of factories and places of business today revealed that "business as usual" will be the slogan, with help to replace that of the absent employees secured wherever possible.

Employers are co-operating fully one hundred per cent with authorities in keeping the wheels of industry rolling. In a number of instances important key-men will be absent through necessity of the training period, but employers are rolling up their figurative shirt-sleeves and making the best of the temporary inconvenience.

One prominent manufacturer has six of his employees leaving with the troops, "but production will go on as before," he said.

Other places report a similar condition, but the co-operation of other employees, especially girls and women will be such that actual business will not be affected as seriously as in other centres of the province.

Employers as a rule made little or no comment on the situation, but the consensus of opinion "between the lines" was indicative of wholehearted co-operation with the military authorities.

Churchill Thanks Montreal Donor For Gift to Nation

London Aug. 28—(CP) — Prime Minister Churchill today sent a message of thanks to J. W. McConnell, Montreal publisher, for his $1,000,000 contribution for the purchase of aircraft to be known as "McConnell's Squadron."

"I learn of the act of generosity with which you honor your nation and sustain our common cause," said Mr. Churchill of the gift, which was announced last Saturday.

"May I express my admiration of a magnanimity matched to this hour of purpose and resolve. Hard-tried and enduring, the people of Britain know well that their brothers are numerous, powerful and true."

BELLEVILLE DISTRICT FAIR

The swing of the season has brought again the annual fair of the Belleville Agricultural Society. With its opening on Thursday there will begin the latest of a long series of exhibitions which have done so much for the community, the countryside and the city. At one time there was a lapse of interest in the fair but with the securing of new grounds and the construction of modern buildings suitable for a fair of the size which should be possible at Belleville as the centre of a rich agricultural district, the fair has moved forward at a steady pace.

This year, when some agricultural societies decided they would not hold fairs on account of the war which absorbs so much of the attention and thought of the world, Belleville Fair Board followed the usual custom of holding a fair, feeling that a fair can do something to help along the war effort by demonstrating the progress of the farming community in particular as well as the part that industry is playing in the furtherance of Canada's determination to lend every aid to the cause of Great Britain.

The thought of the war dominating every action and every thought of the people, naturally the war effort will be paramount in the minds of those who attend the exhibition this year. The fair will demonstrate something of the riches of Canadian agriculture and the gathering of the people will have the result of stimulation of effort.

It has been made very clear to Canadians that much depends upon her agricultural production, upon the production of the mines and forests, upon the intense use of every resource which can be utilized in strengthening the military arm of Great Britain.

Patrons will see every evidence of the great dairy interest in the Bay of Quinte section and dairying in this part plays a large part in the contribution to the common cause.

This is a war year fair. The presence of khaki and the blue of the Royal Canadian Air Force will be the outward demonstration of the spirit which is moving all the people of this district as of all other districts in Canada.

Here they will see the richest of all the resources of a community, the people themselves, who are the backbone, the source of all progress, which the fair will demonstrate.

A fair is a community spirit, one of the finest mass demonstrations possible. In wartime that spirit is more intense in its glow.

Citizens of the district will, the officials and directors realize, support their efforts this year.

AUGUST 1939 AND AUGUST 1940

These last days of August recall the days of grave anxiety which brought last August to a close. Midnight of August 31st last year came with the bitterest promise ever offered to mankind—the assurance that nothing could stop Hitler from plunging into war the nations of Europe. Everyone recalls the reports of the intense activity of the chancelleries of Europe in the days before as it was at last realized that the peace of the world would be butchered by the nazi leader.

A few short hours later Adolf Hitler sent his legions and air force over the Polish boundaries to "punish" the Poles as he said—really to crush them and wipe them from the face of the earth. Today after Poland that was is divided between German and Russia and the Poles are either scattered abroad or living in lowest slavery under the merciless rule of the Huns, a German tells other Germans that the Pole is the servant of the German. Mass shifting of population proved the Hitler lie. His aim was to crush Poland.

In those last days of August 1939, mankind read the writing on the sky of the world that Britain and France would battle the Germans on behalf of the Polish people. Man saw that the peoples which had been overrun or would be overrun would have as their champion the British Isles. So it was no surprise when Britain on September third threw down the challenge to Adolf Hitler. It was no surprise when Canada and the rest of the Empire rallied to the Empire's cause in a chain of strength across the world..

Last August the world finally realized that another era was to come, a dread era, that of war, which would change the routine of the lives of the people and of individuals, and in time would vastly change the future course of all the history of the world. For it was clear that the democracies had to fight against the spirit of evil and destruction, represented by the Germans. It was also clear that Britain, having unsheathed the sword, would never sheathe it again until righteousness was dealt out to the world.

Today that Britain still stands the citadel to which all the world, neutrals as well as overrun peoples, look for deliverance from the horrible threat of the unspeakable Hun. Today Hitler stands blockaded by British sea power, pounded and blasted by the greatest air force in the world for its achievement and bravery, he is defied by the people of the heroic little isles, who taunt the gross aggressor from Germany. This Hitler cannot see the end of the war as he wished it, he can only see himself sadly and fatally behind his schedule marked out for conquest of the world. He can see the danger to him of new movements, new mischiefs afoot which threaten him. Hitler as aggressor after a year is still the victim of the laws and fates that pursue all aggressors, the people and the world he would conquer are too big for him for that glorious company comprises not only the people fighting against him, but the spirit of justice which animates humanity in the mass.

It is nothing new to say that Adolf Hitler bears the curses of the world upon his infamous head. Human justice is such that he is doomed—he, that man, that would have doomed all, could he have upset the balance wheel of life. After a year of the most dastardly demonstrations of national degradation in the tactics and spirit of German nazism Hitler has got no farther than the channel. In fact with mighty British raids over the channel, his highways, communications, his plants, preparing death for the British and the rest of the world, are themselves consigned to destruction by the heroic airmen of the Royal Air Force. It is the people from beyond the sea, the people in the British Isles, that will wash away Hitlerism and Nazism. The men from the tight isles of Britain will drive back the monstrous creation of nazism.

Britain plans an offensive when the time is rife. When will it come? Where will it come? No one knows. But it will come and then will come the revenge for the nations who now are bound by Hitler. They will rise and aid the great deliverer and emancipator nation, Britain, in striking the chains of slavery from every nation.

Petain Was "Told off"

By Field-Marshal Sir Archibald Montogmery-Massingberd, in the Navy (London).

The surrender of the Bordeaux Government came as another unpleasant surprise to most people in England, but as a matter of fact, once Petain entered the Government some such development was to be expected.

At the Doullens Conference on March 26, 1918, at which Foch was appointed generalissimo, Petain tried to let us down in a very similar manner, and wished the French army to retire to a position covering Paris, leaving us to face the German onslaught alone and allowing the Germans to separate the British and French armies. I have seldom heard a senior general "told off" in public as was Petain by Foch on that occasion! But Foch was a great gentleman, and treachery was completely foreign to his nature.

Weygand's part in this sad affair is most difficult to understand. He was always a most loyal friend to us in the last war. One wonders what Foch will have to say to him when they meet again in another world!

Taking Ways

(Australian Press Bureau)

Australian soldiers during the last war achieved something of a reputation as souvenir hunters. When recently the Anzacs arrived in England, and King George drove up to inspect them, the royal chauffeur became suspicious when he saw a group of privates showing signs of interest in the car. So he quietly removed the gilt mascot and three small royal standard flying from the radiator cap, remarking meaningly: "I know you chaps."

The group moved away disconsolately, but half an hour later a smiling Anzac appeared with one of the royal standards stuck in his hat band. How he "souvenired" it no one knew.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Causes of Rheumatism and Arthritis

Now that vitamin B1, as found in fruits, vegetables, peanuts, ham, yeast, wheat germ is so successful in the treatment of rheumatism (muscles and joints) and arthritis (joints) there may be some patients who do not continue the use of heat in its various forms. Heat is always helpful because it increases the circulation of blood to the part and removes wastes and broken down tissues.

Also, since the discovery of B1, there has been a tendency to depend entirely on its use instead of avoiding the starch foods known to aggravate arthritic conditions.

Further, and this is more serious, patients and occasionally physicians also, fail to continue the search for the cause of the rheumatism and arthritis, and diet treatment and even heat treatment do not relieve the symptoms. More than ten years ago Dr. Ralph Pemberton, Philadelphia, and Dr. A. A. Fletcher, Toronto, showed that starch foods were an important factor in causing and aggravating rheumatism. Dr. Pemberton pointed out also that, generally speaking, arthritis is not inherited but is most likely to occur in slender persons with flat chests, weak backs, and prominent abdomens. Parents may therefore prevent, to a large extent arthritis in their children by having the children taught to stand and sit correctly and eat the right foods.

In Hygeia, a few years ago, it was pointed out that tiredness, bad position or posture while at work, mental worry, exposure to cold and wet, and a generally run down condition tend to so break down resistance to rheumatism that when any illness such as influenza or cold, or infection such as may exist in the root of a tooth or in tonsils occurs, then rheumatism successfully attacks the body. "It is difficult for many persons to realize that even if they are in good health, a tooth causing no symptoms such as toothache may, nevertheless, be the cause of serious disease".

Another cause of arthritis is a bad bodily make-up or posture which interferes with the proper action of the various organs of digestion—liver, stomach, and intestines, —constipation being nearly always present.

The thought is that while vitamin B1 is of great help in preventing and curing arthritis, these other factors—tiredness, infection, and bad posture—should not be forgotten.

Red Sky Over London

There has been no more terrible portent in this war than the blood-red sky that hung over Central London this week. A single German raider, flying five miles above the city's defenses, dropped a load of incendiary bombs. A shower of spark and flame shot up from a loft building near St. Paul's; the cathedral dome was silhouetted against the glare, and other fiers soon were glowing around the black horizon. This was a nightmare coming true, for it was the first German attempt to start a conflagration in the heart of London, the first experiment of its kind in lighting the way for bombers over blacked-out England.

The nightmare of incendiary bombs has haunted civilians and their leaders in every great city that has feared air attack in this war. The British Government, in particular, has devoted as much thought to the peril of fire as to the destructive blast of high explosive. To cope with such indiscriminate arson by the enemy, the British fire brigades have been expanded out of all recognition. In the first week of the war more than three thousand London taxi drivers volunteered to attach trailer pumps to their cabs. Their first call came this week. The volunteer fire-fighters and the professionals worked like heroes, we are told, and the fires were put out in "a short time." As dawn broke over London, our correspondent cabled, "the dome of St. Paul's swam on the sky, as always." But if one plane with one load could paint the London sky red, one wonders with a shudder what hundreds of such raiders could do. Will the dome of St. Paul's still be there? Will its Cross still stand as a benediction to the millions who live within sight of it? Will anything be left of Europe's monuments to the human spirit if this air warfare is carried to its suicidal conclusion?—N. Y. Times.

Britons Getting Balanced Ration

(By F. H. Mottram, M.A. (Cantab.) Professor of Physiology in the University of London, and Head of the Department of Dietetics and Physiology, King's College of Household and Social Science, Kensington, London.)

The British as a race are intolerant of interference, particularly of State interference with their habits and customs. This is especially so with their habits and customs concerning food. The Englishman abroad appears lost and unhappy without his breakfast bacon and his tea, and hotels on the Continent of Europe which hoped in the past to attract his patronage had learnt that among other things they must provide a colorable imitation of the English breakfast and of afternoon tea.

None the less Great Britain has cheerfully submitted to a wartime scheme whereby butter, bacon, meat and sugar, and now tea, margarine and cooking fats are rationed. Much of the butter, bacon, meat and sugar and of course, all the tea consumed in the British Isles comes from overseas, and in normal times a great proportion of shipping space is required for the transport of these goods and of wheat. Today much of that shipping spoce is needed for the transport of armaments and the raw materials of armaments, and less is available for the transport of food.

Rationing has been introduced not because there is a shortage of the food materials rationed, but because of the need of building up stores of the less perishable food commodities to meet any possible emergencies in the future. It is not a case of "pulling in one's belt" because there is not enough to go round, but because precaution suggests a need of preventing overconsumption at present so that there may be enough in the future if special circumstances arise.

Everyone in Great Britain is provided with a ration book containing coupons for rations up to a stated maximum amount of each of the foods mentioned above. At the present time each person is allowed to draw up to 4 oz. of bacon, 8 oz. of sugar, 2 oz. of tea, 6 oz. of butter or margarine, and 2 oz. of cooking fat. Meat has been rationed on a different principle, viz. by price rather than by weight.

Every adult may have up to the level of 1s. 10d. worth per week of the rationed cuts of meat. Not all meat is rationed, for tongues, heads, oxtails, liver, hearts, kidneys, lights and tripe are unrationed; so are forehocks, chowls, and picnics of bacon, and pigs' "trotters". Sausages, meat pies and brawns are also unrationed. It will be noted that, with the exception of butter and margarine (which for the duration of the war is to have vitamins A and D included in it to the level of a good summer butter), no foods rationed belong to the category of protective foods. The rationed foods are all foods which can be dispensed with altogether without loss of health.

The avowed policy of the British Ministry of Food is to secure for Britain a sufficient supply of food, either from overseas or through home production, to see that the food produced and imported is suitable for the high strain under which the population may be going to live, to arrange for equitable distribution of the scarcer foods, and to ensure that the price of food should be such that all sections of the public can buy it. The import program of foods has been deliberately built up on food values.

Thus, though the total food imports were down by 12 per cent. the calories the food imports represented were down by 1 per cent. only and that one per cent will be more than amply covered by the increased home production of such foods as potatoes and oats. The necessary cut in the ration of butter has been offset by the vitaminisation of the margarine. Such a food as sugar is inessential in diet, as all dietitians agree.

• • •

On the other hand the consumption of milk is to be stimulated by the reduction of its price to half of the current price to expectant and nursing mothers and to children under the age of five of all classes. In necessitous families milk will be granted free. All school children in the elementary schools can obtain milk at less than half-price. The cost of this supply of milk at much less than its market price is to be borne by the Treasury. Further, the price of other protective foods, such as cheese and herring, has been pegged at definite maximal levels for each food, again by Government subsidy. The production of home grown vegetables on farms and allotments has been stimulated, so that the loss of vitamins due to the restriction of butter consumption will be more than offset.

The fact of the matter is that war conditions will be utilized to induce the inhabitants of the British Isles to consume a diet more in accordance with the findings of modern dietetics than has been the custom in the past. The British populace will increase its consumption of the protective foods such as milk, cheese, fruit and vegetables and decrease its consumption of the less necessary foods in diet, such as sugar, bacon and meat.

In all its system of rationing the Government is being guided by the advice of dietitians and the convener of a Cabinet sub-committee on rationing is himself an agriculturist and dietitian of world-wide renown.

Another and important reason for rationing is to ensure a satisfactory distribution of essential foods to everyone. If food has been unrationed and prices not controlled, it would have resulted in the poor, on account of poverty and lack of storage accommodation, being deprived of essential foods. It has been calculated that without government control of prices by subsidy, the price of food would have risen by 30 per cent, whereas it has risen by but eight per cent.

This leaves out of account attempts which might have been made by the rich to hoard the less perishable articles of food. The rich and middle classes have been compelled by rationing to share and share alike with the poor. In the case of milk, the Ministry of Food's policy has gone even further and they are attempting to remove any stigma of pauperism attaching to the grant of free milk.

Hand-in-hand with this policy is one of preventing the consumption of luxury foods, and hotels and restaurants frequented by the well-to-do are to serve fewer courses and less elaborate dishes. The Government, which is spending some £60,000,000 a year in subsidizing food is bound to ensure that the foods so subsidized should go to the people who most need it.

The whole of the British Government's food policy is really an amazing economic and dietetic experiment and is utilizing the stress of war-time not so much to cut down the consumption of the gross amounts of food consumed as to use them to develop the resources of food production in the direction of increasing protective foods — which Great Britain is particularly favored by soil and climate to produce—and to convert the inhabitants of that land to a more healthy and rational diet than they had consumed (like every other industrial nation) in times of peace.

According to the Spanish national radio "famous Napoleon treasures from a Paris museum and the Invalides" are being "removed" by road for transference to Hitler's Berchtesgaden residence. A fico for your "removed"!—"Convey, the wise it call." And it must be admitted that by common report there was a good deal of "conveying" done in the last war by certain representatives of the German High Command. The speciality of the Crown Prince (alias Little Willie) was reported to be clocks; and everywhere that Willie went (at any rate among the chateaux of Northern France) the clock was sure to go. That method of taking time by the forelock is evidently beneath the attention of the Nazis. As might be expected they raise the art of conveying to a bigger and better business, and Adolf sends home the whole contents of Napoleon museums in plain vans labelled "Berchtesgaden: To Be Called For."

He may yet decide to steal the tremendous marble mass which rests above the actual tomb of Napoleon in the Invalides, and which moved Mark Twain to the reflection: "Well, I guess you've got him. If he gets away from there you may cable me at my expense." But that was to underestimate the Nazi capacity for spoliation and undeniably grand larceny. Mark Twain was not altogether an uncritical admirer of the human race, but if he had lived into our era his ideas of villainy would have been notably enlarged.

Some of the articles of historical or artistic interest that were "conveyed" during the last war were afterwards ordered to be restored as a result of specific demands enshrined among the "Reparation" clauses of the Versailles Treaty. Thus the Louvain Library had to be reconstructed, the Van Eyck triptych from Ghent had to be returned from the Berlin Museum, and leaves of the Last Supper triptych from St. Peter's, Louvain, brought back from Berlin and Munich. It was also ordered that "the original Koran of the Caliph Othman" should be restored to the King of the Hedjas within six months of the signing of the treaty.

RECORD NUMBER CAPITAL CASES SLATED FOR TRIAL

Eleven of Fourteen Cases in Ontario Concern Murder Charges

Toronto, Aug. 28—(CP)—Ontario judges and juries will hold the lives of 14 persons in the balance when a record number of capital cases come to trial at the Fall assizes throughout the province. The first of three courts open at Guelph, Sarnia and Toronto Sept. 9.

Eleven of the charges are murder, two of them involving mothers charged with killing their babies. Three Toronto men face the possibility of death in connection with an appeal by the Attorney General against their prison terms on charges of rape.

So heavy are the dockets that Attorney General Gordon Conant appealed this week to all officials to expedite trials and thus free jurymen and witnesses for essential wartime occupations. Never in the recent history of Ontario have there been 11 murder trials docketed.

A full court of five judges will sit at the opening of the Appeal Court of Ontario at Toronto Sept. 9 when the conviction of the Toronto men of rape charges involving the wife of a soldier, then stationed at Ottawa, comes up for review.

The Attorney-General is asking for the death penalty against Larry Hill who received life imprisonment and 20 lashes; David Hill, a brother, 15 years and 15 lashes; and Tony Bello, life and 20 lashes. The trio first appealed the severity of their sentences and the Attorney-General ordered a cross-appeal.

Two men of the Canadian army were involved in the murder case transferred for hearing from Welland to Guelph. There, Pte. William E. Moulton will be tried for the slaying of Pte. Arthur Phillips. Moulton is alleged to have shot his fellow-soldier with a service rifle after an argument.

One of the more spectacular cases promises to be that of Fred Thain, charged at Belleville with killing an elderly farmer, Arnold Wellman and his wife, Nancy. Belleville has a second murder trial listed, that of Alice McFarlane, charged with the recent slaying of her 18-month old son, Gordon Archer. Her husband, Robert, is similarly charged but has not been committed for trial.

Gordon Ross Matthews will go on trial for his life at Brampton for the killing of his wife whose body was found in a creek west of Toronto. At Bracebridge a young domestic, Delphine Caldwell, is charged with murdering a new-born baby whose body was found in the bathroom of a doctor's home where the girl was employed.

Murders of passion where men were involved in drunken brawls will be reviewed at other centres. Among these cases are the following:

Sarnia—Peter dePaepe charged with killing Harry Taylor; Stephen Kiyoshk charged with killing a fellow-Indian, Jerry Blackbird.

Toronto—Rex vs. Carl Woverentz, involving the murder of William Linik.

Kenora—Lucian Portier, accused of slaying his brother, Clement Portier.

Stratford — James Crawford, charged with the murder of Amber Carter.

Goderich—Rex vs. Sam Dodge in the murder of James Kilpatrick.

In addition to the capital cases, two criminal cases of extraordinary interest are listed for trial. At Kenora, J. E. Bower, a former Winnipeg Postmaster, faces a charge of criminal negligence arising from injuries suffered by Grace Crawford, struck by a power boat driven by Bower.

At Haileybury two officials of the Wolf Lake Mine, D. F. Pidgeon and E. T. Wride, are charged with manslaughter in the death of Clifford William Carter, a miner who was asphyxiated. They are said to have illegally operated a gasoline engine in the mine.

Gasoline Poured On Damaged Trucks

Calgary, Aug. 28 (CP)—Thoroughness with which Canadian troops who went to France smashed their trucks to prevent them falling into the hands of the enemy was described today by Cpl. D. Ure, Calgary, and Pte. Ralph Davis, Innisfail, Alta.

The trucks were driven at full speed into each other, flattening the radiators and twisting the frames, they said. The engines were smashed with axes and finally the gasoline was drained, poured over the trucks and set on fire.

SWISS PROBLEMS ACUTE THRU WAR

Little Republic is Trying to Sidestep Totalitarian 'Squeeze Play'

By Charles S. Foltz, Jr.
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 28.—(AP) — Democratic Switzerland is trying to sidestep a totalitarian "squeeze" play—at least until the final outcome of the war is clear.

The Swiss have the only democratic Republic life in Europe. They like their little confederation and they have no desire to swap it for foreign control or for a totalitarian government.

Even now most military observers believe the Swiss not only would fight if invaded on one or all frontiers, but would fight very well. The catch is that the Axis powers, as things now stand, wouldn't have to use men, guns and munitions to force the Swiss to submit to their dictates.

Live on World Trade

The Swiss not only live on world trade—they must import food and fuel for their 4,000,000 inhabitants. Switzerland has no seaports and its only communications go through France, now in the power of the Axis, or through Germany and Italy.

If the Axis chooses to squeeze—to cut off all communications into Switzerland—they can do so easily enough and at little cost. Switzerland's only hope is that they will not choose to squeeze.

One sign that the squeeze has at least been postponed is that the Swiss economic negotiators in Berlin finally signed an agreement with Germany on clearing and trade which is to extend to the end of June, 1941.

Under it the Germans guarantee coal deliveries, and coal was Switzerland's main worry this winter. German iron comes in, too, for Swiss industry.

Foreign observers in Switzerland believe the Axis may deem Switzerland, with certain minor changes, a good political unit to keep as it is guarding the passage of the Alps. Italy, they say, certainly has an interest in keeping an Independent State of tough mountain folk guarding most of her frontier with her powerful partner swollen with conquest.

Economically Switzerland already feels the squeeze of war. Certain imported foodstuffs were rationed even before war began. Coal too is rationed and so is gasoline. Prices have risen, and are still rising. Factories engaged in export have shut down or slowed up production. There are no tourists in warring Europe and many hotels have closed their doors.

American Vessels Now Have Right To Enter Combat Zones Under Conditions

Washington, Aug. 28—(AP)—Authority for American vessels to enter the European combat zone to bring refugee children to the United States has been signed into law by President Roosevelt.

Under the new act, the vessels may enter war zones otherwise forbidden by American shipping by the neutrality law in order to remove children, provided assurances first are obtained from belligerents that the ships would not suffer any molestation from their armed forces.

Germany has indicated that she may not give such assurances because the ships would be in danger from uncontrolled mines.

British Bombers Using Rhine Route To Reach Italy Says Berne

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 28 — (AP)—A flight of British bombers along the river Rhine, headed toward Italy, swung south early today indicating that the Royal Air Force now is seeking a route to Italy which would not force them to cross neutral Swiss territory.

They were still too far north, however, according to the Swiss General Staff's communique this morning. The communique reported the passage of planes both ways across Switzerland during the night and said the bombers this time only crossed the southwest corner.

Air raid alarms sounded in Geneva, Lausanne, Neuchatel and Yverdon in French-speaking Switzerland.

Letters From the Troops

The following letter from Private R. A. Emerson, H. and P. E. Regiment", Somewhere in England" was received recently by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Emerson, residing in Fort Erie:—

Dear Mother and Dad,—

Well it has been quite a while since I have dropped you a line. This is the first chance I have had, so I thought I would let you know that I arrived safely and am feeling swell. We had a very nice trip all the way. I saw some very nice places and didn't get sea sick or anything on the way over. Well for what I have seen of England so far, I think that I am going to like it very well, but of course it is nothing like good Old Canada. This is going to be a short letter this time because there isn't much that I can tell you, and I am going to mail this tonight. I'll write a letter every Sunday night and once we get started we should both get mail regularly that way. That is the way the fellows do and they say that they get mail early every week, so we'll try it eh, and see. I am sorry that I could not let you know sooner that I was O.K., but I'll try real hard to keep it up now. And I might add that I still haven't missed a church parade. I have been to one every Sunday since I signed up. Well I'll sign off for now.

Give my love to Dad tell him I am all right. Next time I'll write a bigger letter. Lots of love.

RED CROSS PLANS APPEAL TO RAISE FIVE MILLIONS

Campaign Will be Launched on September 23rd., it is Announced

NEW RESPONSIBILITIES

Toronto, Aug. 28—(CP)— The Canadian Red Cross Society will launch a nation-wide appeal for $5,000,000 starting Sept. 23, Norman Sommerville, national chairman, announced today.

"Almost all the $5,000,000 contributed during our campaign last November has been spent in meeting emergency calls on the Red Cross during the past year," Mr. Sommerville said. "Four million dollars have been spent in actual war work and $725,000 for our peacetime services."

With three emergency calls developing during the past week, including a request from the Department of National Defence to co-operate in the provision of eight convalescent hospitals in Canada, the Red Cross is faced with new responsibilities, he said.

Emergency Calls

"At our next central meeting in Toronto next week, the executive will recommend that pursuant to the request from the Department of Defence, the Canadian Red Cross should provide, equip and co-operate in the maintenance of eight convalescent hospitals in various parts of the country for soldiers invalided from overseas or at home."

An emergency call was cabled yesterday from the overseas commissioner in London, stating that 100,000 refugees who have fled to England from invaded countries, as well as thousands of evacuated children in Britain, are in desperate need of clothing.

Request For Parcels

At the same meeting the executive will place before the council a request from the British Red Cross that 5,000 parcels of food be purchased and packed in Canada every week and sent to British prisoners in Germany.

"With emergencies of this type calling for our help day after day, it will be seen readily that we must have at least $5,000,000 if we are to do the work that the people of Canada would have us do in relieving suffering caused by enemy onslaught," Mr. Sommerville said.

"Our canvassers will start out on Sept. 23 and we are urging people throughout the country to give to the utmost, with the assurance that every dollar contributed to the Red Cross will be well spent."

London, Aug. 28.— (CP)—Five secret tests left in a series of sealed envelopes by the late Sir Oliver Lodge in an effort to prove he could communicate after death with the living world were disclosed today to be things known to him alone.

A friend said Sir Oliver, scientist, inventor and spiritualist who died last Thursday, told him the tests which he would try to communicate through mediums would include:

1.—Some laughable childish idiosyncrasy.

2.—A higher mathematical formula containing at least one mistake.

3.—Names of two towns and a hamlet which had an important part of his career.

4.—Cryptic quotations from verses of three of his favorite songs and the way one of these songs played a curious part in his life.

5.—The name of a cliff near which he had a youthful adventure not known to anyone now living.

Sir Oliver left the series of sealed envelopes to the Society for Psychical Research with instructions they be opened one at a time at seances to be held at stated intervals.

Petain Gov't Admits 'Disorders' In N. Caledonia

Vichy, France, Aug. 28.— The Petain government earlier admitted "disorders" in New Caledonia, French possession in the South Pacific, whose governing council has decided to follow Gen. de Gaulle.

Referring to Prime Minister Churchill's promise of economic protection for French colonies until constitutional government is re-established in France, today's communique said:

"This is not the first time that Great Britain has sought to extend her influence under the guise of economic collaboration. . . . Without a doubt Churchill is seeking means to justify the blockade to which he has condemned the French civil population, depriving them of their colonial products".

The Petain government denied "foreign reports" (a de Gaulle announcement) that 800 French planes had been flown from French North Africa to Istres, France, for delivery to Germany.

Truck Hurtles Over Curb and Hits Parked Car

When the brakes of a truck became disengaged, an ice delivery truck in charge of Charles Smith, of this city, rolled down North Front Street hill, hurtled over the street curb at the Harvey Street intersection and crashed into a parked automobile, owned by Wm. Rosevear, shortly before noon today.

Smith was delivering ice to a North Front Street residence and had secured the brakes of his truck, which was parked at the top of the street hill. In some unknown manner the brakes became disengaged and the truck rolled down the hill, gaining speed as it progressed. At the Harvey Street intersection the speeding truck struck the street curb and turned completely over, striking Mr. Rosevear's automobile as it rolled towards the sidewalk.

The damage to both Mr. Smith's truck and the automobile were extensive, but fortunately no pedestrians were passing at the time and no personal injuries were sustained. Sergeant Arthur Harman and Traffic Officer D. Ellis investigated.

The War Today

(By Guy Rhodes Canadian Press Staff Writer).

The Nazi air fleet today adopted new tactics in its raids on the British population, virtually abandoning the explosive bomb in favor of incendiaries and drums of gasoline with detonators, apparently seeking to demoralize the people.

Auxiliary fire service brigades were kept busy throughout the night over a wide range of the country, extinguishing hundreds of fires, none of which were reported serious. However, the Nazis added variety to their attack by machine-gunning streets and dropping a few explosive bombs, killing roughly a dozen persons, including one small boy and a 19-year old girl who had been evacuated from the city to the country for safety's sake.

Raids on Germany and Italy

The Royal Air Force hit back with the usual raids over Germany and Italy in which extensive damage was reported, while the axis enemy anxiously watched a new flare-up in the Balkans which might set its back porch afire while it is seeking to attack from the front.

Hundreds were reported dead in clashes between Rumanian and Soviet forces in Bucovina, while incidents were said to have occurred also between Rumanian border posts and Hungarian troops along the frontier between the two countries.

Reports of these occurrences were a trifle vague but Germany and Italy declared they had dispatched respectively Foreign Ministers, Joachim Von Ribbentrop and Count Ciano, to Salzburg for "preliminary discussion" of a conference on the situation. Simultaneously a mixed Rumanian-Russian Commission was reported seeking to iron out the dispute in Bucovina.

Situation in Far East

Meanwhile a somewhat confusing situation arose in the Far East and British authorities at Hong Kong suspended shipping clearances for French Indo-China and recalled ships already en route to ports in that country.

The suspension was believed to have arisen as a result of vague remarks made by the new Japanese Premier, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, regarding Japan's adoption of a new "national structure" to "unite the total energies of the state and the people" so that the country might "take an active part in the establishment of a new world order."

The Prince was speaking to a group of 26 political leaders who form a committee charged with organizing the "new structure" demanded since dissolution of the old political parties which included a considerable number of Liberals.

He said further—and readers were left to guess at the meaning of this remark—that there "must be a solid nation-wide structure in which all the component parts are organized, both vertically and horizontally" but added this did not mean a movement for a political party.

Some observers believed the reference to organization "horizontally and vertically" implied an intention of preserving intact the aristocratic and oligarchic nature of Japanese society and that the speech contained a possible implication of imperialistic expansion in collaboration with the "new-world-order" totalitarian countries.

First 30,000 To be Called In Camp Oct. 9

Ottawa, Aug. 28 — (CP) — The first 30,000 men called up for 30 days' military training under the Mobilization Act, it is expected, will move into camp on Oct. 9, Defence Minister Ralston told a Press conference today. By that date they will have been selected and given physical examination.

What age class other than the 21-year class will be called up at that time will depend on the number of men this class will provide. The boards that will control the drafts in each military district will be notified of the number of men required there to provide the 39 training centres with 30,000 men.

Plans call for two training periods of 30 days each before the new year. A space will be allowed after the first classes have completed their training and before the second camps start to give departmental officials and army officers an opportunity to weigh the results of the first training period.

National War Services Department will provide transportation of the men from their homes to the training centres.

Going "Steady" at Fifteen and Sixteen

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a son 16 years old who goes "steady" with a girl of 15 years, and has been going with her for over a year. If he doesn't go to her home, her folks take her where he happens to be. She corresponds with him and doesn't want him to even look at another girl. When I tell him he is too young to go "steady", he packs his clothes and threatens to leave him. He's always been such a good boy until now and we've been good to him.

He worked on Saturdays all winter and has been making good money all summer, but he doesn't want to save a cent and spends it all on this girl. He won't even contribute toward his support and I buy all his clothes. He expects that of me and says he thinks he's old enough to do as he pleases, and doesn't have to obey his parents.

I want to teach him how to save and want him to get a good education instead of going with one girl whom he will marry at an early age. I'm so worried I don't know what to do. How can I break this up before it's too late, and get him to save money?

A Mother

This seems to be an unusually violent case of puppy love, with which you are confronted. Kids often have a flare up like that and imagine the fascination they feel at 15 and 16 is going to last forever. But alas, it's only like bubbles on a soft drink and we mothers have to have eternal patience and see them through these attacks, just as we did when they had measles and mumps. Don't nag him. Of course, he'll want to spend his earnings on her, and she'll want him to do just that. But if he's a sensible youngster he'll wake up to the fact he won't go very far in this world without a good education. Meantime, be patient.

The Slow Type

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For two years I've had a beautiful friendship with a boy of 23, but now it seems to have turned into something more than friendship. What bothers me is that he has never asked for a date. I've invited him to our house when we've had parties. He always comes and acts as if he likes me very much, and my friends think so too.

He didn't know how to dance, so I taught him all I know. I know he's home at 9.30 every evening, because we phone each other then. And he meets me after office hours and we walk part of the way home and we have those pleasant moments togther. But he never asks for a date. When we separate he says "so long", and goes home. I don't know what to make of it, do you?

Wondering

I hope this young man is as sure as he is slow. Sometimes men are like that. One of my correspondents wrote me that she'd like to set off a bunch of fire crackers under her snail-like suitor. I'm sure you know how she must have felt.

It may be that he hasn't a job, and right now is living "on the family", and has no money to spend for dates. If he has a job which gives him a regular salary, there's positively no excuse for his never taking you anywhere. If he is employed, you might pick out a movie some evening and suggest that you toss a coin to see who should treat. If he doesn't take that hint, I believe it's time to look about for someone less dumb.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Shall You Smoke Your Own Smokes

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I wish that you would be so kind as to help me straighten out a question that has been bothering my husband and me for some time. My question may seem silly or trivial, but it is important to me . . . to settle these heated discussions!

My husband and I entertain frequently and go out a good deal socially, very often with the same group of people. The men and women in this group all smoke cigarettes. All of these friends and my husband always have a good supply of cigarettes on hand, and are generous about offering them to each other.

When someone in the party offers cigarettes (the same brand I smoke), is it better taste to say, "No, thank you. I have my own", and immediately take one of my own and smoke it, or is it more gracious to accept the offered cigarette?

My husband always accepts the offered cigarette, and our friends almost always say they "have their own" and smoke their own. Which is better taste?

M. W.

This question as to whether or not to accept the offered cigarette does at first seem trivial but still it's true that most people find it definitely troublesome.

Of course, there isn't any real reason why we mayn't do as we wish, especially when we are with persons whom we know as well as you know this group of friends.

However, my own idea is that there is a graceful middle course that makes for everyone's comfort. Always to refuse the proffered cigarette, especially when it is the some brand that you smoke, seems to me a bit on the socially awkward side. On the other hand, always to accept, seems to me a bit on the "gimme" side. And this is why I consider the "middle course" advisable . . . sometimes to accept, just for the sake of graciousness, and sometimes to say "Thank you so much, but I have my own right here . . . . you've been very generous already".

Tuxedos Are Not the Thing

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

We are planning a September wedding. It is to be in the country at a Nuptial Mass. I am having a maid of honor and one bridesmaid.

The groom and the men in the wedding party would like to wear tuxedo suits for this morning wedding. (We are having a reception in the evening.) But we've been told that tuxedoes should never be worn in the morning. Would you please tell us if it would be incorrect for the men to wear their tuxedoes for this morning wedding?

We Two

Tuxedo suits are incorrect for your morning wedding. If your evening reception is to incline toward informality, it would be proper for the men to wear their dinner jackets (tuxedo) for that.

If your September wedding is very early in September, when the days are apt to be warm, the men might properly wear white flannel trousers and dark blue coats. Or, if it is your plan to keep everything on the formal side, they would wear formal day attire (cutaway coats and dark striped trousers). Or, if you are to dress informally, they may properly wear dark blue business suits.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, August 29

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

JUDGING BY the lunar transits, this day is due to show some very solid and enduring rewards and gains born of hard work, diligence, sound judgment and sustained purpose, which will attract substantial support and tokens of preferment from those in place of power, particularly in financial, political or governmental circles. It is a time to aim for such objectives, in which friendship, comradeship and high regard have importance.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year in which there may be definite gains and rewards for industry and application, steadfastness and fidelity, with sound programs and worthwhile objectives. In such the preferment and support of those in power may be depended upon not only to stabilize the fortunes but to enhance personal popularity and prestige. The social element is outstanding and influential.

A child born on this day should be industrious, earnest, faithful to its aspirations and to its fellows, who respond to its affectionate, kindly and dependable qualities and gracious social responses.

A Mother Pays Tribute

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

From British Columbia, came this:

Dear Dr. Myers: I have been going to write you again for over two years. I wrote you regarding my youngest daughter, then 22 years old, who, after an illness, had to be sent to a mental home. Your letter to me and later an article helped me "carry on" in very trying circumstances. I blamed myself as one is bound to do but perhaps as you say "We parents are often too hard on ourselves." Now that my daughter seems wholly recovered and leading a healthy normal life, I feel that I may have done a few things well and that her background and our influence for her good and happiness has helped to bring this about.

A Thankful Heart

As I look back I do so with a thankful heart and proud of my children and wonder what I have done to deserve them. We sometimes clash, as all mothers and children do, but at least they see reasons. They have decided views on many things, but as far as possible I try to respect them.

Their religion for the first part was taught by me reading Bible Stories (Hulbert's Story of the Bible, by Jesse Lyman Hulbert). I agree with you reading good books to children has a great educational value. Later education, although very good, may go to their heads instead of their hearts and induce personal selfishness.

My boy in the "flower of manhood" answered his country's call and is now in training. Before leaving he said: "Mum, I have a date with you tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock, Holy Communion." Could a leave-taking be finer? The memory of that morning in church beside my boy will remain with me always.

This mother, Mrs. Beatrice Saunders, closes her letter with one of her poems she permits me to print:

"The Designer"

Days go by when we never Question why.
Then events begin to move more swiftly!
The design of life is changed
From rosy red, to black despair.
The Designer works out a plan
Piece by piece
If we leave life in his hands!
The black, the grey, the mauve,
Then gold, back to rosy red.
Then we know the answer
To life's story,
Our minds made up to do our share!
The design is there
If we place the pieces carefully.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My daughter four years old sleeps till 7.30 every morning, and we get up at about 7. But on Sundays and holidays we like to sleep longer, though she insists on rising then at 7.30 as usual.

A. Don't expect a young child to sleep any longer on Sunday morning or a holiday than on any other day. She is a creature of habit. Provide this child with toys then and show her how she can, on waking, amuse herself without annoying other members of the family.

FASHION FLASHES

IN THE NEWS again is Persian lamb, rated one of the most important of this season's furs. A wonderful model is a thirty-two inch coat made with a full swinging back and huge patch pockets.

SET OFF your new costume with a bag that will be good right through the winter. A smart model is a huge bag done in gray, green, blue, black or purple antelope shirred onto a gilt and shell frame. Cord handles of the leather.

RIGHT THROUGH THE DAY one can wear a neat but colorful little hat. Such a model is a cushion brim hat of light gray felt, the crown high in front but obscured by the brim in back. A wide band of gray snakeskin on which is a red, white and blue leather ornament with a large gilt star provides color.

THE SHOPS ARE SHOWING new and smart evening jackets. A nice model is on flared tunic lines, fastened to the waist with a slide fastener. It has a very deep heart-shaped neckline and is trimmed around the neckline and down the front with scroll work in gold and silver thread and sequins. Blue, gray or red.

MANY A FASHION PLATE likes to set off a plain coat with elaborate fur accessories. To wear with a wine red coat one woman has ordered a huge off-the-face hat of nutria with an enormous bag of the same fur. The hat has a semi-circular line that is a flattering frame.

LONG STEMS are all the rage in dress circles. The newest frocks are slim, from pleated shoulder yoke through the hips, and end with a pleated flounce that renders an unexpected fullness. Round high neck and simple bodice to serve as a background for impressive jewelry.

Play by Summer Resident is Well Received at Marmora

Marmora — Residents of the Marmora district had the unique privilege on Monday evening of witnessing a play written and directed by a popular annual summer resident of Crowe Lake. The authoress in question is Miss Bessie Mills of Toronto and the title of her well received three act comedy-drama is "The Turn of the Tide". With the exception of Ewart Miller, the cast chosen by Miss Mills for the local presentation of her play was composed of local amateur artists, who have received praise on former occasions for their accomplishments in amateur theatricals. The play was presented under auspices of Marmora community War Workers and proceeds are to be devoted to the war work which is being carried on so effectively by this organization. Local residents showed their appreciation and co-operation by filling the Town Hall to capacity for the event. A short synopsis of the play in which all roles were admirably sustained follows: — Scenes all took place in the living room of the Fairweather home, in which unknown to Bertram, his supposed friend, Ebenezer Graham, holds all the mortgages. Ebenezer has worked for this for years and now dictates terms: Either Kathleen Bradie, Bertram's granddaughter marries his grandson, Henry, or they are ruined. Dodsworth, the lawyer, draws up the agreement and things seem to work right for Ebenezer again but he is completely fooled and thwarted by the plans of Stewart Roberts.

Cast of characters: — Mary Fairweather, Stella Niblett; Bertram Fairweather, Roy Smith; Ebenezer Graham, Dougal Sanderson; Henry Graham, Ralph Martin; Kathleen Brodie, Marjorie Stephens; Alice Cartwright, Margaret Smith; Stewart Roberts, Ewart Miller; Martha, Irish maid, Betty Kennedy; Parkes, butler, Percy Gray; Dodsworth, lawyer, Herbert Bonter.

Before the rise of the curtain and between acts, solo vocal numbers were given by J. F. Baker and Mrs. P. Gray, and duets by the same two soloists and by Mrs. L. R. Rundle, the accompanist and J. F. Baker. At the conclusion, Shirley Pritchard, young daughter of T. E. Pritchard, announcer of the evening, presented Miss Mills with a handsome bouquet of flowers and Mrs. P. Gray, president of the War Workers Association, thanked the large audience for their attendance.

Flowers on the altar and organ at St. Paul's on Sunday were in memory of the late George Percy McGarvey.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Shyness

Shyness in a child is not a normal condition, and shouldn't be too lightly regarded by parents, for it may develop a psychosis that will warp the child's whole life.

It is just as necessary for parents to cultivate a healthy mental outlook in a child as it is to build a strong, healthy body. The two things are so dependent upon each other, so co-related, that where there's a child with a strong, healthy body, we usually find that it has good sturdy, normal mental reactions and equipment. Likewise, when we encounter a girl or a boy isn't bothered with nerves, or inhibitions, we can be certain that she or he is well physically.

If a child develops some physical complaint, such as stomachache, the mother can be expected to call a doctor to investigate and treat the disorder. She is much less likely to be apprehensive if the child suddenly develops shyness, as children often do, but she should be just as alert in checking it. Just as the stomachache was a warning of physical disorder, so the shyness is a warning that something has happened to the child's proper mental development. Yet probably the majority of mothers and fathers don't regard shyness as any serious thing. "Oh, she'll outgrow it", is a favorite way of dismissing the subject.

Often the child does outgrow this weakness. But, too often, the outgrowing process isn't a success.

Such problems as shyness can be handled as sensibly and as definitely as a cold, or rather, I should say the tendency to catch colds. What you do in the case of colds, is build up the child's physical condition until he resists colds.

The same thing can be done with the child who has such mental weakness as shyness. The child gets so he doesn't like to play with others; he is embarrassed before strangers. Any attempt to force it to accept human companionship only drives it more and more within itself.

Quiet, Please! It's for Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

Noise and confusion have a deplorable effect upon good looks. Those of you who are striving to keep within finger touch of your youth and to ward off the marks of old Mister Time, should make a strenuous endeavor to live calm, normal lives. Cut down on the hectic evening parties, if you are given to trailing out for the merry evening. The strain will bring unhappy results as the years come along.

Noises of the city, loud discussions in the family circle, blaring radios, break down the nerve forces. They interfere with digestion, and for that reason the wise woman will seek a quiet place for luncheon and relax while she eats. The sensitive nerve terminals in the ears communicate their irritation to other nerves, and the whole system gets to jangling, causing fatigue. You know well enough what fatigue does to your face. Takes away all the sparkle.

The girl who works in a noisy office where much conversation goes on and telephones shrill, suffers from muscle tension. More energy is used up than would happen if she had a quiet place in which to work with no interruptions.

More and more mothers are taking their families to the suburbs to live. Good thing. They'll do their jobs better and with less effort in quiet surroundings.

As was to be expected, the pompadour is getting inflated. That's always the way. But the pomp is sweet so what matters?

More and more of the side hair is picked up, with the front locks given bounce and puffed out. The big problem is to make the pomp stay put; that has been settled for us. Makers of hair ornaments have designed tuck combs, clips, even fancy headed hair pins to use so that we won't be worrying about a coiffure that may suddenly dismantle itself.

Look these new items over the shops. Fun, even if you aren't a pompy girl and don't need them.

You know well enough what fatigue does to your face.

THE CANADA-U. S. DEFENCE BOARD WIDELYACCLAIMED

No Argument About Its Merits Only Speculation Being How Far Will it Reach

LOGICAL DEVELOPMENT

(By Ross Munro)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Aug. 28. —(CP) — The Canada-United States Defence Board Agreement is the most discussed public question here today outside Congress but there just does not seem to be any argument about its merits. Practically all groups in the capital approve the understanding and only speculate as to how far its implications will reach.

Four months ago there might have been a bitter dispute as to the value and need of such a move, observers here say. But the German push through Western Europe brought a real awakening in the United States to the totalitarian threat. Thus the agreement with Canada is interpreted here as a logical development which has been under consideration by the United States government for a considerable time.

The whole question is being handled almost exclusively by President Roosevelt and his closest advisers. "The White House is doing the job this time", was the answer to one query at the State Department as to what officials there were sharing the responsibility.

The agreement was announced more than a week ago but it still is receiving wide attention in the press here as one of the biggest international undertakings of the United States in recent years. It was major news even in the week end editions of three of the four Washington newspapers. The Post devoted almost an entire page to the history of Canadian-American relations and The Star and The Times-Herald played up the story in lengthy feature articles.

Freely Discussed

In the Capital lobbies. hotels and the National Press Club it is freely discussed in relationship to the moves to make available over-age United States destroyers to Britain and to lease British possession in the western hemisphere for United State naval and air bases.

The understanding seems popular with the citizens of the capital, the majority of whom are civil servants coming from many parts of the country, representing a cross-section of United States opinion. In a leading movie theatre a news reel shot of Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Mr. Roosevelt at Ogdensburg, N.Y., where the agreement was reached, was received with a cheer and a burst of hand clapping.

The War Department here is keeping mum about the military significance of the Defence Board but unofficially it is assumed that the key points in the defence system will be Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, the United States bases on the Atlantic, Bermuda and The Bahamas, the British Antilles and United States bases in the Caribbean and Alaska.

Monroe Doctrine Enlarged

Felix Morley, recently-retired editor of the Washington Post and brother of Christopher Morley, the author, commented on the Defence agreement in an article in The Post. An accepted Washington Commentator, Mr. Morley said the fact has now been defined that the Monroe Doctrine has been enlarged and made hemispherical in scope.

"Canada has now been brought definitely within the orbit of the Doctrine as developed by the Roosevelt Administration", he wrote. "Certainly no surprise should be occasioned if the joint defence undertaking should broaden into a Canadian-American Working Agreement going far beyond the military co-ordination announced at Ogdensburg. A pronounced intensification of commercial and financial co-operation between Canada and the United States may thus be reasonably expected".

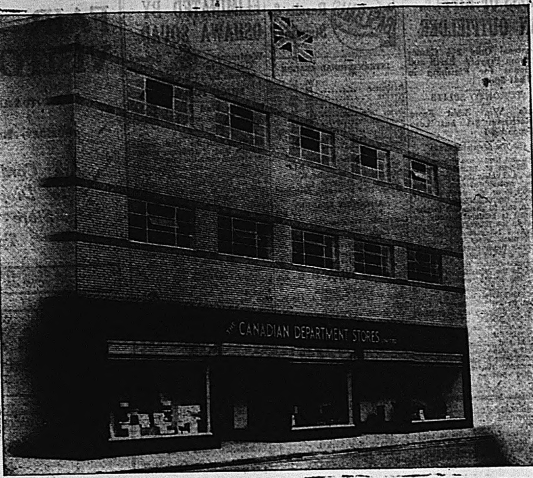
New Canadian Department Stores Building Opens Thursday



Above is pictured the new Belleville branch of the Canadian Department Stores which will be formally opened tomorrow (Thursday), Manager Correll, and his staff will be on hand to afford a cordial welcome to the shopping public of the city and district, and conduct them through the new store which, with its structural beauty, modern interior lighting, and ultra-modern shopping facilities, marks it as being one of Eastern Ontario's outstanding shopping centres. A modern business temple of steel, brick and stone, the new building is practically fire-proof, and adds dignity and architectural beauty to itsimmediate surroundings.

New Canadian Department Store is Monument to Business Progress of One of Canada's Established Firms

Architectural Beauty, Richness of Design and Decorative Motifs Feature New Building That is a Modern Transformation from Drab Appearance of Former Structure — Up-to-Date Improvements That Embody New Heating, Lighting and Power Plants! Ease of Accessibility to All Departments, and Other Shopping Facilities, Mark the New Store as One of Eastern Ontario's Outstanding Shopping Centres — Fire Hazard Reduced to Minimum With New Sprinkling System—Handsome Front With Gleaming Plate Glass and Colorful Complemental Decoration, Adds Beauty and Dignity to Business Environment — Formal Opening Which Takes Place Tomorrow (Thursday) Expected to Attract Large Gathering to Belleville's Newest and Most Modern Department Store

Rising, phoenix-like, from the ashes of its former drab self, the new Canadian Departments Stores Front Street building, which will be formally opened on Thursday of this week, is a fitting exemplification of the modern trend and business progress of one of Canada's oldest established business firms.

Complete and modern in every detail, its interior and exterior design are things of architectural beauty. Its structure is a new blending of the strengths of brick, steel and stone; Its decorative art, beauty of coloring are not only eye-pleasing, but are important parts of a whole that is a magical transformation wrought by the skill of master artizans, craftsmen and constructional genius.

But beauty of design and strength of structure were not the only ultimate goals of the builders. Important in the general scheme of things were the shopping facilities for the hundreds of patrons with whom the name "C.D.S." is synonymous with fair dealing and fine merchandise. That they have succeeded in achieving this important phase in modern business, is seen in the general layout and ease of accessibility to the many departments which the new interior houses.

Roomy Floors

For with its high ceilings; roomy "floors" its modern ventilating and heating systems, its ultra-modern direct and indirect lighting systems and a hundred and one other modern improvements, the new building is the last word, in up-to-date shopping centres.

Nothing has been spared to make it the most attractive as well as most comfortable store of its kind between Montreal and Toronto, according to Construction Engineer Thomas Keogh, company official under whose keen eye, the work has been rushed to completion.

The main floor, when one enters the store, opens up a vista of soft lighting and blending of colorful decorative schemes that are restful as well as pleasing to the eye. Stretching back from its 66 foot frontage, the main floor affords a far-reaching panorama of merchandise for a distance of 166 feet. Overhead the soft glow of Edge-ray direct and indirect lights gleam down on row upon row of natural maple display cases. Aisles are wide and roomy. The upward fusion of lights gleam upon white ceilings done in artistic squares, and upon ivory walls that blend in a colorful whole with the white and creams of square posts.

Modern Lighting

Along the sides of the main floor are display cases, in which the latest in modern interior lighting, the new fluorescent glow lights bring out in all their natural colors the many phases of merchandise on display. An electrically operated elevator, one that will accommodate a large number of patrons, has been installed.

Access to the second floor is accomplished by a wide up-to-date stairway made of polished steel and woodwork. On this floor is housed the lighting and power plants of the structure. A dead front panel said to be the largest of its kind in Ontario is situated "out of the way" near the north wall. A single switch controls the incoming power for lighting while a smaller one has control over the power units. The panel is fool proof. The main switch controls 600 amperes.

This floor, as far as decoration and lighting is concerned, is similar to that of the main and third floors. Underfoot handsome squared tile floor-covering deadens the sound of the feet of walking patrons and staff. Here too, shopping facilities and display methods bring out to the full the qualities and coloring of the merchandise offered. Light and airy, all the floors afford the maximum degree of comfort to staff and clientele in both summer and winter weather.

On the third floor are the administrative and business offices. These are placed parallel with the front of the new building. They are airy, well-lighted and ventilated, and afford the best of working comfort and conditions to the clerical staff. Nearby is the advertising department where store and newspaper advertising copy is made.

Nor has the comfort of the staff "off-duty" been forgotten. Along the north side of the third floor are comfortably equipped rest-rooms for members of the store staff. Easy chairs and chesterfields and other "relaxing furniture has been installed while pictures, flowers and other 'homey' objects will aid the staff to relax and rest in comfort.

Fire Hazard Reduced

Danger from fire has been reduced to a minimum. In the spacious basement of the store, tucked away in an unnoticed corner is the mechanical basis of a $7,000 water sprinkling system. The heat from an ordinary match will release a spray of water in any part of the store, while the entire system is connected to the Belleville Fire Department station house. Should fire break out, the blaze is immediately localized by the new system while a general alarm is sent automatically to city firemen.

In another part of the basement in a flood-proof room, is the new heating system. A non-pressure steam boiler, fed by an automatic stoker supplies heat to a general system that is thermostatically controlled.

Wash-rooms and toilets, the most modern in sanitation methods, are also housed in the basement.

Here are laid out display shelves and cases that will offer to the public the many bargains for which C.D.S. stores are famous. Facilities here have been improved one hundred per cent over those of the former store, and patrons will appreciate the change that has been wrought for their shopping comfort.

Strikingly handsome in its construction of red brick, stainless steel, dark-colored vitrolite facings and gleaming plate glass, the front of the new store adds a distinctive touch of beauty to its immediate business surroundings.

Modern Front

Three large display show-windows, spacious and airy are arranged to bring out to the full the qualities and coloring of window display merchandise. Deep and full, the windows are a colorful introduction to the shopping thrills that are to be had in the interior. Overhead X-ray lighting, arranged in such a manner that no glare strikes the eyes, is an artistic addition. The dark shades of vitrolite facing, afford a colorful contrast to the brilliancy of the windows, the stainless steel sign that stretches across the upper facade above the windows and the two storeys of attractive red brick that loom high above the entire front.

Demolition of the old building that formerly housed the C.D.S. store, was started approximately four and one-half months ago by the Frontenac Construction Company. Construction of the present handsome structure followed immediately and master craftsmen and skilled labor united with Belleville workmen to rush the new building to completion.

Mr. Frank Correll, manager of the store and his efficient staff are leaving no stone unturned to make the official opening of Belleville's latest and newest Front Street edifice next Thursday a gala event in the business history of the city.

Japan's New Premier Attacks Theory Of Totalitarianism

Tokyo, Aug. 28—(AP)—Japan's new premier, Prince Fuminaro Konoye, attacked the theory of totalitarianism in a speech today and asserted that it was inappropriate for Japan.

"No matter what brilliant results such a system may have reaped in other lands, it is not acceptable to Japan," said Prince Konoye, who was expected when he took office last July 22 to head a totalitarian regime.

The Prince was addressing a group of 26 political leaders forming a committee assigned to the task of forming a new national political structure in the wake of the recent dissolution of all the old political parties.

Not Single National Party

Prince Konoye denied the new system would be based on a single national party, as had been generally expected.

He defined its purpose as "to unite the total energies of the state and the people and to make one living whole of our 100,000,000 countrymen, enabling them to fulfill perfectly their duty as subjects of the throne."

However, despite this definition, Prince Konoye struck sharply at the European system of totalitarianism and said "the new structure cannot be allowed to take the form of a single party system."

"Such a system," he said, "takes a part and makes of it a whole. It considers the state and party as one and the same thing. It views any opposition to the party as a revolt against the state.

"It renders permanent the ruling position of one party, with the head of that party as the permanent wielder of power to govern."

Japan No Party to System

Prince Konoye said Japan would not have this system "no matter how brilliant its results" because "it is contrary to the basic principle of our national policy of 'one sovereign over all'."

"In Japan" continued the Premier, "it is the privilege of all his Imperial Majesty's subjects to assist the throne, and that privilege cannot be monopolized by the power of either any single individual or a single party."

In Japan the Emperor is considered to be of divine ancestry.

The Prince declared the nation's fate rests upon the ability of legislators to carry out the proposed new structure.

"Whether Japan can establish such a strong national structure will decide the very rise and fall of the nation," he said.

Skilled Craftsmen Needed Immediately in Air Force

Wireless Operators, Aero Engine Mechanics, Air Frame Mechanics, Armourers and Other Skilled Workmen Are in Demand

WATCHMAKERS TOO

Ottawa—The drama of air combat has lured thousands upon thousands of young Canadians to apply for enlistment in the Royal Canadian Air Force. There is consequently no immediate lack of men to be trained for what may be loosely termed "flying positions," although more will be needed as time goes on.

But there is more to the R.C.A.F. than flying in dramatic combat with the enemy. Even more numerous are the positions to be filled by technical experts and skilled tradesmen of all kinds.

Recruiting officers have announced their need at this time particulary of skilled and near-skilled tradesmen under these classifications.

Wireless Operators

300 men are required for immediate enlistment as Wireless Operators who would serve only on ground. Enlistment in this trade will be granted to men 18 to 45 who are physically fit, with education equivalent to High School Entrance or better, and who at present are able to send and receive morse at 18 words per minute.

Aero Engine Mechanics

There is also call now for the enlistment of Aero Engine Mechanics who are well acquainted with the practical problems of running internal combustion engines and have a knowledge of the manual working of metals. They must also have worked at least two years in some mechanical engineering occupation.

Airframe Mechanics

Airframe mechanics experienced in metal work and preferably with a knowledge of metals used in the general construction of aircraft are also being sought. The average Technical School graduate who has been trained in metal work, can generally qualify for enlistment in this trade.

Armourers

There is need in the service for men who have had experience in the manufacture or repair of small arms or guns of any description; machinists, highly skilled lathe workers may apply for enlistment in this trade. A certain number of young men without trade experience but who are mechanically minded and have Junior Marticulation, a good voice and confident manner may also apply for training in this trade. There are very few qualified Armourers in civil life and this is a most interesting trade in which promotion is rapid in the R.C.A.F.

It is also announced that experienced watchmakers and repairers might also be used in the Service to serve in instrument work.

Recruiting officers point out that from England have come reports almost daily of the "magnificent" work there of the "supporting" force of the R.A.F., the non-flying members. The duty of these men is all-important and to this the R.C.A.F. is out to build a parallel strength.

BELLEVILLE MEMBERS OF 32-34th BATTERY

Showing the enthusiasm characteristic of His Majesty's Canadian fighting forces no matter where they are, Belleville members of the 32/34th Field Battery Royal Canadian Artillery, "whooped it up" in real old soldier style last night before leaving for a Canadian training centre.

They received a real-send-off and showed their appreciation with lusty renditions of the old soldier songs and cheers for everyone concerned.

Sizzling Yankees, Cardinals Nearer the Top of Their Loops By Beating Chicago, Boston

Bad Weather Prevented Detroit and Cleveland From Playing Tuesday

HARTNETT HIRED

Manager of Chicago Cubs Retained for Another Year — a Pleasing Appointment

(By Sid Feder)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The sizzling Yankees and Cardinals wage nearer the top today, but the best news on the sports page was that Gabby Hartnett will be back bossing Chicago Cubs again next year.

You even felt a little kindlier toward the pest in the subway, who'd been reading your paper over your shoulder all the way downtown, when he leaned over a little farther and said, "Pal, it couldn't happen to a nicer guy".

Man and boy, Hartnett has been a ball-player's ball player for 19 years. For the last three, he's been running the Cubs, counting 1938, when he took over from Charley Grimm in mid-season and went on to win the pennant.

By way of celebration, the Cubs went out and knocked off New York Giants 3-1 behind the seven-hit hurling of Workhorse Claude Passeau in one of three major league games that got by the bad weather. Passeau fanned five and didn't walk a man in chalking up his fifth victory in 13 days.

This decision, coupled with St. Louis Cardinals' 4-3 win over Boston Bees, shook up the National League standings although it didn't disturb the top. The Cubs went into a tie with Pittsburg for fifth place, the Giants dropped to fourth and the red-hot Cards went into third all by themselves.

Martin Marion's first major league homer proved the winning run for the Cards.

The only American League tussle saw New York Yankees nip Chicago White Sox 5-4 on a 10th inning run sent home by Babe Dahlgren's single and three innings of hitless relief hurling by Fireman Johnny Murphy. The victory boosted the Yanks to 2 1-2 games from second-place Detroit and 5 1-2 from Cleveland Indians, both of whom were given a holiday by bad weather.

COSTLY DESPONDENCY

Columbia, S.C., Aug. 27 (AP)—Officials of a church here want something done about it. J. W. Buchan told police that everything from dishes to plumbing fixtures had been stolen from the church. Worst of all, he said, someone had stored a quantity of liquor under the altar.

ROYALS FEELING LOSS OF RIPPLE, AN OUTFIELDER

Montreal Only 2½ Games From Playoff Berth and Bonus for Finishing in That Spot

TORONTO SPLITS

Leafs Win First From Rochester 3-1 but Lose Second 4-1

(By The Associated Press)

Montreal Royals are already feeling the loss of outfielder Jimmy Ripple, and unless they can pick up a good replacement soon, the loss is liable to be felt where it hurts most—in the pocketbook.

With only 20 games left to play, Montreal is battling valiantly for a spot in the International League playoffs, 2 1-2 games behind the fourth place Jersey City Giants. If Royals finish fourth or better they get a bonus plus a percentage of the gate receipts for the playoff games, so the departure of a .300 hitter like Ripple couldn't have come at a worse time.

Last night Royals missed a chance to gain on the idle Jersey City Giants, by dropping a 5-4 decision to Buffalo's Bisons.

Max Macon, a pitcher with a pretty fair batting eye, covered rightfield and although he slammed out a home run he also committed an error which gave Buffalo two unearned runs and meant the difference between victory and defeat.

Orioles Increase Margin

The third-place Baltimore Orioles took advantage of Jersey city's inactivity and increased their margin over the Little Giants to two games, beating Syracuse 3-0. Rain washed out the Jersey-Newark game.

Floyd Stromme held the Chiefs to four singles, while his mates clubbed Pep Rambert for ten. Murray Howell, League leading hitter, collected two triples and a double to pace the Orioles attack.

Rochester Red Wings split with Toronto, to maintain their four game lead over the second place Newark Bears.

Cal Fischer limited the pacesetters to five hits in the seven inning twilight game, winning 3-1, but Wings came back to take the nightcap 4-1, behind the seven-hit pitching of Herschel Lyons.

Lyons gave only two hits in a single inning, the second, and had a shutout until Latshaw tripled in the eighth and scored on a long fly. He fanned six and walked three in ringing up his 18th victory. Three hits in the fourth gave Rochester its only run in the opener.

Amateur Golfers Fire Two Rounds In Order to Qualify

New York, Aug. 28.— (AP) — After watching the scores roll in from the 28 sectional qualifying rounds for the National Amateur championship, it is possible to understand Bud Ward's threat to round up a team of amateur golfers and lick the pros' Ryder cup team.

Not all the nation's best amateur golfers were competing yesterday when more than 700 players fired two rounds apiece in hopes of winning one of the 140 places in the amateur at New York's Winged Foot Club, Sept. 9. Ten of them, in fact, drew automatic exemption because they had won the title in previous years. Still it would take a lot of sharpshooting to beat the kind of golf yesterday's leaders played.

The top men in three districts turned in 36-hole scores of 141 and four other players were only a stroke behind. There were a couple of 68's and 69's recorded on individual rounds and scores in the low 70's were common.

Practically all the nationally famous players who were required to play through the sectional tests were steady enough to qualify. The most notable failure was Charley Yates, 1938 British Amateur champion and Walker Cup Star. He shot rounds of 77-72—149 at Atlanta and took only the first alternate's berth, three strokes away from the sectional limit.

Dick Metz Leads Qualifying Round

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 28.—(AP) — The 1940 Professional Golf championship boiled down today to a series of two man duels, holding more swift disaster for even the best of players than any other test in the game.

Over 18 holes anything can happen, and that's how this phase of the pro tournament starts out. Most of the players feel more comfortable about the 36 hole matches which come later in the week, until two men reach Sunday's finals.

Sixty-four players shot 154 or better Monday and yesterday to qualify for these matches. Dick Metz, of Oak Parks, Ills., won the medal with 69-71—140, a stroke better than Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., and former Canadian Open Champion.

Metz's performance was four strokes higher than the P.G.A. qualifying record and five above the 36 hole mark for this 7,017 yard course.

UPTOWN JUNIORS ELIMINATED BY OSHAWA SQUAD

Westmonts Take Second Game in Junior Playdowns by 11-6 Count

MUCH TOO GOOD

Winners Had Faster Fielding Team and Hit Better in the Pinches

Another Belleville nine passed into the land of forgotten softball last evening, when the Uptown Juniors bowed out to the Oshawa Westmounts losing on the home lot 11 to 6 in an abbreviated seven inning junior O.A.S.A. zone final game. The local kids passed into softball oblivion by losing to the Motor City kids in successive games, dropping the initial game of the series 15 to 5 in Oshawa last Saturday.

Wildness on the part of Steve Hook, the hometown pitcher, gave the Westmounts a substantial margin of lead early in the game, a margin that proved too great to overcome after Hook and his pals steadied away after the third frame, when Oshawa had rammed home nine big runs. The Westmounts only out-hit the locals 11 to 10, but the visitors punched out five extra base clouts to Belleville's two circuit blows.

It was men on the runways that Hook got himself into trouble early in the pastime as Bawks homered in the first, but Ethier and Clare collaborated with successive hits to knot the count. However, a walk, two wild pitches and Mansfield's error paved the way for McCoskey's homer to give Oshawa four runs in the second and they added a quartette more in the third as the result of a couple of singles, a walk, some passed balls and Goyer's error.

Belleville Scores Three

Belleville rallied in the bottom half of the third to score three on hits by Goyer and Clare and a home run by Ethier. Yarrow hit for the circuit for Red Townsend's kids in the sixth, but the locals went out in order in the seventh after which the game was called on account of impending darkness.

Every member of the Westmounts counted at least one safe hit off Hook, with Bawks getting a homer and single, McConkey a circuit blow, while Cameron, McMullen and Bidgood hit doubles. Ethier and Yarrow punched out four base blows for Belleville, as Ethier added a single and Clare and Bradden counted two singles each. Oshawa fielded a faster fielding nine, that looked the better team from all angles.

Gabby Hartnett Is Re-appointed Cubs' Manager

Chicago, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Philip K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs, may feel pained about the showing of his ball club this year but he's satisfied with Manager Charles Leo "Gabby" Hartnett.

The club owner said that Hartnett would be around as Cub manager in 1941, although the contract won't be signed until about the time Christmas presents are being handed out.

"I have assured him I contemplate no changes in the management", said Wrigley. "I'm satisfied Hartnett has done a much better job this year than last."

Hartnett, playing his 19th year with the Cubs, was elated over Wrigley's decision.

"That's great—that's swell", Hartnett commented, "naturally I'm delighted. I feel sure we will have a fine ball club next year. Before that however, we have a present job to do. We've got to get into the first division".

You don't have to go to the small communities to find ignorance of sporting playing rules. Generally speaking those residing in the sticks and connected with sporting events, more especially team games, are much better acquainted with the playing rules than are the big city slickers. This was proven recently in a National League ball game at St. Louis, when pitcher Clyde Shoun of the Cards, was charged with a balk when he wasn't even in possession of the ball. Yes—a pitcher can be charged with a balk, when he hasn't even got the ball in his possession.

In this particular game a Boston batter reached first on a hit. Jimmy Brown, the Cards' shortstop, concealed the ball waiting to pull the old hidden ball trick. Unfortunately for all concerned pitcher Shoun apparently didn't know his pitching rules for he stepped upon the pitcher's plate, took his position facing the batter and Umpire Larry Goetz.

The rule book says a balk shall be called on a pitcher "regardless of whether he makes any motion to pitch or not, if he takes a legal position on the pitcher's plate without the ball in his possession."

Frequently we pick up a newspaper published many miles from the beautiful shores of the Bay of Quinte to learn that a former Belleville athlete is hewing his name in the annals of sports all across this wide continent. Such news articles trend to make us sit back and engage in reminiscence. Such was the case this week when we read in a Northern Quebec sports column of the baseball prowess of two former Belleville boys—Ralph "High-Pockets" McCabe and Keith "Lefty" Weeks. It seems both Weeks and McCabe are hurling for different ball clubs in that section of the country and doing remarkably well in the bargain. McCabe is the ace moundsman for the East Malartic nine and recently bested Weeks in a hurling duel for the second time this month. According to the Quebec sports columnist no less a personage that Bob Shawkey, former New York Yankee pitcher and now scout for that club, was in the stands watching the game. It seems Shawkey has been scouting McCabe for some weeks past and last week tendered the former lefty Belleville pitcher with a 1941 contract to try out with the Newark Bears. As we all know the Bears are the Yankees' No. 1 farm team, and who knows but we may yet see Ralph McCabe's name in the same line-up with Joe DiMaggio et al. Don't forget George Selkirk of the same club is also a Canadian-born big leaguer.

In the same write-up Shawkey is quoted as saying he had seen Phil Marchildon, the outstanding Canadian pitcher with the Toronto Maple Leafs who is slated for a big league trial next season, and Shawkey openly stated for publication that in his opinion, McCabe had better possibilities of making the grade than Marchildon, who has spent two full seasons with the Leafs and today is one of their few hurlers who can go the route and win the odd game these days. It's a long journey from the sandlots of Northern Quebec to the major leagues, but Bob Feller vaulted directly from the farm lands of Iowa to become baseball's modern phenominal pitcher. The day of miracles is not past.

Do you remember when the great Finnish middle-distance runner, Paavo Nurmi, was barred from amateur competition for life by the International Amateur Federated Congress at Stockholm, six years ago today. He was allowed to compete only in Finland, where he was cleared of charges of accepting money beyond actual expenses on a tour.

With regularity, as the Belleville Fair rolls around each year, you can begin to count the Belleville softball teams out of the season's picture. The Belleville Fair opens on Thursday, so last night the local Uptown juniors continued in the parade of those to join softball's forgotten glories when Red Townsend's kids passed into oblivion at the hands of the Oshawa Westmounts. On the field the Westmounts looked much the better club, especially when at bat, but the box score tells an entirely different story. The Oshawa kids only out-hit Belleville 11 to 10, but they counted five to two in the matter of extra base hits. The entire difference hinged around the respective batteries. Steve Hook was trying too hard, that is to say he was endeavouring with might and main to retire the Oshawa batters the hard way—by striking them out. Had Hook placed a little more confidence in his team mates and pitched accordingly perhaps a different tale might have been told. Actually there is no blame attached the local elimination as the better team won the series, however.

Down in Point Anne the residents are quite happy today, as the Cementmen emerged winners over Wooler last night in their first meeting of the intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns. Last year Wooler, headed by pitcher Jim Stacey, eliminated Point Anne and Bubby Gaulin's charges never quite got over that reverse. However, last night the Ox Point ballers vindicated themselves when they beat Wooler with Stacey in the box. It was a nip and tuck tussle, however, the score being even until the bottom half of the eighth, when Point Anne capitalized on the opportunities presented them and drove four runs across the plate and then "Ding" Luffman went on to hurl the homesters to victory. The second game of the series is slated to be played in Trenton on Thursday and providing a third tussle is necessary such a game would doubtless draw a good following right here in Belleville. (Convener Harry Rollins please note.)

The traffic up Coleman St. will doubtless be quite congested directly after the town clock tolls six p.m. this evening, as all the town is talking about whether or not Johnnie Bawden can beat Tabby Gow's Kingston Tanners tonight or not. The consensus of opinion seems to be pretty well settled in the matter as local fans feel the answer lies directly on the shoulders of Bawden and his fire-ball. Down in Kingston they are quite elated with themselves over the Tanners' win over the "Oilers" on Monday night. The Kingston sports scribe recalls it was the same Bawden and company who beat a Kingston "all-star" team on Civic Holiday and continues by chuckling over the fact his pets "blasted Bawden and Belleville." Yes, the Oilers are in a tough spot this evening, as they must win or follow the local juniors out of the picture. Incidentally we hope Coach Harold Bawden's nine do not contact a dose of over-anxiousness as did the local kids.

RUBBER BAND FOUND ABOUT FISH'S BACK BONE

New York, Aug. 28.—(AP)—A workman cleaning fish in a market came across an exceedingly strange mackerel. It had a rubber band around its backbone inside the flesh. In the absence of a better explanation, market men surmised the fish, when young, swam into the band—and then grew up around it.

FORDYCE—In loving memory of our darling Georgie, who passed away August 28th., 1939.

"How much we loved her we never can tell,
How much we miss her none others will know.
Only the dear God that loveth us well,
Only He knoweth the hot tears that flow.
It is so hard when our much-loved depart,
Hard to say 'Peace' when such memories stir
But we can bear the deep pain in our hearts,
Knowing so well it is better for her."

Picton and District

2,200 Officers, Men Recruited In H. & P. E. Regt. in One Year

Large Portion Went to England in the First Division

NEW R.C.A.F. SCHOOL

Picton, Aug. 28—Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment has recruited some 2,200 men in Picton since the outbreak of war. This proud record was revealed at the regimental depot here yesterday. This includes officers and men of all ranks.

Recruiting for reinforcements for the regiment has been carried on at the depot here since the first division went overseas last December. This first group included 900 men and officers. Since that time some 1,300 men have been taken on the strength, part now being in England and the remainder in Canada. These left Picton in drafts of from 50 to 200 men. The last draft of 140 men were sent as reinforcements for the Midland regiment, but all others will be attached to the Hastings and Prince Edward unit.

Centres Justly Proud

These neighboring counties are justly proud of this outstanding record, which is evidence of the spirit of loyalty which has ever been apparent in the United Empire Loyalist settled around the Bay of Quinte district.

In addition to recruiting 2,200 men for the local regiment, this district is largely represented in the R.C.A.F., the Canadian Navy, R.C.A.M.C. at Kingston, as well as other units in the province.

With the C.A.S.F. having recruits sufficient to not only supply an entire regiment but to supply reinforcements for another unit there was still a desire by many others to serve and the organization of the Second Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, N.P.A.M., has seen several hundred accepted. Companies now undergoing training are located at Picton, Wellington, Trenton, Bancroft and Madoc with platoons in several other centres.

Go to Petawawa

These will go to camp at Petawawa next Monday for two weeks' training and yesterday new summer uniforms were being issued the men.

It is expected that the staff of the regimental depot here, headed by Major E. T. Naylor, will shortly be quartered in Kingston and that the N.P.A.M. will take over the armouries for a time. It is considered possible that the staff in connection with the Gunnery and Bombing School being located here, will occupy the local armouries, largest in the district, until barracks are ready.

Contracts Let

Contract for erection of buildings at the Bombing School site has been let to Hill, Clark and Francis, Ltd., of New Liskeard. The contract totals nearly one million dollars and calls for erection of 42 buildings with November 15th set as the date of completion. Runways and taxi strips are ready for paving and work of levelling is continuing, shifts working night and day.

Local citizens are high in their praise of the soldiers while in Picton. Police report that there were no serious misdemeanours of any kind, merchants are appreciative of the business given.

Canning Underway

Canning of tomatoes will get under way in Prince Edward County factories this week. The crop is ripening rapidly due to warm and dry weather. Rain is greatly needed.

Dan Daily, Jr., and charming Virginia Grey are the romantic twosome in the uproarious comedy, "The Captain is a Lady," now at the Belle, with Gary Cooper, Joan Crawford and Robert Young in, "Today We Live."

AT THE BELLE

"Star Dust"

Boasting what has been called the most original entertainment idea in years, the 20th Century-Fox film "Star Dust" stars lovely Linda Darnell next at the Belle Theatre in a thrilling story that well might be the story of her own exciting rise to fame.

Linda is cast as a plucky small-town girl in Hollywood scrapping for her place in the sun. In the great adventure that is the mecca of young screen hopefuls, she meets handsome John Payne, another young hopeful. Together they share heartbreak and happiness—and find out about love.

With the odds a thousand to one against them, they won't take no for an answer. They enlist the help of talent scout Roland Young and dramatic coach Charlotte Greenwood. And when things look darnest they stage a stunt that stands Hollywood on its ear.

Gay and charming, it has moments of strong drama and suspense. Previewers agree Linda outdoes herself, while 20th Century-Fox Production Chief Darryl F. Zanuck awarded John Payne a long term contract as a result of his work in the film.

Others featured in the star-studded cast are William Gargan, Mary Beth Hughes, Mary Healy and Donald Meek.

Mary Healy sings "Star Dust," the lovely Hoagy Carmichael-Mitchell Parish ballad that inspired the film, while the popular Mack Gordon wrote two new hit tunes for the picture, "Secrets in the Moonlight" and "Don't Let It Get You Down."

Jane Withers' Latest

Jane Withers jumps from the Bowery to Park Avenue in her latest starring film, "Girl from Avenue A" second feature which is entirely different to be presented on the same program.

Jane's a Bowery spitfire on her own in the highest society, trying hard to be a lady. But a quick consensus of the four hundred reveals that Jane does as a lady.

Stirringly emotional and riotously funny, "Girl from Avenue A" has been labelled the most appealing show she's done. The strong featured cast includes Kent Taylor, Katharine Aldridge, Elyse Knox, Laura Hope Crews, Jessie Ralph and many others.

"Sky Fighters," is the title of the latest of the likeable adventures of a cameraman, films also announced for exhibition.

Smart Show

Gary Cooper, Joan Crawford and Robert Young are now appearing at the Belle in the romantic thrill-drama "Today We Live."

The uproarious romantic comedy "The Captain is a Lady" featuring Charles Coburn, Virginia Grey and Beulah Bondi is announced as the companion feature attraction.

The popular Belle news of the hour will be exhibited.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Hitler—Beast of Berlin"

History is being written at the present time in the heart's blood of innocent people. The prophetic seeds of Hitler's "Mein Kampf" are bearing the awful fruit of conquest and carnage. But what of the German people? Those who are not Nazis and not in uniform, hidden behind the black veil of rigid censorship? What are they doing? What are their feelings?

A dramatic reply to those engrossing questions is contained in the startling, genuine and sincere picture "Hitler—Beast of Berlin" which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre.

It is an eloquent pictorial drama of courageous humanity struggling under the iron heel of despotism, based on Shepard Traube's "Goose Step," one of the most revealing stories ever written about average householders in the Third Reich.

"Hitler—Beast of Berlin" is not a news reel, not propaganda and not inspired by religious or national hatred, but a terrific indictment of international gangsterism captained by super-hoodlums with an unquenchable thirst for power. It is a picture every loyal Canadian should see.

"Hitler—Beast of Berlin," has an immense cast of internationally famous players headed by Roland Drew, Steffi Duna, Greta Granstedt, Allan Ladd, Lucien Prival, Bodil Rosing, Vernon Dent and John Ellis. With one or two exceptions, the rest of the players have a foreign background. Several of them are German ex-patriots, refugees and fugitives from the Gestapo.

Owing to the demand for showings in Ontario for this film, it will not be held over at the McCarthy Theatre, therefore you are urged to attend at your first available opportunity one of the performances. An excellent short subject program including Buster Keaton in "Taming of the Snood," an amusing cartoon "Millionaire Hobo" and "Tomorrow's Stars," an amusing baseball sports reel, are also presented with the showings of "Hitler—Beast of Berlin."

"The Man with Nine Lives."

Boris Karloff in "The Man with Nine Lives," a laughloaded comedy, Andy Clyde in "Money Squawks," latest Fox News events and a screen tour through "Smithsonian Institution," Washington, D.C., is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

IF IT'S ABOUT YOUR EYES . . . SEE McFEE

Roy Rogers and Pauline Moore in a thrilling scene from the newest historical western film from Republic studios, "The Carson City Kid," next at the Capitol at the big fair attraction. On the same program "Parole Racket," with Paul Kelly.

BRITISH COASTAL GUNS HURL SHELLS ACROSS CHANNEL

British long-range guns, of the type pictured ABOVE, on the southeast coast, are reported to have gone into action in answer to Hitler's "Big Berthas," which have been trained on the British Isles for the past few days. According to a statement issued by British military authorities, guns of the type shown have been fired opposite Boulogne and Calais, wreaking considerable damage on enemy positions. The guns on the British coast, their steel flanks streaked with camouflaging paint, are capable of hurling gigantic projectiles and hitting a target accurately miles away.

THIRD DIVISION

Doing Great Job

Commenting particularly on General McNaughton's motor cycle brigade, the Minister said they were "doing a great job". Three squadrons of about 400 men and three-quarters of another squadron were operating.

He had no doubt that if a man were to be judged by his skill and ability, General McNaughton would take a high place.

With reference to reports of formation of all-Canadian corps in England he said such a corps would be formed as soon as the 2nd Division in England had completed its training, "and that won't be very long." (At present General McNaughton commands a British Army Corps which includes the Canadian 1st Division).

Col. Ralston announced the formation of a tank committee consisting of representatives of the general staff, munitions and supply and experts. The committee will handle matters concerning the perfecting and production of a new, fast, high-powered tank, adaptable to both training and service.

Members of the committee for the staff will be: Major M. M. Evans, Col. E. L. M. Burns and Col. F. F. Worthington. Col. Worthington commands Canada's first tank brigade at Camp Borden. For the Department of Munitions and Supply the members will be: W. F. Drysdale, E. P. Taylor and another to be chosen. All will work with French and British experts now developing the new tank.

Expressed Satisfaction

Col. Ralston expressed satisfaction with the production of Bren guns at the John Inglis Co. in Toronto. Inspectors had assured him that the guns produced, were "a first class article."

By December 15 he expected the 4th division to be armed with Bren and light machine guns. Acquisition of Bren gun carriers should begin within a month.

Asked whether some men overseas were being sent home as a result of disabilities, he said that was so. The department was not forgetting them and they were being rehabilitated through the interdepartmental committee of rehabilitation, the Department of Pensions and National Health and Auxiliary Organisations, Committees in Communities, the Y.M.C.A., Knights of Columbus, the Canadian Legion and the Salvation Army.

DRAFT MACHINERY

Younger Men Chosen

With due regard to public interest and the prosecution of the war effort, men will be chosen from among the younger men on the age class called, and proportionately from the various parts of their districts.

Exempted are judges, clergymen, men on active service, police and firemen, wardens of prisons and mental institutions. Mennonites and Doukhobors, who came to Canada or whose fathers came here upon promise of exemption from military training, may have their training indefinitely postponed.

Few Exemptions

Conscientious objectors who belong to sects forbidding the bearing of arms, may be granted postponements after hearings by judicial boards.

Otherwise there are no exemptions. Seasonal workers will be called as seems best in the public interest, industrial workers whether they work in airplane factories or are secretaries to Ministers of the Crown, according to arrangements to be worked out between their employers and the authorities.

University students will not be subject to the first call in order to give authorities time to assess their positions. Those who are taking bona fide military training at universities or colleges, will not be called for the first year.

Members of the non-permanent active militia and those who have had previous military training, will not be called unless their experience is less than they would receive in camp.

Regulations Simple

The machinery set up by the regulations is simple. Canada is divided into 13 divisions, one for each province except for Ontario where there are four and Quebec where there are two.

In each of these divisions a registrar will function and he will be responsible for presenting lists to the War Services Department and calling men when he is advised of the number required. In each, there also will be a board or boards, consisting of a judge and two others, to arrange with employers as to what employees are to go and when, and to decide upon the justice of claims for postponement of training.

The process of calling is simple. Upon being advised of the number of men required by the Defence Department the War Services Department will arrange to have a proclamation issued and advise its registrars in the various divisions to select men to be called. Registrars will be informed of the number of French speaking men who are required, the regulations note.

Advised by Proclamation

Those called will be advised not only by the proclamation, which will be as binding upon them as other advices, but also by registered letter. They must appear before doctors appointed by the authorities, for medical examination within three days. If they are fit they will be advised and must they appear for training within three days of notification.

Persons about whose medical fitness there is doubt may be examined again by a board of three physicians.

Considerable authority is given to regional boards, which are not legally liable for their actions. Their decisions are final and no decision can be stayed even by a writ of Habeas Corpus.

Employers are required to reinstate those who take military training. If they fail to do so they are liable to a penalty of imprisonment for six months or a fine of between $100 and $500.

Various Penalties

Various penalties are provided for offences against the regulations ranging from fines of $10 to $500 and imprisonment for from six months to two years. Offences listed include failure to put up or the tearing down of proclamations, refusal to answer questions, making false statements, advising against compliance, attempted bribery, and the making of knowingly inaccurate statements by physicians.

The Minister of War Services, J. G. Gardiner, is charged with administration and enforcement of the regulations and given wide powers to hire and discharge, to pay salaries and expenses and to interpret the regulations.

Those called up who do not report for medical examination or afterwards fail to report for training, are liable to a fine between $50 and $200 and imprisonment for a year with or without hard labor, or both. For a second offense the penalty is a fine between $200 and $500 or a term between six months and two years with or without hard labor, or both.

AXIS POWERS

Strain in South East Europe

These developments cast a new troubled light on relations between Rumania and her great neighbor to the east whose demands she sought to appease in June by ceding Bessarabia and northern Bucovina.

Russia was reported to have intensified the strain by closing the frontiers of the occupied territory to prevent any return of Rumanians except under strict control. Thousands had fled before the advance of the Red army of occupation.

The financial commissar of the Russian Moldavian Republic, with which Bessarabia and northern Bucovina were incorporated, was reported to have demanded that the Bucharest government turn over to the U.S.S.R. all pensions due to Rumanian railway employees now in occupied territory. This amounts to more than $80,000,000.

Axis Calls Conference

The Rome-Berlin axis exerted strong diplomatic pressure to preserve peace in the Balkans.

The Hungarian and Rumanian Foreign Ministers were summoned urgently to Vienna to confer with axis statesmen tomorrow in an attempt to force a quick settlement of their dispute over the rich border province of Transylvania.

At the same time the German and Italian Ministers to Budapest and Bucharest departed for home carrying detailed reports of a Hungarian-Rumanian frontier incident and the border clash between Rumanian and Russian troops.

It was the second time the axis powers had exerted pressure for settlement of the Hungarian-Rumanian dispute and political circles in Berlin expressed firm conviction that this time speedy agreement must of necessity be reached to avoid further incidents which might disturb the German-Italian war effort against Britain.

Aspect More Serious

Negotiations instituted at the insistence of Berlin collapsed Saturday when Rumania refused Hungary's demands for return of three-quarters of Transylvania, which Rumania gained from the first Great War break-up of Austria-Hungary, and both countries have been massing troops along the frontiers.

The situation assumed a more serious aspect yesterday when the Budapest government accused a Rumanian pilot of shooting down a Hungarian bomber 18 miles inside Hungarian territory and lodged a formal protest against what it called a "murderous unprovoked attack."

The protest brought no immediate reply from Bucharest, where it was said it would be handled "through the regular diplomatic channels." A Rumanian government spokesman said the Hungarian plane probably was a craft which he charged had been dropping inflammatory propaganda leaflets over Transylvania.

Reports of Clashes

The unrest caused by the strained relations between Budapest and Bucharest was increased by reports of clashes between Rumanian and Russian troops along the border of Bessarabia. The clashes were said to have occurred in Rumanian territory after strong Russian scouting parties had crossed the frontier.

The reports, confirmed by the Soviet legation in Bucharest, said there were heavy casualties on both sides.

Russians said the Rumanians had lost several hundred men while German press dispatches said the Rumanians admitted 40 of their soldiers had been killed.

The Rumanian Foreign Minister, Mihail Manoilescue, conferred last night with the Russian Minister in Bucharest over the border clashes. The result of their talk was not disclosed.

Hitler Receives Ciano

Salzburg, Germany, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Hitler received Foreign Minister Count Ciano of Italy at his Obersalzburg Mountain Chalet this afternoon.

Hitler and Ciano discussed "current affairs", said the German News Agency.

At a luncheon in Hitler's residence Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Press Chief Otto Dietrich and Italian Ambassador Dino Alfieri were Hitler's guests.

In the afternoon Ciano, Alfieri, Von Ribbentrop and Hans Von Mackensen, German Ambassador to Italy, left for Vienna by plane to discuss southeastern European questions with Balkan representatives.

Purpose of Conference

Rome, Aug. 28.—(AP)— Count Ciano and German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop called the Vienna Conference in an attempt to avert the outbreak of trouble between Hungary and Rumania over Hungary's claims to Transylvania.

An announcement said that the Nazis ministers "invited" the smaller powers to Vienna "to discuss questions of common interest".

Count Ciano is expected in informed circles to advise the Hungarians to proceed cautiously in their attempt to regain Transylvania from Rumania.

Count Ciano was accompanied from Rome by the German Ambassador, Hans-Georg Viktor Von Mackensen, the Italian Ministers to Bucharest and Budapest, who were believed to have come to Rome to report on the situation, and a number of Foreign Office officials.

NAZIS INTENISFY

fought from middle Kent to the Thames Estuary—a distance of 30 miles—in turning back the second wave. The Germany sustained "some losses," preliminary reports said.

The first formation of 18 bombers with fighter escorts roared over Folkestone on the southeast coast and began dropping bombs inland. Spitfires and Hurricanes which engaged them were reported to have brought down two of this group, and crippled another.

Ten Reported Killed

At least ten persons were reported killed and one German plane brought down by anti-aircraft in night raids which ranged from Scotland to Wales, causing two air raid alarms in London, and hitting particularly four towns in the southeast and northwest.

Great numbers of incendiary and explosive bombs were dropped, but the government said damage was done only to houses, and that the attacks were "indiscriminate."

No casualties were caused in London. In one northeast town 70 persons had to be given shelter after bombs smashed a housing project.

Capital Had Two Alarms

The capital had two alarms, one of 2 1-2 hours before midnight and the second of less than an hour shortly after midnight. Few planes were heard and anti-aircraft activity was light.

It was the second successive night of heavy bombing through the country, the action far outstripping daylight attacks of yesterday and approximating that of Monday night, which was the heaviest night assault of the war.

The bombing was particularly heavy on two towns in the southeast and on two points in the north of England, the Ministries of Air and Home Security said in a joint bulletin this morning, with damage done to house property and casualties caused, "including some persons killed."

Casualties were lighter elsewhere. The Royal Air Force reported downing one bomber by anti-aircraft guns on the coast.

(Britain was believed again to have attacked her continental enemies last night. Switzerland had an air raid alarm, the usual indication of a British bombing attack on Italy.)

Incendiary Bombs Fall Everywhere

Incendiary bombs fell everywhere but the auxiliary fire service brought their fires under control quickly. The Germans have been making increasing use of the gasoline bomb, which consists simply of a drum of gasoline and a mechanism to ignite it.

One of these bombs fell in an open space in the centre of a south England town which had "the longest alarm of the war." Explosive bombs dropped in the town's residential suburbs.

Incendiary bombs hit two churches in one southeast town, homes in another, fell in flower gardens in a northeast Scotland town, and fell in a midland town which also had its "longest alarm of the war."

One southeast England area was kept awake most of the night by intermittent raids with fire brigades rushing about all night long fighting fires started by incendiary bombs.

At one midland point 100 incendiary bombs fell in open country.

Two trains were reported machine-gunned in the course of the night raids, one a freight and the other a passenger train. No casualties were reported in either attack, although bullets ripped through the tops of the passenger coaches.

Inhabitants More Phlegmatic

London's two night alarms, short in comparison with the preceding night's record six-hour alarm, found the Capital's inhabitants more phlegmatic. An increasing number remained in bed rather than go to a shelter.

The Admiralty last night announced the 670-ton submarine Spearfish, which torpedoed but only damaged the German pocket battleship Admiral Scheer on April 11, was "overdue and presumed lost." She normally carried a crew of 40.

This was the submarine which had a close call last October while she was raiding Helogland Bight, being attacked by a German ship which dropped depth charges so close that her periscopes were blown away and her wireless wrecked. During the attack her crew held a sweepstakes on which depth charge would blow her up.

Of those killed in the raids last night two were known to have died in a southeast town and at least three others in a northeast England town.

A boy and a girl were killed in a garden in a southeast town.

A woman was killed when a lone plane dropped bombs on a northeast town and headed out to sea under heavy anti-aircraft fire. Before it crossed the coast the raider dropped several more bombs which fell on a congested residential area, demolishing houses and killing at least two persons. It was feared others were still buried in the debris.

House Demolished by Bomb

One German raider was reported shot down by anti-aircraft fire during the night over Wales.

One house in the London district was demolished by a direct hit from a high explosive bomb during the night. In another part of the metropolitan area a bomb fell in the roadway in front of a row of houses but did little damage beyond shattering windows.

A single German plane crossed the coastline of northeast Scotland early this morning and dropped a small high explosive bomb on a building where troops were quartered, killing one soldier and slightly injuring four others.

Four other explosive bombs and a considerable number of incendiaries were dropped in the same area.

One Town Attacked Twice

In one northeast town four persons, three men and a boy, were killed and a number injured during night and early morning raids. Six houses were demolished on one street and two in another.

In another northeast town a woman was killed when a bomb wrecked her house as she was carrying her baby downstairs to shelter. The infant was injured seriously.

About 70 persons in that town were given temporary accommodation in a girl's school after bombs fell on the housing development where they lived.

One Welsh town was attacked twice in the night. A German bomber was believed to have crashed into the sea after the second raid.

Nine Saloons Damaged

Bombs dropped on a southeast coast town this afternoon by a wedge of 24 German planes damaged nine saloons, several restaurants, a number of shops and houses. One person was injured.

Three high explosive bombs did extensive damage to a south-western factory in one of the early morning raids.

Dive bombers repeatedly attacked firemen tackling a blaze at a big country house in a southeast area during the night. The house was razed, but neither the firemen nor the occupants, who had taken shelter, were injured.

For several hours the Nazi planes flew overhead, dropping bombs on and around the burning building. An eye-witness said the intensity of the attack suggested that "either they thought they were destroying a military objective or that they had gone completely mad."

FOOT AILMENTS GROW WORSE SAYS DR. MORRIS

Declares Feet of War Age Men So Bad U.S. Would be Defeated in a War of Much Marching

CITES U.S. FIGURES

Boston, Aug. 28 —(AP)— Dr. Jonas C. Morris, director of the New Jersey Foot Health Council, said today the feet of the present generation of war age are so bad "the United States would inevitably be defeated in any war in which the troops had to do any appreciable marching."

He criticized the Army Medical Corps for "neglecting a soldier's most important equipment—his feet."

"The feet of the present generation or war age are 50 per cent more defective than those of the soldiers of the World War period," he told the annual convention of the National Association of Chiropodists.

Fife Hours of Marching

"The American soldier in the last war could only endure seven hours of marching. Today's soldiers can hardly last five hours."

Citing statistics of foot ailments among troops at the recent manoeuvres at Potsdam, N.Y., Dr Morris said:

"Three out of every eight volunteers are rejected because of foot trouble, usually flat feet, bunions or hammer toes. The other five, those accepted, almost invariably have minor defects, which seriously handicap their efficiency."

900 REFUGEES NEAR NEW YORK

Peril of Journey Sharpened by German Broadcasts

New York, Aug. 28—(AP)— The peril of their journey through blockaded European waters sharpened by German broadcasts, approximately 900 refugees neared New York today aboard the United States army transport American Legion.

The vessel was picked up 500 miles at sea by two United States destroyers, forming an honorary escort for Norwegian Crown Princess Martha and her children who made the dangerous passage. It was scheduled to dock at 1 p.m. EDT after a 12-day voyage from Petsamo, Finland.

Almost all the 897 passengers were Americans fleeing German and Russian domination; one was Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway. The crowded vessel had passed through uncharted Russian, German and British minefields and Germany's "total blockade" of England.

Much Seasickness

Otto Tolischus, Pulitzer prize-winning correspondent for The New York Times who was a passenger, told in a dispatch to his paper how radios on the ship picked up German stations which described the trip as a "wanton voyage" and "criminal folly." Lord Haw-Haw of Zeesen, British-born Nazi broadcaster, declared "only a miracle could bring the ship safely through the danger zone."

General hardship due to overcrowding, Tolischus said, was aggravated by much seasickness. Thirty persons were sent to the ship's hospital. Two women died from heart disease, he added.

TWO GERMAN WAR

a philosophical view of the situation and was confident that the staff and equipment at internment camps would develop to a point as near perfection as possible in reducing escapes to a minimum.

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 28 —(CP)— A brilliant flare was reported today to have shot skyward near an internment camp in this district from which two German prisoners of war escaped last night. The flare was seen shortly after the delivery and police expressed the belief that it may have been a guide to the escapees from friends prepared to give them aid.

The opinion was expressed here that the prisoners planned the break with outside aid and that they may be kept in hiding with ample food and clothing somewhere in the immediate district.

Investigation at the camp is said to have revealed that a washout had occurred as a result of recent heavy rains, leaving a hole under an outer barricade, a 12-foot barbed wire fence. The fugitives are reported to have had little trouble squirming under the fence at that point after burrowing under the first barricade.

More than 100 miles of dense bush and rock lies between the Germans and the nearest point on the United States border. Only one main highway leads from the camp to the border and it is under constant guard.

Order Not in Effect

Evidently the new order requiring guards to patrol among the prisoners had not been put into effect during the recreation period in this particular camp, the Minister said. The recreation grounds are outside the regular compound and it is believed that during the football match, prisoners who were spectators huddled around the trench and buried the two prisoners one an under-officer of the German navy and the other in the air force.

The prisoners, of whom there are several hundred, then went back to the compound. The guards also left the recreation grounds and went back to the compound. Accordingly the two prisoners were able to escape through the wire fence which surrounds the grounds without being observed.

First word of their escape came when the guards spied them not far from the camp last night and fired at them but they got away into the bush. The Minister said so far they had not been caught.

To improve the detention machinery the Minister has given orders for a more rigid system to provide prompt and accurate identification. Also an improved system of communication within the camps among the guards is being ordered.

Near Perfection as Possible

The Minister agreed with the suggestion that it was a difficult matter entirely to prevent prisoners from escaping because they had so much time to plan new methods of getting away, but he added, "at the same time I am insisting and those with me are insisting that our methods for guarding these men be just as near perfection as it is possible to attain. I realize these prisoners have 24 hours a day to plan escapes and are very resourceful fellows."

The Minister had by him long sheets describing methods used in the last war by Canadian prisoners of war in Germany to effect escapes. The internment camp commandants have these records to guide them but the stunt of burying a prisoner to hide him was not one of those narrated.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Carson City Kid"

A raid was staged on the Pony Express Museum, treasure trove of early California historical relics, for miners' and frontier equipment which was used in the Republic picture, "The Carson City Kid," at the Capitol theatre opening next.

Over three hundred pieces were rented from the Museum in order to authentically reproduce the 1850 period of the Roy Rogers picture. Mining tools used by the players are the identical same crude implements of early gold rush days. Prospectors' tents used for a gold mining scene, are the selfsame tents in which miners slept nearly a century ago and dreamed of the gold fortunes they anticipated.

The stage coach which Rogers as the "Kid" holds up in order to ransack the mails, was taken out of a glass cage at the Museum, and is one of the stages from the original Butterfield line started in 1800. Even the mail sacks in the picture were those carried by the first Wells Fargo Express Company. A Wells Fargo sign, its bullet holes telling the story of wild west days, is another little touch of authenticity.

The music in a cafe scene was played on instruments that were also used in the '50s and before. Accordions, fiddles, and guitars bore little resemblance to the sleek shiny instruments we use today, and looked more like square-shaped, rough boxes than musical instruments. Even the drum in the picture was the original drum that the Indians used in their pow-wows.

In "The Carson City Kid," western fans will see some "props" that once made American history. Some of the real historical characters in the story, are portrayed by Roy Rogers, Noah Beery Jr., Bob Steele, and Francis MacDonald. Co-starred with Rogers is Gabby Hayes, while Pauline Moore plays the feminine lead in her third Rogers picture.

On the same program an action packed drama full of thrills and suspense "Parole Racket" starring Paul Kelly and Rosalind Keith. The Universal News of the world and seventh chapter of the serial "Buck Rogers" closes the big double bill.

INCENDIARY BOMBS DROPPED AT RANDOM BY HUNS

Hundreds Leave S. Bucovina, Fear New Soviet-Rumanian Clashes

Two Soldiers Killed, 8 Wounded at Petawawa

Longest Sustained Attack of the War On London Seen

Sections Attacked by Single Planes in Night Raids Lasting Over Seven Hours

London Aug. 29 (CP)—German air raiders in widespread daylight forays today followed up their greatest night attack of the war in which thousands of incendiary and high explosive bombs wrought destruction, death and injury in many parts of England and Wales.

The renewal of the raids came in southeast England this afternoon. A little later raiders were reported over two Welsh towns.

Three southeast coast towns reported sighting Nazi planes this afternoon.

The first report of daylight activity today came from an inland town and said merely that German planes had appeared.

The night had shielded countless bombers in their forays over England and Wales.

Civilians were killed in all of some 20-odd areas which were hardest hit. Reports from around the country spoke of "hundreds of bombs" being dropped, of "20 bombs dropped in quick succession" and of "50 bombs dropped quickly."

The Nazi bombers staged the longest sustained attack of the war on London itself, lighting the night sky at times to a daylight brilliance with their fire warfare and blasting their high explosive bombs in many sections of the capital's ring of outskirts in a seven-hour attack which lasted practically from darkness to dawn.

Some sections of the country were attacked by single planes, while others apparently were raided by successive waves of 18 and 20 bombers.

In the London area, where the raiders seemed to mean business—this was no mere "nuisance raid"—bombs were dropped both by single planes and by small waves of planes.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen.
Science Service Meteorologist

Large and scanty rainfalls! These are not a matter of chance but are the result of certain natural conditions. Conditions bound to result in heavy rainfall are: (1) rainbearing winds blow from an ocean, (2) from a warmer to a cooler latitude, and (3) toward a high mountain range. These conditions are realized on the western coast of North America from Oregon northward, because the winds from the ocean are apt to be nearly saturated when they reach higher latitudes, and at the dewpoint when blown up the side of the mountain range. As the air deposits most of its moisture on the windward slopes, the land to the leeward is usually one of scanty rainfall.

AVIATOR TO MAKE 35,000-FOOT PARACHUTE LEAP

Arthur H. Starnes Subjected to Tests That Will be Reproduced by Leap From Stratosphere

LEAPS IN TWO WEEKS

Chicago, Aug. 29—(AP)—Arthur H. Starnes, 35-year-old aviator who will make a 35,000 foot parachute leap in the interests of science, already has a rough idea of what it's like.

Except for the sensation of falling and the temperature, Starnes underwent the effects that will be produced by a leap from the stratosphere when he was subjected to a test last night.

The test was conducted at Northwestern University Medical School. As Starnes sat in a low pressure steel chamber a motor exhausted the air until the pressure equalled that at an altitude of 36,000 feet.

Then air was permitted to rush into the chamber to produce the physical effect which would be experienced in falling at 750 miles an hour, or greatly exceeding the velocity of a falling object. Starnes emerged from the drum apparently without suffering ill effects.

During the experiment instruments registered the rate and character of Starnes' breathing and the impulses of his heart action. Starnes wore an oxygen mask and talked by radio to a half dozen scientists who witnessed the test.

When Starnes makes his parachute leap he will use a specially designed parachute, a short wave radio transmitter, oxygen mask pneumograph to measure his breathing, and an automatic camera making a pictorial record of the fall.

The results of the leap are expected to provide the answer to two questions relating to sub-stratosphere flying, namely, (1) will a leap from 35,000 feet cause permanent impairment of the jumper's faculties? and (2) how far must a jumper fall before opening the parachute to avoid asphyxiation in the rarefied and below zero atmosphere?

Scientists of the University of Chicago and Northwestern University will supervise the parachute tests to be conducted within two weeks.

SHELL EXPLODES AT GUN MUZZLE DURING PRACTICE

Accident First Major Mishap in C.A.S.F. in Canada Since Outbreak of War

INQUIRY ORDERED

Defence Minister Sends Executive Assistant to Make Thorough Investigation

Petawawa, Ont., Aug. 29—(CP)—Two soldiers were killed and eight wounded, three seriously, by the premature explosion of a shell at firing practice at Petawawa Camp early today. 2nd Lieut. A. R. Millard of Montreal was killed instantly and Gunner Paul Beland, E1089, died on the way to the hospital.

Seriously wounded were Gunner J. P. McMillan, E1117, Sgt. J. R. Donnell, D8014, and Bombardier A. R. E. Gardiner, D8166.

Five others, not so seriously wounded, were: Gunner S. Brown, D8005, Gunner James Malloy, D8223, Gunner H. Moreau, E1082, Gunner J. O'Dowd, E1075, and Gunner L. Cossman, D8080.

Gunners Moreau and O'Dowd were transferred to Pembroke Hospital.

All but McMillan are from Quebec province. He comes from Campbellton, N.B.

In addition, Lieut. C. H. Drury suffered slight scratches on the face.

First Major Mishap

The accident was the first major mishap in the Canadian Active Service Force in Canada. A gun crew was in action on the ranges at 7.20 a.m. today when a round was fired from a field gun. The shell exploded at the muzzle of the gun, killing the artillery officer instantly.

The field ambulance on duty rushed other casualties to the camp hospital but Gunner Beland died in the ambulance.

(At Ottawa Defence Minister Ralston immediately ordered a court of inquiry and sent his executive assistant, Col. A. A. Magee, to Petawawa with an ordnance inspector to make a thorough investigation and report on the accident.)

Fish Scales Described as Virtual "Biographies" of Origin and Age

Also Tell How Many Times Fish Have Spawned and Whether Areas Are "Over-Fished"

MEASURE GROWTH

Solomons, Md., Aug. 29—(AP) —Fish scales were described today as virtual "biographies" telling not only the age, but the origin of fish and how many times they have spawned.

They also tell, more accurately than heretofore possible, whether shad or rock are being "over-fished" to extinction in any given locality.

This new technique important in conservation, was developed by Dr. R. A. Nesbit of the United States Fish and Wild Life Service and David H. Wallace of the Chesapeake Biological Laboratory here.

Scales of fish are better age-indicators than teeth in horses. They show annual growth "rings" much like the annual rings in trees, Wallace explained.

These "rings" appear on that portion of the scales shaped like an inverted "V" which lies underneath the skin. Under microscopes, they show up as blank spaces where new scale was not laid down due to slowed growth during winter.

The scale's first-year rate of growth depends upon such factors in the quatic environment as food supply, salinity, and temperature. By measuring this growth, Wallace can tell whether a fish was spawned in the Hudson River, off North Carolina, in Chesapeake Bay, or even in what part of the Chesapeake Bay tributaries.

At each spawning the fish resorbs the calcium it needs from the outer edge of the scale. This, too, shows up clearly in "scar tissue" in the scale "biography."

By taking certain scales from a number of fish in a commercial catch, biologists can tell how old the majority of fish are at that time. If most of them are young, and have not yet spawned, it indicates such intense fishing that the next year's and following year's supply is threatened.

"These analyses give the facts to make better conservation laws possible," Wallace said.

The King and Queen Drive Rivets Into New Warship's Keel

London, Aug. 29—(CP Cable) —The King and Queen toured a northwest shipyard today and each drove rivets in the keel plates of a new warship with a hydraulic press.

They also boarded a new warship which was nearly ready to go on duty and met Frank Shaw, a survivor of the submarine Thetis, who was working on the docks. The Thetis was sunk accidentally June 1, 1939, with a loss of 99 lives.

The King and Queen arrived at the shipyard after spending the night in the royal train at a disused siding at a remote Lancashire spot. Although bombs fell a few miles from the siding, there was no actual air raid warning and Their Majesties spent an undisturbed night.

The Queen was anxious to know whether damage had been done in the neighborhood and remarked, "I'm very glad to hear that," when advised that there had been none.

ADVENTISTS ASK FOR EXEMPTIONS

Justice T. C. Davis Says Conference Must Abide by Regulations

Calgary, Aug. 29 —(CP)— Claiming to be "conscientious objectors," the Canadian Union Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists has petitioned the Dominion Government for exemption from bearing arms, O. W. Degering of Calgary said last night in an interview.

Expressing loyalty to Canada, the sect asks that members be assigned to works of necessity and importance in civilian life in time of war or national emergency, wherever possible, said Degering, president of the Alberta Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists.

He said there are between 8,000 and 9,000 active church members in Canada, of whom, 2,400 men and women are in Alberta.

Ottawa, Aug. 29 —(CP)— The Canadian Union Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists must abide by the regulations governing the calling up of men for military training, Mr. Justice T. C. Davis, Deputy Minister of the War Services Department said today.

He pointed out that the case of the Adventists who are opposed to bearing arms, came under the regulation concerning conscientious objectors.

Conscientious objectors who belong to sects the tenets of which forbid bearing arms may present their cases to adjudicatory boards of their districts. Boards are empowered to grant exemption upon being convinced of the bona fides of applicants.

Yesterday a Calgary report said the Canadian Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists had petitioned the government asking that its members be assigned to war work in civilian life only.

Baby Boy Born In Air Raid Shelter

London, Aug. 29—(CP)— Mrs. Anne Plume, 34, claimed today she was the first British mother to give birth to a baby in an Anderson air raid shelter. She decided to name her seven-pound boy, born in last night's Germain raid, after Sir John Anderson, Minister of Home Security, who organized the shelter set-up.

The baby arrived as the thud of bombs and roar of gunfire were heard in the distance.

"It certainly took my mind off the air raid," said Mrs. Plume.

BRITISH BOMBERS FLY OVER BERLIN FOR THREE HOURS

Royal Air Force Successfully Attacks Selected Military Sites

BERLIN REPORT

London, Aug. 29 CP) — Official sources today gave this account of last night's Royal Air Force raid in Berlin:

"Royal Air Force bombers successfully attacked selected military objectives in the Berlin area last night."

Account from Berlin.

Berlin, Aug. 29—(AP)— British bombers flew over the German capital for nearly three hours in a pre-dawn attack today, dropping explosives less than two miles from government offices in the Wilhelmstrasse.

While the authorities claimed that no military objectives of consequence were hit, army officers, firemen and police hastened to Kuttbusser Street, in the southeastern part of the city, where the chief damage was done.

The officers took technical notes; the firemen fought blazes started by incendiary bombs.

Through arrangement with the Propaganda Ministry, three American newspapermen, including an Associated Press correspondent, were taken on a two-hour tour Such places as Tempelhof airdrome, the Klingenberg power plant, which supplies half of Berlin, and railway stations were undamaged. It was impossible however, to cover all points of military importance on the trip.

In one block in crowded Kottbusser Street, where there were 10 dead according to the Nazi count about a dozen 100-pound high explosive bombs and a number of incendiaries apparently fell.

Bombs dropped within 10 minutes of the first sounding of the alarm at 12:24 a.m. EDT, Wednesday, and the damage was done while many Berliners were en route to shelters.

Roof fires were reported from several parts of the city. None, however, was of the size of the fires in Kottbusser Street, the glow of which could be seen in the heart of the city. High explosives there dug two 10-foot craters, five feet deep.

DELIVERY BEGUN OF 'HURRICANES' MADE IN CANADA

Canadian Company Given Educational Order and Then Advised to 'Speed it Up'

600 ORDERED

Contract is Largest So Far Placed in the Dominion for Planes by Britain

New York, Aug. 28—(CP)—Morris W. Wilson, agent in North America for the British Ministry of Aircraft Production, today said delivery already has started on the 600 Hurricane fighter planes ordered from the Canadian Car and Foundry Company of Fort William, Ont., biggest United Kingdom plane contract so far placed in the Dominion.

Mr. Wilson declined to disclose the value of the order, but a reliable estimate was $15,000,000, based on a cost of about $25,000 for each plane, minus the engine and a number of other accessories.

Order Increased

"Delivery has started," Mr. Wilson said when asked about the order. An educational order was given to the firm a year ago. When the first planes were found satisfactory, the Ministry of Aircraft Production simply increased the order to 600 and told the company to "speed it up."

Asked about the possibility that the Royal Canadian Air Force fighter squadron in England might be using Canadian-made planes, Lord Beaverbrook's aide said "I would be surprised if they were not." He explained that he loses contact with the planes once they are turned over to the Royal Navy for convoy to the United Kingdom.

3 Norwegians Sentenced to Die By Nazi Court

Oslo, German-occupied Norway, (via Berlin), Aug 29—(AP)—Three Norwegians were sentenced to death by a German military court here today on charges of espionage.

They are Col. Ole Garbriel Lund, 67; Johannes Solem, 67-year-old physician, and a young businessman named Rendedal—all from Bergen, one of Norway's most important harbors facing Britain.

A fourth defendant was sentenced to five years of penal servitude and two others were acquitted.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont... Aug. 29—(CP)—Brig. General R. O. Alexander, D.S.O., Commanding Officer of Military District No. 2, arrived at Niagara camp before noon today to inspect approximately 8000 troops engaged in their regular training schedule. Camp officers said no special program had been arranged, and the Brigadier General would review nonpermanent and active service forces training in various sections of the camp. A conference with Col. R. E. Smythe, D.S.O., M.C., camp commandant, was also scheduled.

Aim of Governments After War Social Justice, Says Miss Haskins

Author of Poem, Who Became Famous When Quoted by His Majesty, Speaks at Calgary

PROBLEMS OF HEALTH

Calgary, Aug. 29 CP)—Aim of governments after the war must be for Social Justice, Miss M. Louise Haskins of Banff, Alta., formerly of London, said last night in addressing the triennial convention of the Canadian Federation of University Women's Clubs.

Miss Haskins, who became famous when the words of a poem she wrote some years ago were quoted by His Majesty in his New Year's radio address, said the character of general government which will come after the war may be slow to emerge but its nucleus should appear in terms of a peace treaty.

The former London school of economics staff member said certain necessities of the post-war world could be forecast. The world would face after the war most of the conditions of the last war but those conditions would be intensified with the most serious problems those of health.

Any remaining luxuries of life must be strictly curtained as long as the vital needs of good health were unfulfilled and housing projects would be a part of the health scheme, she believed.

Great private fortunes would not have a part in the post-war world, she predicted.

Rumania Adopts Policy to Repel Any Incursions

Incidents on Rumania's Border Figure in Situation

By EDWIN SHANKE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, Aug. 29—(AP)—Fearing new clashes between Soviet and Rumanian troops following a declaration of King Carol's government that it will yield no more ground to the Russians, hundreds of residents of southern Bucovina and Moldavia were reported moving hurriedly southward into the old kingdom of Rumania today.

The exodus was liveliest between the river Prut and Siretul, where troops of both sides are said to be concentrating. Clashes, said to have arisen from the fact that the new border is not clearly defined yet, were reported there earlier this week.

New Russian Demand Reported

Still another Soviet demand growing out of the seizure of the province of Bessarabia has been received by the Rumanian government, Rumanians said. Moscow now is reported asking that the mixed Russian Rumanian Claims Commission should determine the value of property remaining in Rumania of persons who moved into Soviet-occupied territory and that the estimated amount should be paid directly to the Soviet government by the Rumanian government. So far, this property has been under the direction of the Rumanian state administrators.

Vienna, Aug. 29 —(AP)— The Axis-supervised discussions looking toward a solution of the territorial dispute between Hungary and Rumania opened today as Hungarian Premier Count Paul Teleky and Foreign Minister Count Istvan Csaky were received by the German and Italian Foreign Ministers.

Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano, the German and Italian ministers, planned to follow up their talks with the Hungarians by holding separate discussions with Rumanian representatives later. Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu and his aides arrived by train from Bucharest this morning.

The preliminary discussions were held at the Imperial Hotel, headquarters of Ribbentrop and Ciano.

But, even as the delegates converged here, Rumania formally accused the Hungarian air force of "real acts of hostility" in air clashes over their border and announced officially she was adopting a policy of "force" to repel any Hungarian incursions.

Counter Charges Made

Hungary countered with charges ing planes on reconnaissance flights ing planes on reconalssance flights over her territory. Recent incidents on Rumania's border with Soviet Russia also appeared to figure in the situation.

PRINCESS JULIANA VISITS THE C.N.E.

Unseasonal Weather Has Had the Effect of Keeping the Attendance Down

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)—Attendance held down by unseasonal weather that has brought out topcoats, the 62nd annual Canadian National Exhibition entered its sixth day today showing a decrease in attendance of 40,000 in comparison with last year.

A total of 594,000 persons have visited the exposition this season. Yesterday—Food Products and Merchants' Day—86,000 passed through the turnstiles, 21,000 less than the same day last year.

One of the features yesterday was an auction of groceries. Proceeds totalled $186 and will be given to the Red Cross. Toronto women took the three major prizes in another draw for more than $1,200 worth of War Savings Certificates.

Princess Juliana of The Netherlands, a war refugee in Canada for the duration, paid a lengthy visit to the world's largest annual fair yesterday and received 250 Hollanders from the district and approximately 50 Toronto notables, including Sir William Mulock, former Chief Justice of Ontario. She also viewed exhibits and was cheered soundly by crowds who gathered for a glimpse of her.

NO DAMAGE REPORTED IN SLIGHT FIRE

A pile of rubbish at the rear of the Pinkle Electric premises on Pinnacle Street, which in some unknown manner became afire, caused the fire department a short run to that address at 10.00 o'clock Wednesday evening. Only a few cans of water and the hand pump were required to extinguish the flames, however, and no damage was reported with the exception of a small portion of fence, which was burned.

PEACHES TO BE CANNED IN SOME FACTORIES

Canning factories throughout the district, especially in the Prince Edward County area are preparing their plants this week for the canning of tomatoes but it is expected that the early runs will be light.

When questioned this morning, officials of the Canadian Packers factory on Albion Street, stated that they were ready to start any time but no tomatoes have been brought in by farmers yet. The cold and backward weather of the past week has retarded the ripening of the fruit, they said, but it was expected the factory would begin operations next week.

Peaches will be canned as well as tomatoes in some of the Prince Edward factories.

LITTLE CHANGE NOTED IN MARKET PRICES

Little change was noted in prices on the mid-week market in Belleville this morning with all vegetables and fruits retailing practically at former levels. Green gages and Burbank plums were selling at 50c per basket while Yellow Free stone peaches retailed at the same figure.

Tomatoes held steady at 20c the small basket and 35c for the eleven quart baskets. Duchess apples were 30c the peck or $1.00 per bushel. Corn ranged from 20c to 25c per dozen and potatoes at 25c the peck and 80c the bushel. Watermelons and muskmelons were offered at declining prices, ranging downward from 25c each while vegetables were offered at the usual figures.

New Shopping Centre Greatly Appreciated by Buying Public

Attractive displays of new merchandise, artistically arranged under the soft lights of its modern lighting system, drew a large crowd of morning shoppers to the official opening of the new Canadian Department Stores Front Street building today.

At an early hour, in fact a few minutes after the new shopping centre was declared officially open by Manager Frank Correll, a large throng surged through the brilliantly lighted main-floor entrances.

Consensus of opinion, gathered from snatches of conversation of the groups of people that wandered through the modern-equipped three floors, was that the new store has lived up to all advance notices. People climbed the grand stairways or availed themselves of the electrically - operated elevator to visit the second and third floors where other attractive displays were placed for their approval and shopping interest.

The new up-to-date equipment, lighting, heating and power plants, the new sprinkling system, the ultra-modern lighting system that brings out to the full all the qualities and colors of displayed merchandise, the handsome white and ivory decorative motifs and the many other latest improvements, that make the store one of the most attractive in this part of Ontario, came under the critical eyes of Mr. and Mrs. John Public.

Manager Frank Correll and Mr. N. Sand, director of the T. Eaton Company, Toronto, greeted their shopping guests at the main floor entrances. Members of the staff, selected for their courtesy and efficiency, catered to the wants of the buying public.

By noon, Belleville's shopping public, and a large number of the curious had placed their official stamp of approval on the latest and newest addition to the city's business centres.

No Increase in Price Of Export Cheese Seen By Marketing Director

J. F. Singleton, Ottawa, C. Lackner, Ontario Director of Dairying and H. B. Sandwith, Chief Dairy Instructor in Ontario, Speakers at "Get-Together" of Cheesemen at Cook's Warehouse Wednesday Evening

Due to the fact, that New Zealand was furnishing England with an additional 1,500,000 long tons of cheese this year her original contract and was selling this cheese to the Mother Country at the same price she is receiving for the first lot, Canadian farmers were given very little encouragement to expect an increase in the price of their export cheese, was hinted by Mr. J. F. Singleton, Assistant Director of Marketing Services, Ottawa, at the third annual Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association "get together" held at W. S. Cook's warehouse in Belleville Wednesday evening. Mr. Singleton was one of the principal speakers on a very instructive and constructive program, which included talks by Mr. C. Lackner, Director of Dairying for Ontario, H. B. Sandwith, Chief Dairy Instructor and many others.

Mr. Sandwith, after congratulating cheesemakers and producers on the splendid work they have accomplished this year, stressed the necessity of increased production of cheese during war time. He urged farmers to put forth some special effort to maintain the flow of milk and advised supplementary feeding as one means of accomplishing this end. Already, he said, there had been an increase in production this year over last of approximately 6,000,000 lbs. but urged special efforts being put forth to keep factories open as long as possible.

Splendid Improvement

"There had also been splendid improvement in cutting down the numbers of second grade cheese," said Mr. Sandwith, stating, that in the three month period of from May 1st to July 31st, there had been a reduction in Ontario of 12,978 boxes of second grade cheese. "This," he said "was due to more co-operation between the farmer and the cheesemaker, more favorable weather conditions and to the fact that instructors had spent more time among the cheese factories. The onus of increasing the quality of cheese," he said, "rests with the maker and the producer, and stressed the importance of proper cooling in furnishing high scoring milk to the factory."

Mr. Lackner stated, that Ontario cheese factories produced 72 per cent of the cheese manufactured in Canada and said that for this reason England expected any production increase in Canada to come from this section of the country. There had been an increase in production of 13.7 per cent, up till the end of July, he said, to which he considered better pasture conditions as being responsible rather than any divergence of milk from other industries such as the creamery or condensary.

No Guarantee For Demand

It was much more difficult to talk of increased production of cheese than to attain this increase he said, because it was not feasible to construct cheese factories in districts where beef type cattle predominated. We have no guarantee of how long this demand for cheese will continue, therefore, he said, we must not expect any increase from districts not now producing cheese. He doubted very much if there had been any great divergence of milk from the butter to the cheese industry, giving as a reason the value of skim milk in raising of livestock. Then too, milk requires much more care than cream and farmers seem unwilling to take this extra work on.

We cannot expect any great divergence from butter; it is possible there may be some divergence from condensaries as some are getting stocked up in supplies, and there will be no divergence from dairies. Therefore, with an abundance of cheap grain in the country he advised supplementary feeding to maintain the milk flow. Many are not in favour of winter cheese, but if England wants cheese it is up to Canadians to keep their factories open and supply their needs, he said.

Cannot Afford Exorbitant Prices

It was reasonable, Mr. Lackner stated, to suppose that as the cost of living increases, the prices of cheese would also be increased, but, he warned, England cannot afford to pay exorbitant prices for her products of which she requires a great many, and Canadian farmers should not expect profits far in excess of the cost of production, concluded Mr. Lackner.

Mr. Singleton touched on the increase in production of cheese noted in Canada this season, stating that there had been a gradual increase in the quantities of cheese boarded as the season had progressed, while at the same time there had been a gradual decrease in the butter output. This of course, referred to the Dominion output, he said.

He also referred to the increase in the quality of cheese manufactured this season, stating that this increase in quality will cost the government an additional $213,000 in bonus money. Mr. Singleton gave some advice to the cheese makers in the proper operation of the cold storage plants, which so many factories had installed this season. He also asked makers to be as careful as possible in marking their boxes so to make them legible as possible.

We hope to exceed 90,000,000 pounds of cheese shipped to England this season, said Mr. Singleton, and as New Zealand has also substantially increased her shipments of cheese to the United Kingdom, he accordingly stressed the importance of maintaining a high standard of quality after the war is over.

Jack West Chairman

Mr. Jack West, of Stirling, acted as chairman for the evening and in a short address referred to the importance of the cheesemaking industry and to the work on the home front which cheese makers and producers were doing to help win the war. Mr. J. Irwin, local cheese grader, also spoke briefly.

Entertainment was afforded during the course of the program by Mr. Duncan Cowan of Toronto, and Jamie Clarke with his Scottish pipes. Both Mr. Cowan and "Jamie" gave several numbers which were much appreciated. Refreshments of cheese, buns and coffee were served after the regular meeting.

KRESGE STAFFS HOLD PICNIC

Oshawa and Belleville Stores Combine for an Enjoyable Afternoon

Staffs of the Belleville and Oshawa branches of the Kresge stores united yesterday in a joint annual picnic at Ontario Park, Cobourg, and in spite of weather that was anything but conducive to an enjoyable outdoor function, had the "time of their lives" in the comparative comfort of the park pavilion.

Sixty members of the joint staffs, including about twenty-five from the Belleville store, who made the journey under the fatherly eye of Manager Jack McVeigh, enjoyed a program of indoor sports that included shuffleboard and other games. The damp weather held off long enough for the Belleville girls to demonstrate their softball superiority, defeating their Oshawa colleagues by a 16-12 score..

Managers McVeigh, Belleville and K. D. Gahan, Oshawa, secured the services of an orchestra and the girls danced during the afternoon and early evening. A delightful picnic luncheon was held in the early evening, with Coach "Stub" Barrett of the local Kresge softball team winning the "grocery - removal" championship. The girls were taken to the scene of the picnic by cars arranged for by the management.

CANADA'S CLIMATE

The reopening of schools is a sign that summer's date will soon pass and that the vacation time is nearing an end.

The climate in this part is one of the finest in the world, even if there are times when the seasons seem a little mixed as some might think of the unusually cool weather during the past week. But all in all the climate of Ontario is one of the most to be desired. It builds hale and hearty children, youth, manhood and womanhood. The same can be said of other parts of the Dominion.

It seems a long way back to the remnants of last winter and it has been a long time during which the people of all ages have been able to enjoy the spring and summer. The children and the young no doubt appreciate more than their elders the superlatively fine weather Ontario can boast. It is a moderate climate, the extremes even in the height of summer and the depth of winter are not too great though some naturally would wish them less.

With lungs full of the fresh and clear air of this part of the northern hemisphere, children are now returning for the resumption of their studies and preparation for life's duties. They show the results of their freedom as exercised in the summer months. Adults as well feel the benefit of the season which is nearing a close.

One of the finest evidences of the health-giving climate is provided by the men who are serving in the forces of their country. They are the perfection of health as everyone can see. They are the finest demonstration of Canadian young manhood. Their healthy youth and manhood show how Canadian stamina and brawn Canadian mental alertness and Canadian resourcefulness are a natural endowment.

The boys and girls who have been holidaying and building up reserves of health of body and mind will carry on this tradition of the healthy mind in the healthy body. Canada's climate is invigorating.

NAZI GERMAN RUTHLESSNESS

German aircraft dropped bombs that killed three Irish girls on Monday at Campile on the southeast coast of Eire. That was the finding of the jury which investigated the deaths.

This finding of the jury is an indictment of the German military machine which can not be forgotten. It struck straight at the criminals who did the bloody, dastardly deed. There was no doubt of the origin of the aircraft, witnesses had told they saw the markings on the plane. "I don't know how anybody could for an instant suggest the bombing of Campile was in any way accidental," Coroner Fintan O'Connor declared. "Evidence clearly shows that these deaths were caused by German aircraft."

The wilfulness and recklessness of the nazis in the destruction of life stand out as one of the most horrible developments of a system based on inhumanity. Numberless accounts have been given of the nazi fliers machine-gunning English farmers in the fields, people in the streets, children on the beaches—a deliberate desire to wipe out life.

Nazism is such that every principle of life and progress must fight it to the death and destroy this

FIRE LOSSES

Canada lost in fires last year wealth to the total of nearly twenty-five million dollars, Dominion fire chiefs were told the other evening at Brantford. The annual per capita fire loss averaged $3.36 in Canada over a ten year period ending 1937 as compared with $3.26 in the United States, 71 cents in England and 55 cents in France.

The western world has a long way to go in reaching the lower average for England.

Here there is not only the loss of wealth but also the fact that fire causes grave hazards to life for firemen and for all other people.

What this means in insurance is only too evident for these losses are spread among the people in the form of losses of property and in insurance rates. Protection by insurance against fire has to take into account the probability of fire losses and where losses are great rates must be high.

Bombs Over Berlin

Hitler's bombing of London may not signify any great increase of armed might so much as the fury and weakness of desperation, for he well knew that such action would invite instant reprisals, as indeed has been the case.

The war has been in progress almost a year, and it was only within recent days that the outskirts of London were bombed, and last week-end that bombs are reported to have fallen indiscriminately over the heart of the Empire. Why did Hitler desist for so long? Not for humane reasons, it is certain. He knew that the moment his bombers began to go "all out" over London, British bombers would immediately retaliate over Berlin and other large German cities.

Nothing short of desperation is likely to have forced Hitler to adopt such measures, for he is probably no more able to foretell what the morale of Berlin's population will be in an intensive air raid than any other man. He would have the world believe, of course, that nothing can crack the endurance of the German people. But morale is a peculiar state of mind: if it be firm and unshakable, then authorities say it must be rooted in courage and nourished by courage. Often it cracks where populations are densest. There is no reason to believe that the German people are cowardly, but their Fuehrer has been telling them that Britain is in ruins and the annihilation of her people but a matter of days. How, then, can such a people strike as British flyers struck early today at the centre of Berlin? Even Hitler and his enslaved press can scarcely explain that grim fact.

Berlin is said to be an easy centre to bomb, more vulnerable to air attack than London. It spreads over twice the area of Paris. Factories are thickly clustered in its eastern section and there are said to be endless rows of massed houses. British bombs over that new and severely-classic chancellory. British bombs dropping in Unter den Linden and the Wilhelmstrasse—that is not the way Hitler was going to conduct this war. It is not the way the German people have been led to expect the war was going.

Bombs over Berlin may do more to unmask Hitler than all the tons of propaganda he and his loudspeakers can blare forth in a year.

Bombs on Ireland

The German bombs that fell on Ireland yesterday did far greater damage than the destruction of a creamery and the killing of three Irish girls. They smashed the illusion that there is any safety in neutrality. They proved that Ireland is at Germany's mercy today just as surely as if she were actually at war. Her soil will be bombed, her innocent civilians killed, her ports and landing fields seized whenever it suits Germany's purpose to do so. Her only protection is in her own pathetic defenses or in the help that she will allow her stronger friends to bring her.

There is no way of knowing whether yesterday's bombing was the preliminary to an attempted invasion. Germany's announced purpose, however, is to blockade Great Britain. If the blockade is to be effective it must cut off the immense traffic of Irish food supplies which now helps Great Britain to carry on the war. It is not enough to bomb and sink the ships bringing these foodstuffs, or to smash British harbors, for Germany has not yet been able to enforce her blockade in this way. The traffic must be cut at its source. Yesterday's raid may, therefore, have been a warning to Ireland to stop feeding Great Britain or face the consequences. If the Irish Government yields to such pressure it will doom its people to poverty, for Ireland can sell her produce nowhere else. If the Irish Government defies this Nazi bullying it may invite more raids and more visits by the angel of death into Irish homes.—N.Y. Times.

BRAVE MEN ENSLAVED

German youths have received their orders about Poland. The Poles are to be treated as servant people. This indication of the Nazi attitude toward a gallant conquered race should stiffen the British determination that Nazi domination shall never come to the Empire.—Windsor Star.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Hearing Aids

One of the pleasing sights these days is the efficient though hard of hearing clerk behind an "information" desk who is not ashamed of the little button worn behind his ear, in his ear, or a "receiver" attached to upper part of his coat or vest. A short time ago a clerk or other worker who was growing hard of hearing knew that his work of dealing with the public would be soon lost to him. Today he is able to get a hearing aid suitable for his particular type of hearing loss. Not only is his job now safe, but his outlook on life is normal. Not only is he able to carry on his work, but he is now a part of his surroundings, one of the members of the family or community, able to hear and to take part in conversation.

The history of blind people is that they are happier than those who have lost their hearing for just that reason—they are able to hear and take part in conversation. The hard of hearing individual has been "shut out" of many things.

In speaking of the present standing of hearing aids, Dr. Horace Newhart, Minneapolis, in Archives of Physical Therapy, states that 95 per cent of the electric hearing apparatus itself and in fitting it to the individual.

"Testing with audiogram (which records the amount and type of hearing present) equipped to measure loss of hearing both by air (sound going into outer ear) and bone conduction (air going direct from bone behind ear to hearing nerve) is the important first step in prescription of the correct type of hearing aid. The physician must familiarize himself with the elementary principles of physics to help fitting of the proper aid. The type of hearing loss present (not just the amount) is important in the selection of hearing aids".

As noted above, the point is that no longer is it necessary for many suffering with hard of hearing to avoid contacts with friends, church, the theatre or movies. And the most gratifying point is that the hard of hearing are willing to wear or use hearing aids recognizing that it is just as sensible to use hearing aids as it is to wear glasses to aid vision.

"Tale of Two Cities"

(London Standard)

Paris is still a beautiful city, even though it has fallen into the hands of Germany. The Champs-Elysees is untouched. The gardens have not lost their charm. The sun shines as gloriously down the boulevards. By not fighting for Paris her rulers have rescued her beauty. Yet for all that we know Paris is a tomb. Stone and brick and mortar, however artfully constructed, do not make a city. The real pulse of a city's life must be sought in the hearts of her citizens. French hearts are heavy and subdued by the Gestapo. Therefore, for all her retained beauty, Paris is dead.

London will profit by this example. Our decision is that we would prefer to see London in ruins, her cathedrals desolated, her monuments hauled down, the glory of her parks scarred and defamed; all this we would prefer if we can still hold London in English hands. For Paris and the fate of France, which we mourn with all good Frenchmen, has taught us this lesson: In war against Nazidom there is only one value by which all our acts and treasures must be measured. It is victory. Life, beauty, laughter, love, all else depends on victory.

Business as Usual At a "Wrecked Port"

There is a certain highly-important British naval base which, according to the Germans, their air raiders have "wrecked and devastated." Miss Helen Kirkpatrick, one of the competent staff maintained in England by the Chicago Daily News, was permitted to visit this establishment last Wednesday, and her report flatly contradicts the reports of the Berlin fiction factories.

Miss Kirkpatrick says she "covered the whole port thoroughly" and this is her conclusion:

"If what the Germans have done to this highly important naval port is any criterion of the German ability to knock out this country it could safely be said that Great Britain is good for at least another century."

There have been 50 raids over the port, but in only five were bombs dropped, and almost all of them fell on the town where some 600 houses were damaged—most of them slightly. There have been 19 persons killed and a few injured, nearly all civilians.

"Where bombs did fall near a naval objective one landed in an apple tree and another on a football field. The nearest they have come to the most vital dockyards, which stick out like a sore thumb, was one that landed a quarter of a mile away, and another that landed on a shed near a factory."

Meanwhile, says Miss Kirkpatrick, 18,000 workers in the base "are going full tilt on all kinds of ships—Polish, Norwegian, Dutch and French as well as British." Neither townspeople nor naval authorities seem worried at the prospects of more raids—"they have the feeling that German pilots don't like the neighborhood very well." And in the meantime

"...All manner of naval craft seem to dart in and out of the harbor with the assurance that the American navy might have in entering or leaving Newport News today."

The Chicago Daily News prints its reporter's story under the caption: "'Wrecked' Base of British Navy Found Unharmed—German Claims False." In this item at least the truth has caught up with enemy lies, and the natural effect, with those who read Miss Kirkpatrick's report, is to discredit future fantasies from Berlin.—Ottawa Journal.

Antidote for a Shiny Nose

By HELEN FOLLETT

What would we do without the friendly powder pad to put the dull finish on the bright and shining nose? A girl flies to it when she is happy, it restores her face to normal when she has had a good cry, she plies it diligently when the best feller is about to ring the doorbell to drag her to a gay party.

Complexion powder is a protective agent against the elements—sharp winds and burning sunlight. Properly and discreetly applied, it imparts a velvety appearance to the skin. But don't expect too much from it; it will not conceal blemishes like blackheads and eruptions, so get after them full force with soap and water and a solution of baking soda.

Cleanliness First Law

Keep your powder box covered, and keep your powder pad in some kind of a container. Scrupulous cleanliness is the first law in complexion care. Fluff the powder on lightly, don't grind it in. Start on the throat, calcimine your ears, pat from chin to forehead, treat the nose last. The usual rule is to slap a cloud of powder on the nose first. Poor technique, that.

Select a color slightly darker than your skin. It's worth while trotting to a cosmetic bar where there are open containers and a smart little girl in charge who will give professional advice.

Armpits must have attention. When having the daily bath, friction the armpits well with clear water before applying soap suds; clear water is a better means of removing the chemical wastes deposited by the sweat glands.

When little fuzzers are removed by means of a depilatory or razor, it is not wise to use a deodorant or deterrent the same day because the flesh is likely to be sensitive.

Among your cosmetic treasures should be a large box of bath powder and a large lamb's wool pad. Employ these beauty aids in the armpits after a friction with a heavy towel that takes hold like a guilty conscience.

Keep your powder box covered and keep your powder pad in some kind of a container.

Father in Second Childhood

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

A mother writes: "Some time ago I wrote you for help and received such excellent advice, that I feel you can help me straighten out my present problem—I can't get along with my father. He lives with my husband, my three children and myself.

"He must be the cock-of-the-walk. He must be consulted and included in all our plans—or else! He must be the whole thing, the main thing, or he is not happy; and if he isn't happy, no one else will be either. And knowing it only too well, we all bend over backwards trying to please him, and heaven help us when we fail."

More and more letters like this are coming to me. While I answer them as best I can, I realize how much harder the problem is than if it were a case of early childhood.

Spoiled Children

In contrast with this case I wish I had space and adequate words to describe a man of 85 years old who used to play games with Mrs. Myers and me nearly every evening. I wish I might be half as easy to live with if or when I reach that age.

I just wonder what kind of persons you and I will be when we are in our eighties or beyond. If we should have to be cared for and linger long, long years, I wonder how irritable or good natured we will be; how morose or cheerful; how stubborn or cooperative. The kind of person we will be then will make a vast deal of difference to the people we live with, especially if these people are our own children who themselves are parents of growing children. Will we be spoiled children? Yes, if we were spoiled children during our first childhood, no doubt — unless we made improvement in the meanwhile.

There may be a few people hard to manage in old age who had a childhood of wholesome, happy guidance and discipline. But this number must be very small, indeed. Everything we know about psychology leads us to believe that second childhood merely recapitulates the first; that the way we will act toward those who will care for us in old age was determined, for the most part, years ago when we were mere children.

Knowing now that we have ugly traits which make it hard for others to live with us, or minister to us when we are ill, let us struggle with ourselves daily to improve.

You are rearing your child not only to live well in the family, to prepare to be a good wife or husband, father or mother, and good citizen; you are also rearing this child to grow old agreeably and gracefully. This objective in wise parenthood will gain added importance as the years go by, for, as you know, the growing child is destined to live more and more among adults and old people.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My nine-year-old boy bolts his food and will finish a meal in eight minutes and run out to play.

A. Say nothing about his speed of eating. Merely tell him he shall remain at the table for exactly 20 minutes. With all this time on his hand, he will hardly find so much urge to eat rapidly.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Observing the Amenities Makes the Artist in Living

The word amenities is one of the most stimulating and heart-warming of words.

Your dictionary will tell you that amenity means "The quality of being pleasant and agreeable"; that amenities (and we usually use the word in the plural means "acts, pursuits, civilities, or the like, expressing or furthering pleasantness or smoothness of social intercourse".

"The quality of being pleasant and agreeable . . . "acts expressing or furthering pleasantness or smoothness" . . . here are words that suggest the grace and beauty of life as it can be lived.

Amenities are the Big Little Things that pleasant people do and say, the graces that make these people artists in living.

The people who practice the "civilities that further pleasantness or smoothness" are, of course, those who have consideration for other people. Who charmingly and spontaneously do and say the agreeable thing. Who have caught the rhythm of beauty in life and walk gallantly with this song in their hearts. Who knows that kidneys and courtesy soothe and heal and inspire those who walk with them or pass them in the pathway of their lives. Who are sustained in the faith that life is good, and who deeply feel the responsibility of contributing their quota to that goodness.

To make the machinery of daily living run more smoothly to make others more comfortable and thereby to make ourselves more comfortable, let's resolve to pay deep attention to practising "those little acts of kindness and of love" . . . the amenities. Let's not be thick-skinned or smug or indifferent to other persons. Let's not brush by people in life with never a by-your-leave.

Let's oil the machinery of life with a pleasant and polite "Please", to a bus driver as well as to Mrs. Personage. Let's spend our "Thank you's" prodigally and spontaneously and naturally. Let's recognise another's courtesy and say, "How kind of you to say that", or "You were very good to do that for me". Let's rise when we should rise. Let's give up our seats when we should. Let's quickly and graciously yield to the rights and convenience of others. Let's step aside when we should step aside. Let's do courteous services to our family, to our friends, to our acquaintances, to strangers who need our help. Let's be quick to apologise for any omission or thoughtlessness. Let's promptly write our gracious notes of thanks, and good wishes, and congratulations. Let's make kindness the law of our tongue, courtesy the law of our spirit.

The rules of etiquette are our "basic dress". The amenities are the harmonious accessories. Together they make the perfect "design for living".

Courtesy Tip

I like very much the poise and helpfulness of some people who under necessary circumstances (for example, at a large party) introduce themselves to you, a stranger, and give enough of their background to start a conversation. For example, a woman may say, "My name is Mrs. Charles Brooks, my husband is that tall, dark man standing by that piano, we live in San Diego, and we're in New York for a few weeks because of my husband's business. We're seeing as many of the new plays as we can, hearing music, and I'm doing some shopping mainly window-shopping". In this graciously-given information, you will find at least one topic to begin a conversation!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Good Riddance

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I met a young man who was going with a girl, but after he had a few dates with me he confessed that he loved me. That was a year ago and during this time he never spent a cent on me. We always stayed at home, and if I didn't speak of it first, he would suggest fixing something in the way of a light supper, and I always did it, but he never offered to chip in on the expense.

He went away for a few months, but before he left, he told me again how much he loved me. He returned a couple weeks ago engaged to the other girl. Now what do you think of that young man? I must have treated him too well. However, I can say I'm not exactly heartbroken, but

Disgusted

As long as you ask what I think, I must say a young man who suggests supper every time he calls and never brings anything toward the "spread" looks to me like a "sponger". He belongs to what some of my young friends call the "chair-warmer" type and a woman married to this type has a hard time getting him to come across with household expenses. You seem to possess a charmed life in escaping this young man. Honestly don't you think so?

Found Old-Fashioned Party Delightful

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We're two sisters, and our mother thought it would be a good thing for us to have a restful summer vacation, so she packed us off to our grandmother, who lives in a picturesque New England village where very little happens. We were bored to tears. When we came across your account of a revival of old-fashioned parties, which was new stuff to us. So we "threw" the party with a desire to scoff, and remained to have a thoroughly good time.

We picked out the party where everyone brought lights, because the moon happened to be sulking. Half the fun were the ridiculous lights they brought (I forgot to say we asked some of our city boy and girl friends, and some of the more sophisticated people here in the village.) They brought lanterns, one a huge canal boat lantern with a reflector—regular museum piece. Some brought watermelon lanterns with faces cut like pumpkins. There were Chinese lanterns, shoe-box lanterns and electric torches.

After the "eats", which were the usual picnic variety, each girl was escorted home by lantern light. Then to make the thing thoroughly old-fashioned, the fellows serenaded, going to each house and singing outside after we had said goodnight. It was loads of fun.

Mary Lee

Glad you had such a good time at the "Quaint Party". I've been getting letters from girls similar to yours saying how much fun these revivals have proved to be.

Send a Box of Candy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a girl who was in my graduating class last June. However, she doesn't know about it because we weren't very well acquainted. Not knowing her intimately, and as our homes are quite a distance apart, I hesitate to call on her without an invitation.

Do you think there would be any harm in sending her a card, preferably one with a picture of our school on it, asking her if she remembers?

Jerry

No harm at all. In fact, I think it would be a good plan. But why stop at a picture card—why not send along a box of candy, too? It would be an ideal way to renew your acquaintance.

ALL MANNER of activities should move at high tempo on this day, with the energies and faculties keyed up to very expansive and important objectives. It may be that quick action of an audacious or drastic nature may be called for in connection with public or group activities.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves immersed in a year of dynamic events, with bold, audacious, prompt and even drastic action needed to successfully cope with openings or opportunities of major importance. Such attack must be aggressive, decisive and prompt, with full sense of obligation as well as opportunity.

A child born on this day may have a dynamic, aggressive, audacious and ingenious nature, with much versatility, initiative and public spirited proclivities, probably of a spectacular or dominant personality.

IVANHOE W.M.S.

Mrs. Albert Reid entertained the Ivanhoe W.M.S. for their August meeting held Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 20. The president Mrs. Frank Palmer opened the meeting with hymn 556. Mrs. Wickens read the scripture found in Psalm 113, Rev. Mr. Delve led in prayer for peace and Mrs. Lovibond for our missionaries on foreign fields. The roll call answered by the key word "work" showed 16 present. The watch tower was taken by Mrs. Wickens on "Trinidad." Mrs. Reid on "China" and Miss Gwen Reid on "Japanese and Chinese Christians."

Phyllis Twiddy gave a reading on "Tomorrow." Miss Beverley Palmer favored with a solo "The emblem of our Mission Band." Mr. Delve gave a very interesting talk on the necessity of carrying on our missionary work in war time. Mrs. Sam Kilpatrick gave a paper on our most valuable possessions. Doris Twiddy gave a solo "Jesus bids us shine." The collection amounted to $1.05 and was dedicated to our missionary work by Mrs. Sam Twiddy. The hostess served a delicious ten cent tea, the proceeds of which were $1.30. A hearty vote of thanks was moved to her for an enjoyable afternoon.

Recently a number of members of the Ivanhoe W.M.S. met at the home of Mrs. Sam Twiddy and quilted a quilt for the bale to be packed the 1st of September. The quilt was set up under the trees and at 12 o'clock a delicious pot luck lunch was served outdoors, the proceeds of which were $2.80.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

More About Shyness

As stated here yesterday, shyness can't be dismissed as just a "natural" thing in some children. Neither can it be ignored upon the supposition the child will outgrow it. It is a problem which must be approached as carefully as if the child is ill physically.

Any mother with a shy child on her hands has a problem to cope with that is going to require the use of a great deal of common sense and patience.

I recall one mother with a little girl almost unbelievably shy. The child, in fact, was made almost physically ill by the presence of strangers. She played the piano in the privacy of her home very well for a youngster and the mother, with total lack of understanding, it seemed, repeatedly tried to force the child to play for strangers. Finally, she compelled the child to go up on the stage of an auditorium to play in a concert one night. The child broke down, couldn't play, and became ill.

The mother was embarrassed and of course, angry with the child. I'm afraid she might have ruined her daughter's life if I hadn't been able to make her realise fully the problem and the special care needed in dealing with it.

Such a child cannot be forced. If force is used, then the damage to the child's mind may be permanent. Very slowly and tactfully, this type of child must be led into companionship with adults. She must learn that they can be genuinely interested in her and like her. She must be shown that it is fun to be with other people. Little by little the fear that has been paralysing the child, must be broken down until she realizes that other people, far from hurting her, will make her happy.

Very often the shy child is an only child. It grows up without its social sense developed by contacts with others of its age. It makes mistakes that are laughed at. It becomes timid about meeting persons lest it make more such mistakes. This timidity makes it less sought as a companion by children and less interesting to adults. Its shyness becomes more pronounced.

Often a neighbor child, slightly older, can be brought into the plot to help restore the shy child's self-confidence. Instruction in a school that will develop proficiency in some art or craft likewise may build up confidence.

Shyness is only lack of confidence. So this confidence must be built up. The wise parent will find something that the girl or boy can do well, possibly better that other children his age. It may be swimming, or model-building, or animal training, or dancing. By encouraging him or her to demonstrate the ability and win the approval of others, it can be made to release some of his inhibitions. His shyness—his fear—his lack of confidence—can be replaced by a normal outlook on life.

It is easier to overcome shyness in a child than in an older person. The child life to become more and more shy, more and more ingrown, more and more unbalanced, is usually doomed by parents to go through life haunted by fears and suffering tortures every time he has to meet strangers.

Lovely Loretta Young who is co-starred with Melvyn Douglas in the gay new comedy hit, "He Stayed for Breakfast," which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre after Sunday midnight.

Wife Preservers

In marketing economically for the family, remember that large "show" fruit which often sells at a fancy price, may have less flavor and food value than smaller and less showy fruits. Small prunes often give more money value than large ones, and medium-sized oranges more juice for the money than large ones.

Manager of Chicago White Sox Believes His Team Can Decide American Loop Pennant Race

Team Has Six Games to Play With Cleveland and Five With Tigers

PHILLIES ARE OUT

Drop Doubleheader and Mathematically Stand No Chance to Win Pennant

(By Sid Feder)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The only thing missing when Jimmy Dykes opened his now bowling and soda emporium in Philadelphia the other night was for the International Society of Magicians to step up and present him with an engraved card as an honorary member.

If ever a fellow rated it for reaching into hats and pulling out all sorts of surprises to the red-faced confusion of most of the American League's First Division, Jimmy is the lad.

He's been doing it for years, too, out there with his Chicago White Sox. Right now, he's winding up his sixth full season as boss of the Sox, and he stands a good chance to finish in the First Division for the fourth time. He's only a game away as a result of his 3-2 victory over Boston Red Sox yesterday in the only American League game to get by the rain.

Jimmy has been doing his tricks year after year with a collection of baseballers which at best, is nothing to go into ecstasies over. Five of his seven regular pitchers and five of those seing most action in other spots are more than 30. Jimmy, himself, is a mere 43 and still on the active playing list.

Yesterday's win was turned in by the five-hit elbowing of Bill Dietrich, and an eight-inning run-making double by Larry Rosenthal.

Indians Hold Edge

Jimmy doesn't feel at all comfortable about the 8-4 edge the Indians hold over the Sox in games played between the two this season. He's just waiting for the six games still to come with the tribe.

"Y'know," he said, "it wouldn't surprise me at all if something happened to Cleveland in those six games. In fact, looking over the schedule, you might say our gang can decide the pennant race. We play six more with Cleveland, five with Detroit and three each with the Yanks and Boston".

Over in the National League, the pennant race became a seven-team affair yesterday. The Phillies, who never had a chance anyway, dropped both ends of a doubleheader to some excellent elbowing by Pittsburgh pitchers Truett Sewell and Joe Bowman, and were eliminated mathematically from the flag chase. Sewell tossed a three-hitter on the opener for a 5-0 win, and Bowman came back with a six-hitter for a 5-2 decision.

New York Giants climbed back into a tie for third place by trouncing St. Louis Cardinals, 5-2, largely on homers by Jo Jo Moore and Tony Cuccinello. Dick Errickson's steady twirling gave Boston Bees an 8-3 edge over Chicago Cubs, dropping the Cubs into sixth place. The loop's two pace-setters, Cincinnati and Brooklyn, were rained out.

FIELD NARROWED TO 16 PLAYERS

Golfers With the Power and Control in Charge of P.G.A. Tourney

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 29 (AP)—The boys with the power and the class were in control of the 1940 professional golf championship tournament today as the field narrowed to 16 contestants.

Eighteen-hole matches yesterday cut down three-fourths of the 64 qualifiers. The survivors, excepting Paul Runyan, represent the longest hitters in golf.

Runyan is the exception, as usual, for "Little Poison" has learned to use his short clubs so well he manages to get around with the blasters, and takes them into camp. He did it in 1934 and in 1938 to win this title, the last time with a remarkable 8 and 7 triumph over Sam Snead, present Canadian open champion.

The only top-notchers who failed to get by yesterday were Craig Wood and Jimmy Demaret. Also knocked out were Jimmy Thompson and Harry Cooper.

For the first time in his eventful career, Ralph Gudahl, twice open champion, had the opportunity to play 36-hole match in the P.G.A. always before, he lost in one of the shorter distance contests. His under par exhibitions yesterday against two competitors were just about the best golf of the day and not to be denied.

A pair of hardy perennials, Walter Hagen, give-time P.G.A. titlist, and Gene Sarazen, who won it three times, kicked the adage of youth-being-served out the window in fine style. Both bustled around in just about par against opponents who were unable to match their skill and experience.

To this point, none of the pro brigade has played better than the defending champion, Henry Picard, who, trying for a repeat of his home course, takes on Sarazen today.

PHIL MARCHILDON SOLD BY TORONTO

Righthander Will Report to Connie Mack for Spring Training

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP) — Officials of the Toronto Maple Leaf Baseball Club of the International League announced Wednesday the sale of Pitcher Phil Marchildon, a righthander, to the Philadelphia Athletics for an unannounced sum. Marchildon will report to the A's next spring.

The husky pitching star of the Leafs was born in Penetanguishene Ont., and was recommended to Connie Mack, Manager of the A's by Scout Lena Blackburne. New York Yankees and one other major league club were reported to have made bids for the hurler's contract.

The 22-year-old pitcher signed with the Leafs in the fall of 1938, jumping from amateur baseball with the Creighton Mines team in northern Ontario. He was farmed to Cornwall of the Canadian-American League in 1939 where he registered six straight victories before he was recalled.

Marchildon with a record of 10 victories and 11 defeats is the only Toronto pitcher to win 10 games this season. His team is in last place in the standing. His record last year was five victories and seven losses.

BERT PATCH WINS FREE-FOR-ALL AT PICTON MEET

Driven by Bill Harvey, Bay Pacer Made Every Post a Winning One

TRACK IS HEAVY

Ben Payne, Bloomfield, Uncovers a Good Green Pacer in Countess Jane's Girl

Picton, Aug. 29 — Though the track was heavy, good times were recorded at the horse races here yesterday afternoon. Light rain began to fall during the morning and throughout the afternoon there were intermittent showers. This with a cold wind, failed to keep nearly one thousand fans away. Though three different horses won their races by taking all heats, there was no lack of competition and there were some thrilling finishes. In the free-for-all, Bert Patch was just a little better than Chestnut Bars, a younger horse, but in each heat they finished less than a length apart.

The local horse, Countess Jane's Girl, driven by owner Ben Payne, did not disappoint local fans, as she won two heats and was second to Tony, Jr., in the first.

Starter was Arthur Blade of Ottawa who did his work in fine style.

KINGSTON SQUAD HELD TO TIE BY SHELL 'OILERS'

With Score Tied in Eighth 4-4 Umpires Call Contest on Account of Rain

PLAY HERE FRIDAY

John Bawden Hurls Superb Ball and Hits Homer in Second Frame

With Johnnie Bawden hurling superb softball and complete master of the situation for all except one inning, the Shell "Oilers" were even then forced to come from behind to earn a 4 to 4 eight innings tie with the Kingston Tanners in their second game of the first round intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns at Coleman Flats last evening. Owing to inclement weather the complete game was called in the top half of the ninth inning, forcing a replay. Following the game Harry Rollins, local O.A.S.A. convener, announced the game would be played in Belleville on Friday evening.

Bawden out-pitched the ace Kingston hurler, "Cowboy" Smith, as the local moundsman let the hard-hitting Kingston nine down with six hits, five of which came in the seventh inning, when the Tanners rallied and scored three runs on Boone's circuit blow to forge ahead. Bawden was complete master of the situation for six full frames allowing only one hit and one unearned run over that distance. However, two singles and Boone's homer put Kingston in the lead in the seventh. Bawden whiffed nine and walked but two, while Smith was nicked for eight hits, struck out four and walked five in his wildness.

Bawden Opens Score

In the early stages it was all Bawden as he smashed a mighty home run into deep centre field to give the locals their initial counter. Belleville moved two up in the fifth, when Rowbotham drew a walk Ronsky sacrificed and Alfie scored on Cole's timely single. Trailing two runs in the bottom half of the 8th and with one out Sero singled, Bawden walked and both scored on Amo's subsequent triple before the game was terminated on account of rain by Umpire Corrigan in the top half of the next frame.

Every member of the Oilers counted a hit off Smith, except Ronsky, who came through with a useful sacrifice. Bawden's homer was the only extra base hit, however. Boone hit a homer for Kingston, while Gow and Smith hit double as Bawden limited the visitors to six safeties.

Harrison stood out defensively for Kingston accepting several fine running catches, that bordered on the sensational

BUFFALO BISONS GAINED GROUND

Only Half a Game Out of Fifth Place and Team is Really "Hot"

By The Associated Press

Buffalo Bisons, a half game out of fifth place, are thundering along at a pace which can easily land them in the first division by Sept 15th, if the clubs ahead don't step up their tempo too much.

The Bisons have won 23 of their last 33 engagements since Aug 1st with one tied, to advance from seventh place.

Last night the Herd gained ground on everybody with a 2-1 decision over Montreal Royals, when rain and wet grounds caused postponement of the rest of the International league schedule.

Floyd Giebell limited the Canadians to five hits in ringing up his 13th victory, while his mates pounded Newt Kimball for nine. He was deprived of a shutout when Charley Gilbert tripled in the fourth and scored shortly after on Don Ross's single. The winning run was scored in the eighth with two out, when rookie outfielder, William Pike, doubled over third to score Pat Mullin.

Ed Shortt, who is collaborating with the local Y.M.C.A. in the matter of the National War Service of the "Y" in this section of Canada, informs us that the Y.M.C.A. is serving Canada in depots from the Atlantic to the Pacific, as well as overseas. "Not only do we assist the military efforts with sports equipment, but our end in the social efforts to Canada's men in service are extensive and include the provision of indoor entertainment, as well as sports," explained Eddie, as he stressed the need of recreational depots for all men in uniform. In the various "Y" huts provided hospitality is the motto as can be clearly shown when equivalent to 2,711,467 soldiers, airmen and sailors have attended Y.M.C.A. activities in Canada and overseas since war broke out less than a year ago. Mr. Shortt is anxious that all district military units not in possession of adequate sports equipment at this time communicate immediately with the Belleville "Y" and their needs will be promptly fulfilled

Johnnie Bawden rose to dizzy heights last night as the "Oilers" gained a 4-4 draw with the Kingston "Tanners" here. Tabby Gow doubled in the first inning and that was the only resemblance of a hit registered by the Limestone City mushballers until one was out in the seventh, which should be considered outstanding softball hurling by any pitcher. "Cowboy" Smith, the heralded Kingston hurler with a rather peculiar delivery, gave up eight hits to Bawden's six while Johnnie started his team off by hitting a home run in the second. Kingston scored a run in the sixth without registering a hit and it was Johnnie Ronsky's error, Belleville's lone miscue by the way, that paved the way for that unearned run. All of Belleville's runs were honest-to-goodness earned counters and if it had not been for the two or three sensational catches by Harrison, the Kingston right fielder, the "Oilers" would have won going away. As it was, however, the locals were rather fortunate to eke out a seventh inning draw and force a replay.

The "Tanners" capitalized on every scoring opportunity presented them last night and unless the "Oilers" get their hitting togs on soon, the Kingston nine will take the current series. After last night's game the teams met and agreed to replay the match here on Friday night, with a possible third game scheduled to be played in Napanee on Saturday afternoon. Doubtless the threatening weather tended to keep the attendance down, as the collection last night was only $18.00 and on such 'peanuts' no softball organization can function.

Perhaps Skipper Bawden would be well advised to take his charges up to the McCarthy theatre tonight where a baseball picture opens. The picture is entitled — "Training of Rookies" and shows how the major leaguers tutor their young players at Joe Stripp's baseball school in Florida each spring. Local diamond aspirants, both girls and men, should gain considerable knowledge of the game in not only the fundamentals, but the inside game itself. Such shorts are outstanding, as they show slow motion shots of how plays should be properly completed.

Do you remember when the first women's marathon swim was held in Toronto at the Canadian National Exhibition, 11 years ago today. Martha Norelius of New York splashed to victory over the 10-mile course to win the $10,000 first-place prize.

Gossiping in his column, "In the Wake of the News," Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune reports: "Teddy Lyons, White Sox pitching ace, has been bothered with chronic appendicitis for the last four or five years, but refuses to submit to an operation . . . There may be nothing to the report that when Bill Terry retires to the front office of the Giants, Rogers Hornsby will be imported to manage the club, but when Hornsby recently was asked who he considers the best manager in the major leagues, he replied 'Bill Terry' ... Hornsby also remarked that Bill McKechnie plays good percentage baseball, seldom makes a mistake.. The Monty Strattons of the White Sox are infanticipating . . . Jack Lelivelt of Seattle, whose salary is reported to be $15,000 a year, is the highest paid manager in the minor leagues."

The eyes of the baseball world will be directed towards the Chicago Cubs along about the latter end of the first week in September. Yes, me hearties, the one and only Dizzy Dean is coming back to major league baseball, a spot he would have never relinquished had not Branch Rickey pitched the arm and heart out of Dean in St. Louis. Manager Gabby Hartnett announced today he intended to recall Dean from Tulsa in time for the important Cincinnati-Chicago series opening Sept. 7th. Dean has been laboring under the hot Texas sun all summer trying to develop a new delivery while pitching for Tulsa. The "Dizzy one" says he's ready to return to the major leagues. His case is not the first of its kind, Schoolboy Rowe of the Tigers, went through the same successful treatment a year ago, while "No-hitter Johnnie Vander Meer of the Reds is trying the same stunt at Indianapolis today, but recently announced his experiment had proven successful also. Yes, the baseball world will watch anxiously Dean's comeback and he'll have many pulling for him.

Sport Hash — Bill Rogell, obtained by the Cubs from the Tigers in a trade for Dick Bartell has been released by Chicago, but Bartel is still playing American League ball ....See where Phil Harchildon, Penetang-born pitcher with the Toronto Maple Leafs, has been sold to the Philadelphia Athletics and will report to the A's next spring... Roy Johnson, soft-spoken manager of the Tulsa "Oilers", says Dizzy Dean is ready to return to the majors ....A goodly number of local hoss race fans took in the harness races at Picton yesterday where upwards to a 1,000 braved intermittent showers to see a day of racing.... It looks as though the Belleville Fair Board missed the train when they abandoned harness races this year, as there seems to be an abundance of good horses stamping throughout eastern Ontario these days."

Unless breakfast makes you think . . .

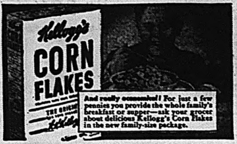
THIS WAKES A HE-MAN APPETITE!

. . . you won't get the quick energy you need!

That's why more and more wives start their menfolk off with Kellogg's Corn Flakes, the breakfast that does these three important things. First, Kellogg's, proven tops in flavour*, tempt your appetite. Second, crammed with energizing "carbohydrates," they start you quick. Third, steadily releasing energy, they help keep you going through a long morning's work.

Think too, of the time and work they save! Ready in 30 seconds, no pots or pans to clean. Get several packages tomorrow—or if you eat out, ask for Kellogg's Corn Flakes in the wax-wrapped individual package. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

*"Housewives are right," flavour experts say. "What ready-to-eat cereal is your family's favourite?" research workers asked housewives from coast to coast. Five times as many answered Kellogg's Corn Flakes as gave any other brand of corn flakes. And M. Maurice Aquarone, Chef of the Royal Connaught Hotel in Hamilton, agrees! After tasting four leading brands of corn flakes under strict test conditions, M. Aquarone came to the same conclusion as so many other flavour experts. "This taste test definitely proved to me that Kellogg's win on flavour!"



And really economical! For just a few pennies you provide the whole family's breakfast or supper—ask your grocer about delicious Kellogg's Corn Flakes in the new family-size package.

Berlin Communique

Berlin, Aug. 29—(AP)—The German High Command issued the following communique Thursday morning:

"Fighting plane units yesterday effectively attacked airports at Eastchurch and Southend, on the Thomas Mouth, as well as the port of Bognor Regis on the English south coast.

"During the night an increased quantity of bombs was dropped on port facilities of Liverpool, Cardiff, Bristol, Middlesborough, Chatham and Thameshaven as well as on armament plants at Sheffield, Norwich and Coventry. The mining of British ports from the air continued.

"Air fights developed at several points, in the course of which 38 enemy planes and 12 of our own were shot down.

(The British Air Ministry announced that 28 German planes were shot down over Britain yesterday. Fourteen British aircraft were lost. As to damage done, British announcements indicated industrial establishments were affected in several localities, but no mention was made of damage to port facilities.)

"British planes last night intentionally attacked residential sections of the Reich's capital (Berlin). Incendiary bombs and explosives killed or injured numerous civilians and caused damage to several apartment houses with attic fires.

"One of the attacking enemy planes was downed by anti-aircraft fire before reaching the city outskirts.

"The Leuna Works also were a target of British attack. (Leuna near Leipzig, is the site of large synthetic gasoline works.) Slight damage was caused. At several other localities in central and western Germany where bombs dropped the damage was likewise immaterial.

"Yesterday the enemy lost a total of 44 planes one barrage balloon while our own total losses were 15.

"A submarine commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. Schepke sank seven armed enemy merchant ships totalling 43,000 tons. Five of these were shot from a strongly protected convoy."

(These claims are unconfirmed.)

Type of Tobacco Free of Nicotine Being Developed

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 29.—(AP)—A type of tobacco that looks, smells and tastes like burley but is almost completely free from nicotine has been developed by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment station here.

The new type, according to the Chemistry Department of the University of Kentucky, with which the Experiment station is connected, contains on the average only about .02 per cent nicotine.

Ordinary burley, the department reported, contains about two per cent while dark tobacco such as that grown in Western Kentucky averages from three to four per cent and runs as high as seven per cent.

The development of this low-nicotine leaf was accomplished by plant breeding and the crossing of types of tobacco in experiments begun in 1935 under direction of Dr. W. D. Valleau the station's plant pathologist.

Station experts said that if a demand were shown for the new plant, labelled simply as "low nicotine burley", hundreds of thousands of pounds could be produced annually just as cheaply as any other type of tobacco.

The experiment began with the crossing of German cigar-type tobacco containing as little as .10 to .18 per cent nicotine with Kentucky's cigarette-making burley.

This, the station reported, resulted in a type of tobacco equal in nicotine to the parent burley, but the second generation turned up a great variety of combinations.

Out of these were selected some plants which were characteristically burley, but of low nicotine content. By back-crossing with burley, the burley characteristics were strengthened while the nicotine content kept falling year by year.

Berlin, Aug. 29—(AP)—Nerim Guen, Berlin representative of several Turkish papers, and three Turkish business men resident here, were taken handcuffed to central police headquarters today as a reprisal for the recent arrest of a German book and newspaper dealer in Istanbul. German authorities said the German dealer was seized "in humiliating circumstances" because he sold Adolf Hitler's principal party organ, the Volkischer Beobachter, which last January published a cartoon displeasing to the Turks.

SHIP BUILDING PLANT FAVORED

Sir Edward Beatty Advocates Establishment for Building Freighters in East Canada

Winnipeg, Aug. 29—(CP)—Establishment of a ship building plant on the St. Lawrence River or the eastern Canadian coast to produce modern freighters was advocated in an interview here today by Sir Edward Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

He said he thought ship building was a natural industry for Canada and the establishment of a plant would be welcomed on both sides of the 49th parallel.

Produce Prices Continue Upward

Toronto, Aug. 29—Strengthened by light receipts and a good demand, egg prices soared to new heights yesterday on the Toronto open produce market. Demand kept fresh arrivals well cleared and the market was very firm all day. In the graded section A-large eggs advanced to a range of 35c to 36c, and A-medium eggs to a range of 34c to 35c. New gains also were registered in wholesale-to-retail trading.

Ontario butter scored a 1-4c increase. Offerings of first-grade creamery solids were cleaned up at 22c by mid-afternoon and later sales were made at 22 1-4c. Receipts were light. Demand was not quite as keen as on Tuesday and offerings were just heavy enough to meet buyers' needs.

"How the romance developed is a mystery and whether the girl is a permanent resident of a nearby village could not be learned," the Star added. "Efforts are being made to find the girl."

All Fires Controlled

Fires were started in several London suburbs as well as in towns of southeast, southwest and northeast England, and in the midlands and Wales. All were reported controlled before large damage resulted.

In one London district, more than 60 incendiary bombs fell but 1,800 civil defence workers on duty smothered them before they could do any damage. In the same district, explosive bombs dropped at the same time damaged houses along two streets.

The London and Northeastern Railway suspended train service from London on one line and carried passengers by buses.

In another London section, three bombs were dropped simultaneously, one landing on top of a shelter and blowing it out of the ground, killing four members of one family who had taken refuge there.

Woolworth's Store Burned

In still another section of London, a fire started by an incendiary bomb almost completely burned a branch of the F. W. Woolworth Stores in the main road.

Less than a quarter of a mile away, high explosive bombs demolished a number of workers' houses. In another road 100 yards away, several buildings were badly damaged. Police erected barricades, stopped all traffic and ordered residents to move.

The night shift in a factory in another section of London had taken to a shelter when an incendiary bomb hit its building. A fire brigade got the blaze under control before the main part of the building was damaged.

Bombs of Delayed Action

Some bombs dropped in the London area were on the delayed action type. One of these, which fell on open ground, exploded after daylight this morning. Sixty persons already had been removed from nearby houses.

One bomb fell on open ground in a popular London residential district. There was no damage and no casualties.

London was under alarm seven hours and 10 minutes. The raiders first appeared shortly before 9 p.m. not long after dark, and kept attacking the city, singly or in small groups, until just after 4 a.m.

The London sky was brilliant during the raid, a combination of attack and defence weapons producing an unprecedented fireworks display. The raiders first dropped parachute flares and followed these with incendiary bombs.

Glow Visible For Miles

The fires started by the bombs made deep glows visible for miles. The skies high above were pierced by hundreds of anti-aircraft searchlight beams as the capital's defenders employed the biggest battery yet used to ferret out the bombers.

Through all this brilliant there resounded the booms of exploding bombs—many could be heard from the very heart of London—and the clang of many scores of fire engines racing through the streets to attack fires as soon as they were started.

The government accused the raiders of dropping bombs "at random" in the attack on London, while the wide use of incendiaries on London and throughout the country caused the Press Association to describe the raid as Germany's "most venomous attack of the war against Britain." The bombers over London were called "jay raiders."

The Ministries of Air and Home Security in a joint communique said that in London "some damage was done 70 houses, shops and other buildings, including a church and some casualties were caused, including a small number of fatal injuries."

Long Communique

The communique, longer than those usually issued on night raids, listed damage done and persons killed throughout the country, although as usual exact casualty figures were not made public. "A considerable number" of German planes took part in the attack, the government said.

In a southwestern town, the water supply was crippled, homes and industrial property were damaged in a midland town and "some" persons were killed; industrial property, houses and "other buildings" were damaged "in a number of towns in the northeast and northwest," and casualties, although "not numerous," included "some deaths."

In addition to these points, the government said that "elsewhere many incendiary bombs and some high explosive bombs were dropped," causing a small number of casualties with "some" fatal.

Bombs Scattered Indiscriminately

The Press Association, in its account of the raids, said Hitler had sent "fire raiders to scatter their incendiaries indiscriminately in widespread areas."

"Bombing with high explosives was of a minor character," the News Agency said, "but according to reports reaching the Press Association incendiaries were furtively showered on towns, villages and open heaths.

"In two towns, one on the southwest coast and the other in the midlands, considerable damage was done, and there have been a number of casualties during the night.

"Apart from these two towns, despite hundreds of incendiaries dropped, damage was extremely slight and certainly of no military importance. The civil defence where tested came through brilliantly, stirrup pumps beating the incendiaries, and the raiders' fire bombs mission will go down as another of Hitler's failures.

24 Nazis Shot Down Yesterday

"Over London, jay raiders maintained at intervals and flying singly a seven-hour marathon high above the populace and put scattered incendiaries over the outer districts."

Just before last night's raids began the government announced the Royal Air Force had shot down 24 of yesterday's German daylight raiders while losing 12 planes themselves.

One Midland town was attacked last night by raiders who cut out their motors to avoid drawing searchlight beams, gliding down to their attack. Some 70 bombs were dropped before British Spitfire fighter planes could get into the air to engage the invaders.

Raiders were over another Midland town several hours, and large numbers of incendiary and high explosive bombs were dropped on a wide area. There were some casualties, a few of them fatal, and others were believed buried in debris of wrecked houses. Gas and electricity services were interrupted.

Waves of bombers over a northwest coastal town showered hundreds of incendiary bombs, damaging residential property. Only two casualties were reported there, however—a woman and her sons who were injured severely by a direct hit on their home.

Wales Raided Several Hours

Other bombers raided Wales several hours, dropping bombs on several towns and villages in South Wales. Heavy anti-aircraft fire apparently turned them off from their main objectives. There was little damage there, and only a few casualties reported.

Two persons were killed and several injured when a raider dived over a town in the Midlands and dropped five bombs, four of which fell in residential areas.

A Poor House was damaged. Its inmates were moved elsewhere.

An elderly woman was killed and two other women were injured severely when a high explosive bomb struck farm buildings near an isolated Midland village.

In one London suburban district, some hundred incendiary bombs and a dozen high explosive bombs were dropped over a two-square mile area, starting fires which damaged some houses considerably. No casualties were reported.

A North Midland town was raided several hours. Houses were damaged. One person was killed.

30 Bombs Struck in One City

In one midlands city two streets of houses were wrecked by bombs early today. A small town was struck by 30 bombs and the police chief there said: "It's a miracle we escaped a heavy death toll. The town rocked with explosions."

German planes dropped many bombs over a wide area on Britain's west coast today, causing numerous fires.

A number of casualties, including two dead, were reported from a northeast city where about 30 bombs fell in an almost straight line across the town. Two delayed action bombs exploded later, causing further casualties. Most of the damage was done to workers' homes.

In another northeast city a young woman was killed and several other persons injured, two seriously, in a raid which lasted only two minutes. The attacking plane cut its motor, glided silently over the town, dropped three bombs and then flew out to sea.

3-47th Battery Will Parade At Fair Grounds

A special attraction on Saturday's Fair program and one that should arouse considerable interest in this vicinity will be the visit of a complete Field Battery of two hundred and fifty men, at least half of whom are Belleville boys. In charge of Major W. E. Van Steenburgh, the 3-47th Field Battery, C.A.S.F., Kingston, one of the first C.A.S.F. units to parade in the city will march from the Market Square at 1.40, Saturday afternoon, to the Fair Grounds, and before the grandstand at two o'clock will put on a limited amount of drill work for the crowds in attendance. This will be a very educational part of the program and should attract widespread interest.

RUMANIA ADOPTS

Germans acknowledged the recent negotiations at Turnu-severin showed Rumanian and Hungarian viewpoints to be so divergent that "no immediate, direct understanding" could be reached—despite the desire of the Axis to settle the problem speedily in order to give undivided attention to the war with Britain.

Heavy Demands by Hungary

Hungary is demanding restoration of practically everything Rumania took from her as a result of their last war treaty, or approximately five-sixths of Transylvania.

Rumania, on the other hand, is said to desire to begin a settlement by shifting respective national minorities, with cession of a narrow strip of territory to be considered later.

Von Ribbentrop and Count Ciano arrived here last night after a conversation with Hitler yesterday in his Bavarian Mountain retreat at Berchtesgaden.

The Hungarian delegation, headed by Foreign Minister Count Istvan Csaky and with Premier Count Paul Teleky as an observer, was due in the forenoon, while the Rumanians, headed by Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu, were due shortly after noon.

Bomb Splinters From Battle Of Britain

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 29—(CP)— Bomb splinters from the battle of Britain:

Lord Cornwallis, President of the Kent Spitfire fund, was awakened at 2.00 a.m. by a stranger asking the cost of a Spitfire.

"Oh, I think about £5,000," (about $22,500) said Lord Cornwallis.

"O. K., you'll have it by tomorrow," the stranger replied and a cheque for £5,000 was received the next day from the anonymous donor.

Durham miners have begun a drive for £10,000 to buy two Spitfires "as a reply to Hitler's attacks on the northeast coast."

The Corporation of Worcester was fined £2 for an infringement of blackout regulations when police reported there had been complaints about a light showing from the Guildhall window.

A 40-year-old widow was sent to jail for a month and three boys between the ages of 11 and 14 were ordered given six strokes of the birch for thefts from houses damaged by air raids in the Plymouth district.

This inscription appeared on a wreath laid on the graves of four German airmen buried in a Kent churchyard:

"Four unknown German airmen killed in action Aug. 18, 1940. Jesus said 'bless them that curse you and pray for them which despitefully use you'."

An inquest was being held when an air raid started. The Coroner, jurors, police, witnesses and reporters were escorted to a shelter where the inquiry was continued in the presence of women shoppers and other passersby who had taken refuge.

In another town, raiders flew over during a council meeting. The Mayor adjourned the meeting while anti-aircraft batteries were engaging the enemy but resumed it when the gunfire stopped.

Investigation by A. R. P. authorities reveal that many incendiary bombs dropped by the Germans were made as long ago as 1937.

A Midlands farmer's greeting on his 80th birthday was a bomb that blew the window of his room across the bed in which he was sleeping. He was uninjured.

A farmer whose field was bombed balanced up his losses and gains as follows:

Repairing broken glass in piggery 3 pound, replanting hedge 1 pound. Crater 15 feet deep and 30 feet across is well placed for making a new farm pond for the animals.

Patrons of a northwest town theatre didn't take kindly to the manager's decision to turn up the lights when an air raid warning sounded. Four bombs were heard falling in the distance and then gunfire began, but above the din a voice from the back row shouted "get on with the picture." The movie resumed with much applause from the patrons.

Last Rites Given Aged Man Trapped In Burning House

Weymouth, Mass., Aug. 29 (AP)—From a ladder propped against a burning building, a Priest administered the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church today to William Tracy, 62. Rev. John Harrington of Sacred Heart Church mounted the ladder to a second floor window outside the room in which Tracy died, after firemen attempted unsuccessfully to reach the aged man. The fire destroyed the house where Tracy lived alone.

GIBRALTAR ROCK APTLY DESCRIBED

Dr. Reg. Anderson Speaks of Impregnable Fortress in Mediterranean to Kiwanis Club

The Rock of Gibraltar, bulwark of Britain's defence in the Mediterranean Sea was the subject of a talk delivered by Dr. Reg. Anderson at the luncheon of the Kiwanis Club held at the Country Club on Tuesday noon with Bill Anderson as presiding officer. Dr. Anderson gave a most complete description of this famous fortress and the history leading up to it falling in the hands of the British in 1704. Jimmy Corradi presided at the piano with a fine piano solo, while Roy Reynolds collected the several fines. Next week the meeting is to be in charge of the new members of the Club and Ray Grant promises something interesting in the way of novel events.

Dr. Jim Forrester introduced the member speaker of the day and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Ted Hughes. "To the ancients" said Dr. Anderson "Gibraltar was simply a great rock that marked the western limits in the Mediterranean Sea but England made it a mighty fortress and her whole system of defence in the Mediterranean depends on the capabilities of this fort to withstand the constant bombing and perhaps siege for an indefinite time." The speaker noted that the rock was once named Mons Calpe. The Phoenicians were probably the first settlers on the European and African coasts and in time they ventured through the Straits of Gibraltar and sailed up the west coast of the Spanish Peninsula. Around 711 A.D. the Moors conquered the rock and built a castle that took thirteen years to build, parts of which are still standing and they named the place Hill of Tarak.

The history was traced down through the years until 1704, when the British and Dutch navy made a successful assault and withstood sieges in the War of Spanish Succession at which time in 1713 the Spanish ceded the Rock to the British. The great siege from 1779-1783 probably has no parallel in history as regards moral and physical courage the speaker stated. The history of the British people was described by the speaker, which showed the same tenacity of purpose that is prevalent today and the reasons why Britain is great. The address was most instructive.

CATHOLIC PRIEST A SILENT HERO

Gave Up His Lifeboat After Boat Torpedoed, Swimming in Water an Hour Before Being Rescued

London, Aug. 29—(CP)—A Roman Catholic priest—an army chaplain since the outbreak of the war—was one of the silent heroes of the sinking of the Lancastria, bombed in the English Channel by Germain airmen while evacuating troops from France.

Rev. Charles McMenemy, 35-year-old London Scot gave up his lifebelt to another man on the sinking ship and floundered about in the oily water for nearly an hour before a rescue craft picked him up.

The Priest spent a fortnight afterwards with Rev. William Attree, a former associate, but he made no mention of his act.

"I heard about it from another priest who was also a survivor," Father Attree Said. "Father McMenemy would not say anything about an action of that sort. He was always a strong swimmer, but even a strong swimmer was risking his life in those circumstances by giving up his lifebelt."

Father McMenemy is now with an anti-aircraft unit in the North of England.

Eight Beautiful Bass Taken From Moira R. Displayed by Youths

Eight black bass, ranging in size from one and a quarter pounds to two and a quarter pounds were pulled out of the Moira River near O'Brien's Bridge this morning by Jackie Wardhaugh and Bobby Lucy, two Belleville youths. The lads were fishing with Vic Morris, another Belleville angler who has great faith in the waters of the Moira as a fishing ground and were using plugs as bait for 'lunge when the bass were hooked.

It took the lads just one hour and a half to get the eight fish, which puts numbers of veteran anglers to shame. Incidentally Vic says that the Moira cannot be beaten when it comes to 'lunge fishing. "I can get them anytime," claims Vic. "Why only last Monday I hooked a seventeen-pounder near O'Brien's Bridge and I'm going back today to get another."

DISCUS CHAMPION OF FRANCE BELIEVED KILLED IN ACTION

Vichy, France, Aug. 29.—(AP)—The French Press reported today that Jules Noel, several times French weight and discus-throwing champion and captain of the French team in the 1936 Olympic games at Berlin, was believed killed in action May 19.

DOGS FERRETING THRU BUSHLANDS FOR 2 ESCAPEES

Mounted Police in Charge of Dogs Say Animals Are Following Keen Scent

AREA SURROUNDED

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 29.—(CP)—Heavy early-morning rains forced guards and police to temporarily halt the search for two German prisoners of war who escaped from a nearby internment camp Tuesday night.

Two police dogs, brought here by plane from Ottawa and reported following a keen scent last night, were brought back from the bush to headquarters shortly after the rain started at four o'clock. The downpour is expected to wash out any trace of the prisoners, Theodor Steyrer, 29, a non-commissioned officer of the German navy, and Hans Kibart, 25, an aviator and make the dogs virtually useless in further hunting for the men.

Dozens of long disused, abandoned logging camps are being searched by police in the belief that the Germans may have sought shelter in one of them.

The escape, third from Ontario internment camps within the past 10 days, was the first from this camp. Previous breaks were made Aug. 19, one from a camp north of Toronto, the other from a northwestern Ontario camp. One man escaped in each case and each was re-captured with a few days.

Hunger May Drive Them Out

Veteran bushmen predicted that hunger soon would drive the latest escapees to surrender, providing they did not receive outside aid, or were not caught within a short time.

Police and military authorities throughout the province have been furnished with rescription of the Germans and urged to be on the lookout for them, in case they escape the northern cordon.

Hon. J. L. Ralston, Federal Defence Minister, announced at Ottawa yesterday that the escape was aided by other prisoners who partially buried Steyrer and Kibart in a trench in the prison recreation grounds during a football game.

The other prisoners, numbering several hundred, returned to the compound with the guards, and the two then escaped by digging under one of two wire fences and clambering through a hole left by a washout under the other.

A guard fired at them as they ran for the nearby bush. It is not believed the shot struck either, however, because a spent bullet was found 500 yards from the camp yesterday.

NOTED GAMBLER DIES IN N. Y.

George McManus Once Accused of the Murder of Arnold Rothstein

New York, Aug. 29 — (AP) — George McManus, big time Broadway gambler who once was accused of the murder of Arnold Rothstein, died of heart disease last night at his summer home in Sea Girt, N.J. After a long and sensational trial McManus was acquitted by the General Sessions Jury which heard the case—but the slaying of Rothstein in 1928 still remains a mystery.

Known as one of New York's most imperturable gamblers during the heyday of Manhattan betting, McManus had a reputation for always smiling when he paid his debts.

Broadway legend has it that McManus even from knee pants days acquired a taste for chance. He began as a runner for gambling establishments in Harlem, and was so successful that he opened his own chain—risking thousands on the flip of a card or the roll of dice.

He was arrested after Rothstein stumbled out of a theatrical district hotel, mortally shot. Rothstein died without disclosing his assailant. A coat left in the hotel room was identified as that of McManus.

The state attempted to prove that McManus lured Rothstein into the hotel and shot him during a dispute over a gambling debt involving several hundred thousand dollars.

McManus was acquitted Dec. 5, 1929, less than three weeks after his arrest. Rothstein and McManus had long been friends and gambling confidantes. They shared the title: "Gambling King of Broadway."

Called Three Times, Man is Discovered To be in Jail

Montreal, Aug. 29.—(CP)—Three times Cuthbert Barrette 36, was called in court of summary convictions yesterday to face a charge of threatening his wife. Three times he failed to appear and Judge Joseph Archambault started to write a bench warrant for his arrest. Then it was discovered Barrette was in jail, serving a two-month sentence for non-support of his wife. Mrs. Barrette withdrew her charge.

DUKE OF WINDSOR MAY VISIT U.S.

Emissary Has Been in States Quietly Making Preparations for Visit

New York, Aug. 28 (AP)—An Emissary of the Duke of Windsor has been in New York apparently making quiet preparations for a visit by the Duke to the United States and Canada.

News of his presence did not become known until today, 24 hours after his departure.

The Duke in an interview recently at Bermuda while enroute to Nassau expressed great interest in New York City and said he thought he should pay the city another visit.

He still has his fine cattle ranch at High River, Alta., which is described as "the only property I own in the world," and the projected trip might include a stop there.

The Duke's Emissary was Captain Vyvyan Drury, one of his aides. It has been known in Nassau that he had been commissioned with a special mission by the Duke.

Training System For Royal Air Force Better Than Germany's

London, Aug. 28—(CP Cable)—The British training system is superior to that of any other air force in the world and is definitely ahead of the Germans, Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham said in a London Rotary address today.

"We have also something the Germans could not hope to imitate—an empire in which to train, whereas there are few corners of Germany that we are not reaching today," Sir Robert added.

"The Empire Air Training Scheme is having more effect than merely producing pilots. It is forming an additional line of empire."

He said the people of the Dominions had shown "extraordinary kindness in looking after our pilots and airmen." He suggested that after the war the development of Northwest Territories of Canada by air may be the next phase in the Dominion's development. Sir Robert was recently in Canada in connection with the Air Training Scheme.

Seagull Sends Airliner to Hangar For Repairs

New York, Aug. 28—(AP)— A seagull smacked into an airliner as it was about to take off from La Guardia Field today and flew away under its own power, which was more than the airliner did.

The bird, flying through a rainstorm, struck the airliner's left windshield and chipped the glass. Stunned, the seagull fell to the plane's wing, flopped around for a minute, got its wind back, and flew away.

The airliner, transferring its 12 Boston-bound passengers to another ship, retired to hangar for repairs.

SLIPPERY LANDING

London (CP)—Pilot of a coastal command plane was forced to land on a hillside so steep that the navigator had to jump out and put boulders behind the wheels to stop sliding back into the sea.

Little Benny's Note Book

Last night after supper pop said to ma, Mr. Hammer will be in town tomorrow and I properly ought to invite him up for dinner.

Mr. Hammer being pop's boss and important, and ma said, O deer, Thersday of all days, now Willyum haven't you the slightest consideration?

I have consideration to burn, but absilutely no control over the calender, pop said. Mr. Hammer's trip to town falls on the 4th day of the week, and Mr. Hammer's trip to town and the 4th day of the week both coincide with Thersday. Yee gods, cant Nora take some other day off for a change? Her Thersday off isn't a legal or a religious holiday, is it? he said, and ma said, Yes, it's both, as far as she is concerned. The sun rises and sets on her free Thersday, and the few times I've asked her to change it still burn in my memory as gastly failures, she said.

Then I'll ask her for Peet sake, pop said. I'll do more than ask her, I'll tell her. If we're going to have a dictatership around here it's not going to be a distatership of the proletariat, by gollies, he said.

And this morning I started to eat breakfist with pop before ma came down, and Nora brought in the coffee and pop said, Good morning, Nora, nice morning, by the way I have a little favor to ask you, Nora.

I have one to ask you, Mr. Potts, Nora said. I'd like to work today and take Sattiday off instead because my sister will be in town Sattiday, will it be all a same to you? she said, and pop said, if it's not I'll make it, have a nice day's work, he said.

And when ma came down pop pointed at the kitchin, saying, It's all fixed, my deer, all you have to do is make the menu, and ma said, Well, congradulations, I think you're wonderful.

Think nothing of it, pop said.

And he gave me a private wink and I gave him one.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL TOURING ONTARIO MUNITIONS PLANTS

Making a tour of inspection of Ontario munition plants, His Excellency the Earl of Athlone is pictured here as he inspected a Hamilton plant which has a production level of 50,000 shell cases a week. More than 2,000 employees of the plant have been working 24-hour shifts since last May. The Governor-General was formally welcomed to Hamilton by Mayor Morrison who read an address of welcome to the Earl and Countess.

MIGHTY ARMS, SHOULDERS, SECRET OF DOMINIC'S SUCCESS

Bill Fleming (left) and Yank Terry (right) two new Boston Red Sox rookie hurlers, both agree that they would rather have Dominic DiMaggio, Red Sox centre-fielder, with them than against them after testing his mighty arms. DiMaggio's appearance is so deceptive in a uniform that many fans have wondered where he ever got the power to powder that left-field wall. Dom has clouted four home runs to date this year and now that he has the range it would not surprise many to see him double that figure before the season is over.

Mayor Thompson, Warden Churcher Officially Open Belleville Fair

His Worship Declares Farmer Has Important Part to Play in Canada's War Effort

DIRECTORS PRAISED

"The farmer has just as important a part to play in Canada's war effort as the manufacturer, the skilled mechanic and even the fighting forces themselves" Mayor Glencoe E. Thompson declared today in an address prior to his official opening of the 1940 Belleville Faid.

"His is the task", His Worship continued, "and his is the duty to supply to not only this country but other nations of the Commonwealth and our Allies, with the vital foodstuffs without which the war cannot be successfully prosecuted".

The chief magistrate told a gathering of Fair Board executives political and civic dignitaries, and a large crowd of people that these were difficult times. "There may be some criticism of the exhibition this year", he said, "but we must remember, that the fair serves a useful purpose and gives an incentive, if necessary, to farming communities to raise better stock and farm produce. Any encouragement that can be given to agriculture, should be given," he said.

Directors Congratulated

He congratulated the directors and exhibitors on the fine quality of the large number of entries shown and expressed his delight at seeing so many children present on opening day.

"I now declare the Belleville Fair officially opened", he said.

The red Canadian Ensign fluttered out in the breeze atop the flagpole near the bandstand. The stirring strains of "O Canada" sounded in the afternoon air as the youthful musicians of Director A. Cooper's Belleville Public Schools Band put their instruments to their lips.

The traditional booming of the cannon, a ritual synonymous with former Belleville Fairs was missing. Directors decided to dispense with the rite this year.

Useful Organization

In a brief address, Warden John L. Churcher of Hastings County pointed out the usefulness of fair organizations to the communities they serve. "They fill an important position in the life of the country as well as the community, and are deserving of every support they can be given," he said.

In these stirring times, the warden stressed, agriculture is playing an important part. The Empire and her Dominions as well as her Allies need foodstuffs, and it is the home reserve trenches on the agricultural front, that can supply them. He urged his listeners to increase their production no matter what sphere of life they were engaged in. Brief addresses were given by George H. Stokes, M.P., President Earl Bonter of the Fair Board and Secretary Arthur L. Burke.

Children's Day

Following traditional custom, exuberant youth in all ages and sizes flocked to the fair on its opening day. Shrill whoops of delight echoed in the afternoon air today, as the youngsters encouraged by prospects of a clear warm afternoon availed themselves of the delights, that only a fair can produce. They flocked about merry-go-rounds, ferris wheels, candy concessions and soft drink booths. Ragged dusty urchins rubbed shoulders with well-dressed youngsters as social castes and barriers were levelled in the common delights of the fair attractions. Midway attractions catered to the enjoyment-seeking youngsters, many of whom showed a surprising interest in the mercantile and industrial exhibits as well as the live-stock and other attractions usually in demand by adults.

Judging Started

Actual working of the fair got under way shortly after nine o'clock when an army of judges started their duties. Ladies work, domestic and household science entries underwent official scrutiny, while a large number of cattle and other livestock entries were judged. Cattle pens are filled to capacity, while horses and other livestock entries form a colorful rural addition to the fair.

Additional Attractions

Additional attractions to the Midway will arrive Friday morning following completion of negotiations today with the entire Midway, that concluded an engagement at Tillsonburg today. Fair officials announced late today. These concessions will be in operation for the afternoon performance.

The afternoon and evening stage attractions in front of the grandstand is under the supervision of the famous Billy Garden, wellknown in Canadian amusement circles and who enjoys a large friendship in service clubs and other public organizations of this city and district.

Speaking to the Ontario Intelligencer today, Billy stated, that Belleville was one of his early loves and nothing in the entertainment or vaudeville world is too good for her. He is providing Class "A" entertainment and promises several surprises as well as a number of old favorites.

Junior Farmers of the county are out in force and today competed in their judging contests. Young ladies of the county also vied for honors in domestic and household science and the results will be announced at the Junior Farmers' banquet being held tonight in Holloway Street Church, where prominent Federal Department of Agriculture representatives will address the gathering and formally present the prizes.

Wrong Addresses On Cables Hold Up 'Blessed Event' News

London, Aug. 29—(CP Cable)—Some Canadian soldiers who have had "additions" since they left for service overseas are unaware of the blessed events because cables carrying the tidings were incorrectly addressed.

Haunted by the vision of expectant fathers wearing paths outside the unit post offices, officials of Canadian military headquarters here are striving to straighten out the tangle.

There are a number of other mis-addressed cables. It is possible that some of these soldiers are serving elsewhere than in the United Kingdom.

It is pointed out that cables, as well as letters, for members of the Canadian Active Service Forces overseas should be sent to the army base post office in Canada for relay.

Duck Season In United States Now Two Months

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)—Opening of the duck season in nine United States border states for a period of two months was subject of critical comment among Ontario Government Fish and Game officials today.

D. J. Taylor, Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries, said: "Canada, with a population of some 10,000,000, has consistently adhered to a two-month open duck season. The United States, with about 130,000,000, now is taking the same open season. We breed the ducks in Canada and the United States hunters have ten times the shooting."

He said that United States sportsmen had contributed to the Canadian duck population in an important way, however, by providing sanctuaries along the thousands of miles of migratory routes. A few years ago $8,000,000 was spent in the United States in the flooding of marshlands and building dams.

Ducks unlimited, a United States sportsmen's organization, has reported to the Ontario Government that 80,000,000 ducks are ready to migrate south this year.

Use Copper Wire Instead of Aluminum For Power Line

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)—It will cost the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission approximately $200,000 but a power line running from Toronto to Burlington will be of copper wire instead of aluminum.

The aluminum thus saved—550 tons of it—will go to strengthen Canada's war effort, it has been disclosed.

An official said the change from aluminum to copper was more than just stringing a different kind of wire. Different towers must be built, of different strengths and sizes. The wire itself will have a life of much the same duration as the aluminum.

Urges Stamping Out Of Illegal Strikes

Truro, N.S., Aug. 29 —(CP)— The Dominion and the Nova Scotia Ministries of Labor urged that illegal strikes be stamped out in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick mine fields here yesterday at the district convention of the United Mine Workers of America. After debate the convention passed a resolution asking that co-operation be given the U.M.W. executive in eliminating strikes.

In his address Labor Minister McClarty declared that there were more sporadic strikes in Nova Scotia than in all the rest of Canada. He said he was advised that "these strikes are without the approval of your union and without disciplinary action from your union." He asked the delegates to maintain the "dignity and integrity" of their organization by seeing that "these ill-considered, irresponsible strikes are eliminated."

Mines Minister L. D. Currie of Nova Scotia told the delegates that the strikes "do you men more harm than the operators. It has been argued that the companies are largely responsible—but remember, gentlemen, two wrongs don't make a right."

200 Nazi Planes Fail to Drop Bombs As They Flee

London, Aug. 29 (CP)—Nearly 200 German planes came over the southeast coast in waves at a great height late today. Some of them penetrated inland but fled when engaged by fighters, without dropping any bombs.

CROWN PRINCESS MARTHA AT ROOSEVELT HOME

Hyde Park, N.Y., Aug. 29 (AP)—Crown Princess Martha of Norway, who fled from German invaders in her country, arrived at the Hudson Valley home of President and Mrs. Roosevelt today.

She and her children reached New York yesterday on the United States army transport American Legion.

BERLIN ATTACKED BY AVENGING BRITISH BOMBERS

In their first real attack on the German capital since start of the war, British bombers roared over Hitler's ornate new chancellery and other government buildings in the heart of Berlin. They swept through a barrage that appeared to have brought into action every anti-aircraft gun in the city, including those in Unter den Linden (1), at Brandenburg Gate (2), and along the Wilhelmstrasse (3). French embassy is at (4) and American embassy at (5). The Nazis at first claimed the raiders dropped only leaflets, but later admitted bombs had fallen.

The War Today

(By Guy Rhoades, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The Royal Air Force and the German Air Force exchanged blows in sustained raids over Germany and Great Britain today while the axis powers worried over a Balkan situation which threatened to flame at any moment.

Italy and Germany sent respectively Count Ciano and Von Ribbentrop to meet in Vienna with representatives of Rumania and Hungary in an effort to scotch troubles arising from Hungary's territorial claims to Transylvania which Rumania decided to reject.

Major Dangers to Axis Partners

The Balkan situation held two major dangers to the axis partners —danger that the great supply of mood and other raw material at their backs might be cut off if Rumania and Hungary went to war and danger that Russia might step in.

Joseph Stalin's forces already are reported to have suffered casualties in savage clashes with Rumanian forces on the Bessarabian border and a conference is underway to compose the situation.

These two developments within the last few days gave a shaky appearance to obviously frantic German efforts to end the war for Britain before the long, hard European winter hampers operations with foggy air, hard frosts and high seas.

On the other hand there appeared to be increasingly hard feeling on the part of France's Petain government toward Britain. Its latest manifestation came when the French African colony of Chad decided to stay in the war and fight with Britain. The Petain administration promptly complained that Britain was inciting French colonies to revolt.

Incendiary Bombs Inferior

London experienced its most prolonged air raid of the war with a period between the first alarm and the all-clear of more than seven hours. German raiders dropped more incendiary bombs than anything else and experts who examined extinguished specimens reported they were of inferior construction, comosped largely of pitch.

Such incendiaries are readily extinguished by anyone with a bucket of water and are not the formidable weapon British inhabitants were taught to combat before the war started.

In those days courses were held in home A.R.P. and mouseholders were urged not to tackle incendiary bombs with water lest they contain pills of sodium that would release the hydrogen from the water and make the fire worse. They were told to keep small bins of sand in their houses and tackle the bombs with tongs and scuttles after the fire had been extinguished by smothering.

Bombs Made of Waste

Numerous firms advertised fancy anti-incendiary devices and the Times one morning published an article entitled "How to deal with an incendiary bomb in the drawing room." The number of persons who could write learnedly about anti-incendiarism was astonishing.

Anti-climactic, however, was today's revelation that the bombs which everyone had been taught to dread and fear were nothing more than balls of waste impregnated with cheap inflammable matter.

They appeared to be the same type of bomb used in the conquest of the low countries, slow burning and smokey.

More serious and more cruel to Britons was the problem of the delayed-action bomb which might detonate a few hours or even days after being dropped in an obscure spot. This weapon—only a device to menace civilian life when used from the air against open towns—is considered in Britain to be about the world's low in warfare.

British Pilot Makes Hair of Nazis Stand on End From Fright as He Dive-Bombed Kiel Harbor Mole

London, Aug. 29 —(CP)— A British pilot just back from a raid on the Kiel naval base, told today how he made the close-cropped hair of the Nazi gunners stand on end from fright as he dove-bombed the harbor mole.

He reported no enemy activity while coming down to the target until one searchlight east of it picked his plane up and then "suddenly we seemed to be in the centre of the biggest collection of anti-aircraft bursts and searchlights I've ever seen."

The pilot kept manoeuvring, made out the shape of the mole and went down in a dive.

"We got up a dickens of a speed. I estimate we were doing about 350 miles per hour on the clock," he said. "When we got down to about 8,000, they had about 15 searchlights on us."

The anti-aircraft fire was heavy but the pilot went through it. At 800 feet the bombs were dropped, and the plane swooped to within 100 feet of the mole.

Had to Fly Low

Suddenly he saw the trees coming up straight ahead, illuminated by the searchlights that were trying to catch him. He pulled the aircraft up and it went over the top. The pilot said he did not dare to go up too high because as soon as he did every gun in the place started opening up.

He tried going to 300 feet, but the guns banged away, so he flew low over the town at 100 feet.

The front and rear gunners blazed away at points of fire on the ground, using up about 3,000 rounds. The pilot continued at 100 feet while he tried to head west. There was a terrific barrage it that direction.

"I just hoped to get out of it but I must say I never really expected we would," he said. "We went south zig-zagging all the time. We got about 15 miles away and then, although they still shot at us we were able to gain height. Finally we got away."

CBC to Broadcast Special Play By Robt. Sherwood

Ottawa, Aug. 29 (CP)—Alfred Lunt and his wife, Lynn Fontaine, leading American stage stars, will broadcast a special one-act play by Robert E. Sherwood over the National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in about a month, if present plans materialize, it was learned today.

The play would be broadcast on the Sunday night program, "Let's Face the Facts," about the end of September.

The Lunts and Sherwood, the American playwright, who spoke on the program himself last Sunday night, have all indicated their desire to co-operate in such a production but detailed arrangements have yet to be worked out.

This will not be the first time the Lunts have apepared on the air in a public cause. Their first Broadcast was made a few weeks ago in aid of the American Red Cross.

BERLIN DECREES STOPPAGE

Berlin, Aug. 29—(AP)—"For military reasons" there will be hereafter a complete stoppage of all telegraph and telephone facilities from Germany to other countries following air raid alarms until a half hour after the all clear signal has been given, it was announced today.

This number included the resident wives of soldiers and airmen, visitors to the town during the three days and the registration of Glen Miller.

At a special meeting of the Town Council, it was decided that Daylight Saving Time would continue until Saturday midnight, September 28. The town was to revert to Standard Time on August 31 but it was felt that Trenton should remain on Daylight Saving time as long as the surrounding cities and towns were on Daylight Saving Time.

Trenton relief costs have been cut in half according to E. A. Horton, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs for Ontario. In 1939, Trenton spent $69,320 on relief and in the same length of time in 1940 spent $33,693.

TABLE CORN HARD HIT BY BORER

Produce Houses Report Good Table Corn Extremely Hard to Get

Toronto, Aug. 29 (CP)—Farmers and market gardeners growing table corn have been hard hit this year by the destructive corn-borer as reports of widespread damage continue to increase, indicating the poorest crop of corn in the last 10 years.

Produce houses in Toronto report that good table corn is extremely hard to get with an average of four out of five cobs coming in for the market affected by the corn-borer worm.

It is estimated that the farmers and market gardeners will stand to lose thousands of dollars as a result of the damage done by the corn-borer, as whole crops of corn in many sections have been swept. The damage done is more widespread than usual and many market gardeners have taken a total loss on their corn crop.

The local crops of tomatoes and cucumbers were unaffected by the recent cold snap, which hit the hardest in the Simcoe district, causing heavy frost damage to tobacco crops in that area. Cucumbers are backward this year, with blight reported in many sections due to the prolonged wet spells and the following dry season.

Acting Crown Attorney at Sudbury Is Suspended

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)—Attorney General Gordon Conant issued instructions today suspending Acting Crown Attorney A. J. DeDiana of Sudbury. The act follows an appeal by the Attorney General against a fine of $25 and costs or 30 days imposed by Magistrate J. S. McKessock of Sudbury on R. T. Stevens, theatre manager, on a charge of making subversive statements in contravention of the Defence of Canada Regulations Act.

"Crown Attorney E. D. Wilkins will be required to handle all further work up there," Mr. Conant said. Mr. Wilkins is on two-weeks vacation. With the approval of the Attorney-General's Department he had appointed Mr. De Diana, a young lawyer in private practice in Sudbury, to act in his absence.

Stevens was arrested Aug. 24 by Corp. John Burger, R.C.M.P. as a result of allegedly subversive statements he was reported to have made, said Mr. Conant. The same day he was remanded to Aug. 31 by Magistrate McKessock, but on Monday was brought before the court, pleaded guilty to one charge and was fined. A second charge was withdrawn. Mr. Conant said he has been informed all the evidence was not placed before the Magistrate by Mr. De Diana, who prosecuted.

Police Blotter

It was all the result of a quack, quack here and a quack, quack there, interspersed with an occasional 'zing' of an air gun pellet that took P. C. William T. Evans to 85 Geddes St. early last evening. About the first thing done by the police officer was to confiscate an air rifle, which was in the hands of two-teen aged ladr.

It all came about when the neighbors on Geddes St. complained to police regarding the shooting off of an air rifle. When Constable Evans arrived to investigate he found the two lads in question, but the boys were emphatic in their statement that they were only shooting at a tin can in the back yard.

"Yes, but occasionally my ducks give a little hop and let out a loud quacking and I'm satisfied they're taking the odd pot shot at my ducks," complained the irritated neighbor. As it is unlawful to discharge a gun within the city limits Constable Evans confiscated the air rifle and all concerned seemed quite satisfied, except the two lads who were apparently enjoying a little game hunting on the side.

Three transients were sheltered at the police station last night, but one was at the request of the police. Today Alfred Bannerman, no address, was charged with vagrancy and remanded in custody for trial tomorrow.

A charge of assault was preferred against Lorne Palmateer, of this city, before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of Peace, today by his wife. The evidence will be presented in tomorrow's police court.

58-31 VICTORY FOR TRAINING IN U.S. SENATE

Peacetime Measure Now Goes to House of Representatives, Debate Likely to Begin Tuesday

MAJORITY EXPECTED

Washington, Aug. 29 — (AP) — Their battle for peacetime conscription half won by a 58-to-31 vote victory in the Senate, supporters of the Burke-Wadsworth Compulsory Military Training Bill mustered their forces today for the fight to come in the House of Representatives.

The bill, as passed, was substantially unchanged in its essentials from the version originally recommended by the Senate Military Committee. One major addition would give the government the power to "conscript" industry for defence, if necessary.

The victory of peacetime conscription in the Senate was expected to hasten the action of the House Military Committee on a somewhat different version of the Burke-Wadsworth Bill which it is considering.

House debate is tentatively scheduled to start Tuesday and forecasts were that it would consume at least four days. Proponents of conscription were optimistic that the bill would be passed, and opponents of the measure privately conceded that chances of defeating it were slim.

Small Number Of Fatal Injuries In Raid on London

London, Aug. 29—(CP)—A small number of fatal injuries resulted from German air attacks on London during the night when raiders "dropped bombs at random," it was announced officially this morning.

In the London area houses, shops and a church were damaged, said a bulletin issued by the Ministries of Air and Home Security.

There also were fatalities in a midland town and in a number of towns in the northeast and northwest and in other parts of the country.

"Star Dust"

Lovely, dark-eyed Linda Darnell wins new laurels in her spectacular career with "Star Dust," her new 20th Century-Fox stellar vehicle, which is now bringing to Belle theatre audience a story so real and thrilling that it might well have been a chapter out of her own life.

Boasting the most original entertainment idea in years, "Star Dust" depicts the heartaches and happiness of two plucky small-town youngsters, scrapping for their place in the sun and finding out things about love in the great adventure that is Hollywood.

Linda scores a smash hit as the lovely girl who is discovered by talent scout Roland Young, brought to Hollywood, screen-tested and rejected because she's too young. But she's a determined youngster and makes a thrilling comeback that stands Hollywood on its ear. And all of these things really happened to the real-life Linda.

John Payne is Linda's handsome leading man and he turns in a knockout performance for which production Chief Darryl F. Zanuck awarded him a long term contract.

Roland Young brings his droll comedy to a grand performance as the talent scout, once a great star himself; Charlotte Greenwood was warmly welcomed back to the screen as the studio dramatic coach who helps Linda make good.

Others who turn in fine performances are William Gargan as a producer, Mary Beth Hughes as a blonde meanie", Mary Healy, who sings the lovely Hoagy Carmichael and Mitchell Parish ballad that gave the film its name, and Donald Meek as a conniving casting director.

Roy Rogers appearing in the newest Republic historical western, "The Carson City Kid," now showing at the Capitol with an added thriller, "Parole Racket," featuring Paul Kelly and Rosalind Keith.

Mack Gordon contributed two other hit songs to "Star Dust," "Secrets in the Moonlight," and "Don't Let It Get You Down."

Jane Withers' Latest

"Girl From Avenue A," Jane Withers' latest starring film, has been called the most outstanding she's ever undertaken. Based on Maude Fulton's play, "The Brat," the 20th Century-Fox film boasts a powerful cast and an appealing story.

Jane has won waves of praise from millions of fans in her many successful pictures. Her gay new picture is an ideal vehicle for her because it shows Jane at her best—a Bowery spitfire on her own in Park Avenue. The picture is announced as the added laugh feature.

Supporting Jane are some of Hollywood's best known players, including Kent Taylor, Katharine Aldridge, Elyse Knox, Laura Hope Crews, Jessie Ralph and many others.

In her role as a Bowery spitfire Jane is befriended by a handsome Park Avenue playwright, Kent Taylor. Kent is interested in her as a sociological specimen to be put in one of his plays and he takes her home to live with his family in order to study her actions. The film depicts her bewilderment at the splendor of Kent's Park Avenue home, and shows Park Avenue's bafflement at Jane's unpredictable behavior.

The many hilarious sequences provide Jane with the opportunity to prove again her ability as a comedienne. She makes the most of every chance she gets, and in addition, she has some brand new surprises for her fans.

"Girl From Avenue A" winds up in a free-for-all that hits a new high in side-splitting entertainment. Jane rolls up her sleeves and goes to work on one of the Park Avenue debutantes, and looks like Joe Louis at his best—to the amusement of all.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Carson City Kid"

History, which has been recreated so frequently on the silver screen of late, lives thrillingly again in Republic's latest Roy Rogers picture, "The Carson City Kid," which is now showing at the Capitol.

Rogers portrays the character of the well known road agent of history, but the script brings out the hitherto unrecognized fact that the Carson City Kid was not essentially a bad man. His stagecoach hold-ups were carried out for the express purpose of searching the mails and thus learning the whereabouts of the man who had murdered his brother.

The Kid knew that eventually he would find a letter addressed to his sworn enemy, and his adventures following the discovery of this letter supply the fodder for the plot of the current film.

Rogers' pal, George "Gabby" Hayes, lends a high note of comedy through his portrayal of Gabby Whittaker, the town marshal who shares the fortunes and the misfortunes of the Carson City Kid.

Pauline Moore, Rogers' leading lady in his two preceding pictures, again supplies feminine interest and ornamentation.

On the same programme an action packed drama from start to finish "Parole Racket," starring Paul Kelly and Rosalind Keith. The Universal News of the World and seventh chapter of the thrilling serial "Buck Rogers" completes the big bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Hitler—Beast of Berlin"

The picture Hitler fears. The most talked of motion picture of the year and one of the most daring films ever made, "Hitler—Beast of Berlin," is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

It is a picture which every loyal Canadian should see, a document of frank, fearless, dramatic entertainment shorn of war or hate or propaganda.

It is a picture that can best be described as an eloquent pictorial drama of courageous humanity struggling under the iron heel of Nazi despotism, a picture which tells forcefully, what is transpiring in the minds, hearts and homes of the German people, not in sympathy with the Hitler regime.

Bob Steele appearing in the newest historical western film from Republic studios, "The Carson City Kid," starring Roy Rogers now at the Capitol with the added thriller "Parole Racket."

"Hitler—Beast of Berlin," is a picture which shall never fade from the thoughts of those who have or will see it, for it is a realistic object lesson of what happens when a great nation lets itself be lulled into captivity by demagogues and spurious patriots.

Owing to the great demand for its showings in the other theatres throughout Ontario, it shall not be held-over at the McCarthy Theatre and to avoid disappointment of not seeing this film, you are urged to go at once. On the same program is presented an excellnet comedy, "Buster Keaton in "The Taming of the Snood," an amusing cartoon "Millionaire Hobo" and an interesting sports-subject "Tomorrow's Stars."

"He Stayed for Breakfast"

Loretta Young and Melvyn Douglas in one of the best comedies ever made, by Columbia Studios, famous for comedy hits, "He Steyed For Breakfast," will be the next attraction opening at the McCarthy Theatre, after Sunday midnight.

Ranch Manager Scoffs at Idea Duke to Visit Ranch

Pekisko, Alta., Aug. 29—(CP) — W. A. Carlyle, manager of the "EP" ranch, which the Duke of Windsor says is the only property he owns in the world, scoffed yesterday at a New York report that his boss may visit the ranch in the near future.

"I've heard nothing from the Duke about any visit here and I'm quite sure I would have if there was anything in the offing," he told The Canadian Press from this out of the way post office just off the ranch property 60 miles south of Calgary.

The reporter who obtained the story in New York about an emissary of the Duke making quiet preparations there for a visit by the Duke to Canada and the United States obviously must have gone looking especially for it and been gifted with imagination, Mr. Carlyle said.

However, when the Duke does visit the ranch he will find a radical change. Instead of being predominantly a cattle ranch, "EP" has now gone in for raising sheep. There were sheep there in 1924 when the Duke—then Prince of Wales—made his last visit, but the flocks were small.

"Of course we have still some purebred cattle around the place," said Mr. Carlyle, "about 50 head or so. But we have much larger flocks of sheep. We show the cattle occasionally and have taken quite a few prizes recently with the sheep."

400 Nazi Planes Fail in Attack on London; 19 Shot Down

Firm Resistance By British Fighters And Aircraft Guns

First Battle Raged From Outskirts of London Area to the Coast

London, Aug. 30—(CP)—The second air raid alarm within three hours sounded in London in mid-afternoon as 400 German planes attempted a mass assault on the city.

Repeatedly the raiders stormed against the capital's outlying defences only to meet with firm resistance from British fighters and thundering anti-aircraft guns.

The German attackers, who lost at least 19 planes in their first attempt to reach the London area, shifted their route for the second try.

The day's second alarm sounded about 3:30 p.m. (10:30 AM EDT) but the all clear signal came six minutes later.

While the battle continued, the Air Ministry issued this communique:

"Reports received up to 2 p.m. (9 a.m. EDT) show that 19 enemy aircraft are known to have been shot down. Six of our own aircraft have been lost but the pilot of one is safe."

Return By Other Route

Undeterred by their losses, the Germans apparently returned to the attack by another route after only a few hours, trying to force their way through the city's defences from the outskirts of the London area all the way to the coast.

A second communique, issued by the Air and Home Security Ministries, said the Germans came over in three successive waves and were "scattered and driven back."

A "small proportion" of the raiders approached the London area, the communique said, but were unsuccessful in attempts to bomb airports surrounding the city.

"Bombs were dropped indiscriminately in districts of Kent and Surrey," it said. "Slight damage is reported and the number of casualties is small, but includes some killed."

Formations of 15 to 20 Planes

Coming over in formations of 15 to 20 planes, the Germans ran into a solid wall of anti-aircraft fire and swarming fighters protecting London following early morning attacks on the great industrial

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Quality of sunlight! When one leaves an automobile for an hour or so in the sunshine with all the plate glass windows closed, he returns to find it very warm inside. A greenhouse effect has been produced. Sunlight is composed of many kinds of rays, all of which have heating and photographic effects; but the red and the invisible longer red wavelengths have greatest heating effects, and the violets and invisible shorter waves have the most photographic or chemical effect. Another quality of these light waves is that when absorbed they are changed when re-radiated. Thus the sunlight passes through glass, but because of the changes cannot pass out. Hence greenhouses and hot automobiles.

NORWEGIANS JOIN CANADIAN NAVY

1,200 Expected to Enroll and Engage in Coastal Patrol Duties

Halifax, Aug. 30—(CP)—Hundreds of men of the Norwegian Merchant Marine have donned naval uniforms here to take up the fight against the Nazi invaders who overran their country.

The Norwegians, in groups of about 200, are being sent to another east coast Canadian port for training under officers of the Norwegian Navy who escaped to this country after Hitler invaded their homeland.

About 1,200 men are expected to be enrolled before long. An estimated 800 already are in uniform. The Norwegians are expected to engage in coastal patrol duties after their period of training is concluded.

The great majority of them have come from whaling fleets which put into this port in the last few weeks, unwilling to return to a German-dominated Norway after the whaling season. As many as 200 men have joined from one of the huge mother ships. The little killer vessels, about the size of trawlers, contribute fewer numbers.

The Norwegians wear the same uniform as Canadian naval sailors, except that they wear a distinctive hatband and have a small Norwegian flag sewn over the left breast.

4 MERCHANT SHIPS OF FRANCE ARE REQUISITIONED

Vessels Were in Canadian Harbors When France Surrendered to Germany

IN CANADA'S MARINE

Owners Will be Reimbursed in Due Course, Probably at End of War

Ottawa, Aug. 30 (CP)—Four French merchant ships which were in Canadian harbors when France surrendered to Germany have been requisitioned by the Dominion Government and turned over to the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, Naval Minister MacDonald announced in a press conference today.

The ships have a total tonnage of 13,879 to be added to Canada's Merchant Marine, already augmented by 21,184 tons of Danish shipping taken over when Denmark was invaded.

The French ships taken over are the Saint Malo, Maurienne, Lisieux and Limoges.

The four ships requisitioned were owned by private shipping companies in France. It was emphasized their owners would be reimbursed in due course, which probably means at the end of the war.

While a few of the unmarried members of the crews in these ships have preferred to remain in them under Canadian ownership, most of the crews have been repatriated to France. Canadian crews are taking their places.

GERMAN AIRMEN POOR MARKSMEN

Roy Haines of Port Hope Writes to His Mother About Air Raid

Port Hope, Ont., Aug. 30—(CP)—Roy Haines of Port Hope, a gunner in the Canadian Active Service Force in England, is convinced that German airmen are "very poor marksmen" and that British pursuit pilots are doing their job well.

In a letter received yesterday by his mother, Mrs. D. Haines, the gunner described how Nazi planes attacked while a Canadian regiment was at breakfast.

"They just roared down and let loose their bombs and turned their machine guns on us," he said. "At first we thought they were British planes returned from a raid, but suddenly they came down in a dive and we saw black objects drop with a whining noise to explode. There were plenty dropped but they were very poor marksmen.

"If it hadn't been for the British pursuit planes after them we would probably be unable to write home again. The German planes had four motors and a double rudder. Our planes out-manoeuvred them."

He said that 10 minutes after the first bombs were dropped by nine planes, "the sky seemed to be full of planes." The enemy was chased away inside of 15 minutes by the British pilots, he added.

Navy Minister Macdonald said at a press conference today. The Minister said the navy had a waiting list of 15,000.

Russian Army, Navy Begin Manoeuvres

Moscow, Aug. 30 (AP)—The Soviet Russian Army began manoeuvres today in a region described as "the Western special military district" as Moscow awaited a demand "early and satisfactory" reply to two protests to Rumania.

The Red Army troops trained in offensive tactics under observation by Marshal Semen Timoshenko, Commissar of Defence. (There was no indication that the "Western" district was near the troubled Rumanian border).

Under theoretical enemy fire, the Russian forces marched 30 miles and crossed a river while artillery laid a smoke screen, aviation provided protection and engineers built bridges in the realistic Western operations.

The Soviet press, meanwhile, published reports on the Rumanian-Hungarian border clashes and the German-Italian arbitration at Vienna without editorial comment.

Russia's two protests to Bucharest charged Rumanian troops with "provocative actions" on the Russian-Rumanian frontier and warned of possible "grave" consequences of any further incidents.

The Russian Navy has begun manoeuvres, with submarine flotillas scouting theoretical enemy bases so as to permit the surface fleets to take the open sea for mock battle, Red Fleet, the Navy's organ, announced today. The locale was not disclosed.

Tass, Soviet news agency, disclosed the protests this morning. Russia stated in a note of Aug. 19 that "firing upon Soviet frontier troops by Rumanian troops could not be tolerated" and protested in a second note yesterday against "new hostile actions" by Rumanian frontier troops and against "a number of cases of violation of the Soviet frontier by Rumanian military aircraft."

In some cases, Soviet frontier guards "were compelled to return the fire," Tass said. The Russian protest of yesterday stated "the Soviet side as yet had had no casualties, but should casualties occur matters would take a grave turn."

(Certain Rumanian army units and supply depots were withdrawn from the frontier Wednesday, the same day a mixed Rumanian-Russian Commission began investigation of a week-end frontier clash reported in Bucharest to have caused the death of hundreds of soldiers near Adamcata in Bucovina.

(On Tuesday, Rumanian government officials reported, a Russian plane making a scouting flight over Rumania was shot down by Rumanians).

Police Investigate Reports One of Men To Escape Seen

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 30—(CP)—Two German war prisoners who escaped from an internment camp in this district Tuesday night remained at large today while posses of military and Royal Canadian Mounted Police investigated reports that one of the men had been seen in Hallam township.

Leo Deault, relief officers for Hallam township, said he had seen a hatless and coatless man on two occasions near his farm home. He had noticed the man late Wednesday in the glare of his automobile headlights and again yesterday.

Mrs. Deault also reported seeing the man standing in drizzling rain on a roadway. When a truck approached the man ran into the bush and disappeared.

Officials said that if the man the Deaults saw was one of the prisoners it was possible the men, Theodor Steyrer and Hans Kibart, had separated to make the search more difficult.

Paid Admissions Up 500 On First Day of Belleville Fair

Co-operation of Directors and Exhibitors Supported by Public

PATRIOTIC EFFORT

Popularity of the current edition of the Belleville Fair is still maintaining the high standards of previous years, and if paid admissions on opening day can be judged as a criterion, even exceeding them.

Today, Treasurer Fred Chamberlain announced that the number of paid admissions on the opening day exceeds those of 1939 by over five hundred.

This, in spite of much adverse criticism that has been levelled at the board of directors from a variety of sources.

As Mr. Earl E. Bonter, President of the Belleville Agricultural Society Board of Directors, pointed out at the Junior Farmers banquet in Holloway Street Church last night, the substantial federal grants which formerly subsidized many of the projects sponsored by the fair, have been cut off, or at least temporarily suspended, and this of necessity has meant the curtailing of expenditures.

Exhibitors Co-operate

At one time, President Bonter stated, the directors had decided to cancel the 1940 exhibition. This decision was met with disapproval from the far-flung parts of the section to which the annual fair has become an institution. So strong were these protests, in spite of the fact that those disapproving knew that suspension of governmental grants meant a substantial reduction in prize lists and attractions, that the board reconsidered it decision and decided to carry on with the fair.

This they have done, with their hands more or less figuratively tied. They budgeted their funds "and with the co-operation of a large number of exhibitors, have staged

LOUISIANA MARKS LONG'S BIRTHDAY

Late Huey Long's Grave to be Scene of Memorial Service

Baton Rouge, La., Aug. 30 —(AP) —Louisiana celebrated the late Huey P. Long's birth anniversary with a holiday today as the courts continued to grind out indictments against the heirs who took over his political empire in 1935.

Former governor Richard W. Leche, already under conviction for mail fraud, headed a list of six persons indicted yesterday by the New Orleans grand jury on charges ranging from bribery to "confidence" games.

Long was shot and killed in the Statehouse Aug. 8, 1935. Underlings took over his dictatorship and ruled Louisiana until "Reform" Governor Sam Jones smashed the regime early this year by beating Huey's brother, Earl K. Long, in the Gubernatorial election.

The state constitution provides that Aug. 30 be celebrated as a holiday in observance of Huey's birthday. The Huey P. Long Post, veterans of foreign wars, of New Orleans, will conduct its annual memorial service Sunday at Long's grave in front of the capitol.

Scores of leaders of the Long regime have been indicted since the political scandals broke last June.

Some of the politicians are now in prison, others are under sentence and many face trial. The bulk of indictments were returned in federal courts but the state is just now beginning a searching investigation.

2 UNITED STATES MISSIONARIES KILLED IN SUDAN

Governor - General States Victims 'Deliberately' Machine - Gunned by Italians

WAVE U. S. FLAG

More Than Thirty Bombs Dropped on Isolated Missionary Post

Cairo, Aug. 30 (AP)—The Governor-General of the Sudan announced today that two American missionaries were killed and two wounded by "deliberate" Italian machine-gunning of an isolated missionary post in the Sudan.

The Govenror-General of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan is a British officer appointed by Egypt with British assent. Administration, however, is carried out through British district commissioners.

The large territory, just south of Egypt, has been under repeated Italian attack, particularly on the eastern frontier near Gallabat, opposite Ethiopia, and Kassala, opposite Eritrea.

Two Planes in Attack

The Governor's report said that two Italian planes attacked Doro, an isolated station of the Sudan Interior Mission, in Upper Nile Province about 55 miles southwest of Kurkuk, Aug. 23.

At least 30 bombs were dropped and then the Italian fliers used their machine guns, the report said.

Of the staff of five persons, it said, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Grieve were killed and Rev. and Mrs. Kenneth Oglesby were wounded. All are Americans.

A Miss Walsh, an Australian, was unhurt.

The Grieves were said to have run out of the Mission Station waving a large American flag but this failed to ward off the machine-gun attack by the Italians.

FO. R. L. EDWARDS, COBOURG, KILLED

Older Man's Skill Required In Certain Skilled Trades in U. S.

'Forgotten Man' or Jobless Worker Finds Age No Barrier Up to 62 Years

Baltimore, Aug. 30 (AP)—Industry's "forgotten man"—the older, jobless worker—is being remembered at a feast of employment served up by United States National Defence production.

Where age—even 40 or 45 years—was once a barrier, the older man's skill and experience are now in "open seasame" to jobs in rapidly burgeoning heavy industries and "war" industries.

Business is now asking for men from 25 to 60, or even 62, years old in certain skilled trades," said David L. B. Fringer, Maryland State Employment Service Director.

Last January only 15 per cent of persons placed in private industry in Baltimore were 45 and over. Last month it was 20 per cent. "This upward trend—which we can expect will continue—obtains not only here but in most industrial centres."

Last April, 28 per cent of the service's applicants were more than 45. July's 30 per cent placement shows the older man "is approaching an even break with other age groups in getting a job."

Axis Arbitration Awards Hungary 17,000 Sq. Miles

Conjecture Heard Axis Powers Move To Block Soviet Expansion

Bucharest, Aug. 30 —(AP)—Rumania announced today she had accepted an Axis ultimatum in negotiations for cession of part of Transylvania to Hungry, and reliable reports said she had received in return a promise that German troops would help defend her Russian frontier.

The communique announcing the capitulation was signed by members of the Crown Council, Council of the Ministers, the Orthodox Patriarchs; Constantine Bratianu, former head of the National Liberal Party; Ion Mihalache, a leader of the Peasant Party who had argued against the cession; and Horia Cordeanu, former army officer and brother of the slain Iron Guard Fuehrer, Corneliu Zelea Codreanu.

The signature of Juliu Maniu, Peasant Party leader who had argued for months against giving Hungary any territory, was missing.

An official announcement later said Rumania had agreed to cede Hungary an estimated 44,000 square kilometres (about 17,000 square miles) of Transylvania to be transferred within two weeks.

Rumanian officials are to withdraw under the supervision of a

Grenoble, France, Aug. 30—(AP) —Return to their senders of 60,000,000 letters piled up in three weeks by severance of mail service between German-occupied France and the unoccupied zone was interpreted here as indicating the Germans plan to suspend mail service indefinitely. Mother, 2 Children Killed in Air Raid

London, Aug. 30—(CP)—A mother and two children were reported killed at Manchester today and a number of cottages wrecked by German air raiders. Rescue squads worked frantically to get out a number of persons trapped in the wreckage.

Six persons were reported killed and many injured in another west coast area.

Manchester is one of the largest and most important industrial cities of England. It has a population of 766,000 and is 31 miles east of Liverpool, to which it is connected by a large canal accommodating sea-going vessels.

Raids were aimed at southeast England during the night. The home of the late Henry James, the author, was reported destroyed at Rye, an ancient southeastern town sitting on a high rock promontory crowned by an ancient castle and fortress.

French War Prisoners May Go to Germany

Les Verrieres, French-Swiss Frontier, Aug. 30—(AP)—Informed sources declared today the German army of occupation is considering taking all French war prisoners from the occupied zone to Germany because of a growing conviction the war will continue at least through the winter.

More than 1,000,000 prisoners are involved, it was said.

The Germans would free these men in occupied territory but for the fear of sabotage and disorders, it was said, and the Vichy government is unequipped to care for them in the French zone not under occupation.

Furthermore, these sources said, some supplies earmarked for Germany occupying forces and troops preparing for the battle of Britain are being used for war prisoners because of the inability of French authorities to feed them properly.

WALLACE FEARS APPEASERS IF REPUBLICANS WIN

Sees 'One Economic Concession After Another' by U.S. to Totalitarians if Republicans Victors

PRAISES ROOSEVELT

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 30 (AP)—The United States election campaign had an "appeasement issue" today after Henry A. Wallace, Democratic Vice-Presidential nominee, said a Republican victory Nov. 5 would result in "one economic concession after another" by the United States to the totalitarian countries.

In a speech formally accepting the nomination here last night before a crowd estimated at 7,000 persons, Wallace declared:

"Powerful elements in our opposition will, if the Republicans come into power, force us to make one economic concession after another to the totalitarian countries.

FIRES AT NIGHT CAUSE SUSPICION

British Police Start New Drive on Suspected Fifth Column Activity During Raids

London, Aug. 30 (CP)—British police have started a new drive against suspected fifth column activity during Nazi night air raids, it was reported today.

On recent nights, there have been spotted fires which police believe were set by fifth columnists to guide German bombers to their objectives.

In the London area, police observed flashes of lights from a large block of apartments. They raided the apartments and took a man in custody for questioning.

Scotland Yard daily has received scores of calls from persons reporting what they believed to be signal lights. In most cases, these flashes of light proved to be accidental.

Following a hectic chase in the police car, Constables Evans and Taylor apprehended two members of the Trenton R.C.A.F. in possession of an automobile, which had been reported stolen from its parking position on Front Street late last night. Today the airmen appeared before E. J. Butler K.C., in local police court and one of the men assumed the entire responsibility, when a charge of "joy riding" was preferred. No particular damage resulted to the vehicle.

POLICE SEARCHING FOR FOUR YOUTHS

Local police authorities were requested to keep a sharp look out for four teen-aged lads who escaped from the Provincial Boys' Training School at Bowmanville last night. Two of the lads were committed to the institution by Magistrate Butler in a recent sitting of the Juvenile Court held here. Another of the escapees is a resident of Springbrook, which prompted the Bowmanville officials to believe the four lads to run away from the institution would be found in their native haunts.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Aug. 30 (CP)—After a Nazi raid on a town in Southeast England, a control centre received news of damage caused by a falling airplane-cannon shell.

An air raid warden in due course solemnly submitted this official report: "Damage caused to one vegetable marrow and three runner beans."

The pilot of a German fighter plane forced down in a field in Southeast England jumped uninjured from his machine and ran towards a group of farmers. He threw up his hands and said in English; "All right, all right, what about a pint of beer?"

He was turned over to police, but first the farmers took him to a village "pub" for a beer.

During a raid on the Thames Estuary, a man was preparing a bath for his son, just home from work. A bomb exploded nearby, the man was hurled into the bath and the bathroom door and his son followed, in the same order.

A raid in the South of England stimulated business for one fellow. An ice cream vender paid two visits to a public shelter during a two-hour warning and sold out his stock each time. He was on his way to replenish his stock again when the "all clear" signal sounded.

A damaged Messerschmitt 109 is on view at Croydon where a small fee collected from visitors will be used to bolster the Croydon Spitfire Fund.

Another Spitfire Fund was helped along by four children whose cottage garden in Southeast England was damaged by a bomb. They collected the splinters and exhibited them at the cottage gate, with a notice inviting subscriptions. Within a few hours they had collected £2 10s ($11).

A 10-second interview with a Welsh woman who crawled uninjured from her Anderson shelter, smothered under the debris of her bombed home:—

"I was anxious to get into the house as the cat was in a cupboard with kittens. They were unhurt and the canary was safe in its cage on a wall that was left standing."

A soldier who fired a shot over the heads of several persons sitting on top of their air raid shelter smoking during a raid was discharged in a Midlands Police Court on a charge of firing his rifle on a public highway. A grey-haired veteran of the First Great War, he said he thought he was doing his duty because the flow of cigarettes and lighted matches might have been seen from the air.

Animals are becoming siren-conscious. Simon, whose kennel is in a Kent naval town, is said to give a warning howl before sirens are heard in the district and heads for the Anderson shelter. Toby, a terrier, owned by a Southwest London family, is reported to make a dash for the garden shelter immediately the sirens start their eerie wail.

Mr. and Mrs. James Gray, Chas. and Margaret of Timmins, formerly of this place, and Mr. James Gray Sr., of Englehart, are spending holidays with Mrs. H. Parson and family and calling on old friends here.

Mrs. E. Williams, of Big Island, spent Thursday with her sister, Mrs. B. Jones and attended the picnic at the Outlet.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Snider, of Belleville, spent an afternoon last week with Major W. O. and Mrs. Prink.

Inspectors Check For Infractions Of Dairy Industry Act

Close on the heels of an address by J. F. Singleton, Associate Director of Marketing, Ottawa, to cheese interests here, in which he pointed out the importance of not boxing cheese too soon, departmental inspectors launched a close-check-up campaign in Ontario to see that the regulation under the Dairy Industry Act is being observed. This regulation states definitely that no cheese for export to the United Kingdom, Ireland, or Europe shall be placed in boxes within 8 days of manufacture, while a regulation under the Cheese Factories Improvement Act calls for the penalty of forfeiture of premium if infractions of the first regulation occur.

According to inspectors infractions have been observed in this part of Eastern Ontario and the penalties exacted.

Steps are now being taken to remedy these conditions and it is expected the situation will be cleared up within a few days.

The check-up is being conducted on a province-wide scale and while the reported infractions have been comparatively few the regulations will be rigidly enforced so that the quality of cheese for which Ontario is noted will not only be maintained but also to reduce the possibility of patrons being deprived of premiums paid on high scoring cheese.

POLICE COURT

"This man was panhandling, begging and acting as though deaf, under which guise he handed out cards seeking alms and contributions," revealed Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson as Alfred Bannerman appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court. Bannerman pleaded guilty, but stated he was not acting as though he could not speak. "Seven days," was the only comment given by the Bench.

Although not present Wm. Irvine and F. W. Mowatt, two motorists who were passing through Belleville this week, entered pleas of guilty in writing when charged with speeding. Each paid $5.00 and costs at the scene and the fines were turned over to the court today.

At the request of E. O. Butler, local Barrister, the case of Palmateer versus Palmateer was enlarged for one week. The action is one of assault preferred against Lorne Palmateer by his wife.

A lone inebriate paid the conventional ten and costs after admitting his guilt of imbibing too freely of intoxicants.

WOOLER STILL IN O.A.S.A. PLAYOFFS

Defeat Point Anne 8-7 in Second Game of Series Played at Trenton

Trenton, Aug. 30.—Wooler remained in the O.A.S.A. playdowns by defeating the Point Anne Cementmen 8 to 7 in the second game of a two out of three series for the district championship. Point Anne won the first game of the series in Point Anne 11 to 4. The necessary third game will be played in Trenton on Saturday night.

Ernie McColl, hard-hitting centre fielder for the Woolerites saved his team from elimination in the last half of the eighth frame by blasting out a homer with two on bases. McColl's circuit blow gave the Woolerites the incentive to collect three more hits off Luffman and two more runs before the end of the frame.

Luffman, hurling for Point Anne, turned in a fine effort allowing the winners eight hits, four of these coming in the fateful eighth frame. Innings after innings, he would set the locals down in order and backed up by fine fielding Wooler had little chance to score until the eighth.

Stacey, on the mound for Wooler, was more lenient with his hits allowing the Pointers ten safeties.

Hutchings and Whitehead with two singles each were the best for the Pointers at bat, while McColl stood out as the star for Wooler with a homer and two singles.

The line-ups:

Point Anne—Whitehead, s.s., Bennett, c.f., Green, c, Whalen, 3b, Hutchings, l.f., Gaulin, 1b, Scott, r.f., Luffman, p, Loft, 2b.

Rule Number Nine Of Cheese Board Is Eliminated

A regulation, which had governed the purchase of cheese on the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade almost since the inception of the board was discontinued on Thursday evening, when Mr. J. W. Cook, veteran cheese-buyer, made a motion that rule number nine of the rules and regulations be thrown out. This ruling, defining that "A board bid constitutes all the white or colored cheese offered, and shall have precedence over selections" should have been discontinued thirty years ago, claimed Mr. Cook.

An amendment to the original motion, that the rules stand as they were, was defeated on the second vote after the first ballot had resulted in a tie, with the motion that the rule be thrown out being carried by an 18-16 vote.

A final decision on the above ruling had been hanging fire for almost one month before the motion by Mr. Cook brought the question to a head. The question of discontinuing rule No. 9 arose some weeks ago, when buyers Hunter and McCreary bid the same figure for cheese with Hunter making his selection only to have McCreary make a board bid, which, according to the regulations, had precedence over selections. With one exception, all buyers on the Belleville board voted in favor of the motion.

I wrote a letter to Aileen today. The weather over here is nice. I suppose it is nice at home now.

I will be glad when I can get back into action with the boys. I suppose the boys are all caught up with the hay and grain.

Well I guess I will close only write often for letters mean a lot to the boys over here.

Love to all,

ZION W.M.S.

Zion W.M.S. was hostess to several neighboring auxiliaries for an open meeting on the evening of Aug 14. Mrs. Percy Ray presided at the piano for quiet music and the president gave the call to worship. The Foxboro auxiliary had charge of the devotional period during which Mrs. E. Tummon sang very beautifully "My Task." Mrs. Tufts welcomed the guests and Mrs. (Rev.) McDonald fittingly replied.

The main feature of the evening was slides shown by Dr. and Mrs. Hayward recently from Kiating, West China. Mrs. Hayward, (nee Ruth Eggleton) had attended Foxboro public school as a little girl and was well known in the district. Everyone listened with keen interest as she described the colored views shown on the screen.

Dr. Hayward gave a short talk concerning the medical work in the hospital.

This profitable evening was brought to a close with a dainty lunch.

BELLEVILLE FAIR — TONIGHT AND SATURDAY

Largest Opening Day Crowd in Years Visits Belleville Fair Grounds

A Typical Cross Section Of District Lays Aside Worries To Enjoy Beauties of Fair

Convivial Meeting Ground for All Classes—Children Take Possession in Afternoon

FINE PROGRAM

Bill Garden's Troupe of Actors and Actresses Put on Colorful Show in Front of Grandstand

The lure of the provincial and country fairs, second only to that of the colorful circus "Big-Tops" still weaves a magical spell over the residents of Hastings and her sister counties. This was evidenced yesterday afternoon and evening, following the official opening of the Belleville exhibition by Mayor G. E. Thompson and Warden J. L. Churcher, when one of the largest opening-day crowds in years thronged the spacious grounds.

It was a typical cross section of this district that laid aside war worries, taxes, harvests and other seasonal and timely cares to attend the annual function that is not only a great welder of humanity, but convivial meeting ground for all classes of people.

During the early part of the afternoon and evening it was the turn of the youth of the city and district to satiate to capacity its appetite for the hoarse cries of barkers, the clanging whirl of merry-go-rounds and ferris wheels, and all the familiar age-old phases of enjoyment that nothing but an Autumn exhibition can produce.

But in the evening, it was different. It was the adults turn to satisfy that yearning that is inherent in all Canadians, no matter whether rural or urban, and once again mingle with cosmopolitan crowd drawn together by the mysterious something that is synonymous with fall fairs.

It may have been a temporary respite of release from the unconscious tension of war-worry of the past few months or it may have been coincidental with the return of more or less better times. Be that as it may. The crowds, that thronged exhibition grounds yesterday afternoon and evening were imbued with a joy-seeking buoyancy that has been missing for nearly a decade. There was a free-spending attitude, and devil-may-care hilarity apparent in all classes of people from Junior to Grandpa.

They thronged the buildings housing the colorful exhibits of business and industry. They wandered around cattle-sheds and judging rings in which paraded the finest specimens of pure-bred cattle, horse and other livestock, seen in a Belleville Exhibition in many a year. They lingered by poultry, sheep and swine pens, and loitered in the Agricultural Building where the products of milady's handiwork were on display.

Along the midway, they catered to the many attractions with as much abandon as did their junior counterparts of the morning and early afternoon. They patronized hot-dog and other refreshment booths until they were satisfied, inwardly at least. They listened attentively and appreciatively to the gay lilting melodies of the Belleville Municipal Band which entertained them from the bandstand near the main gates during the early part of the evening.

And they thundered applause as the clever acts of Billy Garden's Canadian Vaudeville Exchange Revue paraded in a brilliant array of talent across the stage at a gala performance in front of the grandstand.

Weather conditions were perfect, and the large crowd reluctant to leave, lingered in the brilliantly lighted surroundings until a late hour.

Draw Tonight

But today is another day. Another crowd, expected to swell at least to double the proportions of that of yesterday will once more succumb to the lure of the fair. Tonight, it is expected one of the largest gatherings in years will gather around the grandstand where the drawing for the first motor vehicle to be given away by the directors will take place. The inherent love of human beings to take a chance will not be denied, and by midnight tonight some fortunate person will be the lucky owner of a brand new automobile or farm tractor.

Saturday night will see the conclusion of the fair, and another draw will be made for the remaining motor vehicle. The same time entertainment that has been an outstanding feature of the fair will again be presented, while all the colorful exhibits will be on display. An added attraction this afternoon and tomorrow will be the running races which has attracted outstanding thoroughbreds from Eastern Ontario.

Colorful Show

Living up to the reputation gained in former years, Bill Garden's Vaudeville delighted the large crowds in the grandstand during both afternoon and evening performances. Music, dancing, acrobatic stunts, performing lions, and novel turns that pleased and delighted the audience made the program one of outstanding entertainment.

JUNIOR FARMERS AND GIRLS HOLD ANNUAL BANQUET

James Telfer, Paris, Tells Young People They Are the Inspiration of Canada

PRIZES AWARDED

Canada Has Large Surplus of Foodstuffs for Use in England, Says Mr. McPhail

"The young people of Canada are the greatest asset the country has got; if it were not for them many an older verson would have given up in discouragement", Mr. James Telfer, Federal Department of Agriculture Paris, Ontario, told one hundred and fifty intercounty junior farmers and girls at the annual banquet held in Holloway Street United Church last night.

"You are a great inspiration, a new invigorating tide of youth that stands challenging, standing and facing every opportunity in the world; he said. "You stand on the threshold of life, and the whole world is yours".

The banquet sponsored by the Trenton Dairies, Swift Canadian Company, Belleville branch, Belleville Creameries, Trent Valley Creameries, Campbellford and the Belleville Fair Board was a tangible appreciation of these companies of the fine work being done in Hastings and her sister counties by the Junior Farmers' Clubs and Women's Projects.

The function was featured by brief addresses by President Earl Bonter of the Belleville Fair Board, the chairman, Mr. Mack Robertson, who took the place of Mr. Lyle Hunter of Swift Canadian; Miss Jean Scott of the Women's Institute Branch who announced the lady prize winners; Mr. A. H. Martin, Agricultural Representatives Branch, who did a similar duty for the young farmers winners, and Principal A. McPhail of the Kemptville Agricultural School.

Regret Cancellation

Mr. Telfer told his audience that the Department of Agriculture regretted the fact that it had to cancel grants for their encouragement. "We needed the money to enable us to defeat the paperhanger from Berlin. We knew you would do it gladly and know you will forget monetary matters to enable us to retain our freedom, liberty and our homes".

He urged the young people to feel their own responsibilities not only to themselves but to their homes and country. "These are heavy days", he said, "and we know you will meet them, see them through and thus aid in preserving our liberty and freedom.

"Rural young people should consider themselves fortunate that they were born on the farm". Mr. Telfer said. "The strength and character of the nation is found in the rural districts, for there is something there and we are proud of it. The tillers lot is one of struggle and only through struggle can these these qualities be brought out. The true spirit of neighborliness and co-operation existed in the days of our pioneer forebears, qualities which, I am sorry to say, are dying out in some places.

He urged his listeners to forsake the lighter pleasures of life and seek diversion in their own homes and communities. Positions of ease, he said, do not bring out strength of character. A decade ago we finished a long period of prosperity. The depression followed and the folly of rushing to urban centres was brought home to many a rural resident.

Farm a Place of Contentment

The farm, he stressed, was a place of love, contentment, independence and happiness. But to find these things he urged the young people today to place the first things first. Principal among these, he pointed out, was obedience, and a willingness to be led, so that one can become a leader himself.

"We must put thought and energy in our every day activities and do something in order to be somebody", he declared.

A good appearance was essential, he continued, for at fifty our character shows in our faces.

Worthwhile folks don't just happen, he said, for we are not born worthwhile, but with a possibility of becoming worthwhile. "A good start means everything and I feel sure everything here has that".

Urged Companionship

Mr. Telfer urged mothers to be companions to their daughters, and fathers, pals to their son. "It is a grand thing to see a family in love with one another. They should work hand in hand, create a sympathetic interest and a band of love and confidence".

There is no bigger business than that of parenthood, he said, and

Manufacturers' Building Farmers' Meeting Place

Several new exhibits are included in the display of commercial manufactured goods in the Manufactures' Building at the Belleville Fair this year, the majority of which are of interest to the enterprising farmer. Farm machinery of various makes and types are featured and displayed in such a manner that the thrifty farmer can obtain the greatest amount of information regarding the articles on display in the various working models that greet the eye in practically every booth in the building.

Entering the building from the north the Universal Natural Milker with a complete display of the latest type af mechanical milker on the market in operation. A minature track model of the Universal milker operated by a small gasoline engine proved the feature attraction in this particular display. The small one cylinder motor that provides motive power for the machine can be operated on as little as one gallon per week for the milking of an ordinary herd of cows. This type of machine is displayed for the farmer not being provided with Hydro power, however. Other electrically driven milkers are also on display by the Universal people in the Manufacturers' Building.

Walker Hardware

The Walker Hardware booth, gayly decorated in suitable colorings, an entire display of modern electrical equipment has proven a mecca to the Belleville fair-goers this year. Electric stoves, ironers, washers and the Frigidaire refrigtrator makeup a complete showing in this line. The Frigidaire features new and modern conveniences at the lowest operating cost, but can only be appreciated when seen by the prospective purchaser. Also the new 1940 electric stove, which is manufactured by the Frigidaire department of the General Motors also is the latest in the designs of electric stoves and provides many up-to-date features never before given in this line. Several models of the Connor Thermo washer, with ironer attached, are also on display at the Walker Hardware booth, where the attendant gives demonstrations and explains each minute detail of the displays.

Reesors-Marmill Feed

Around the Reesors-Marmill manufacturing company's booth from Markham, Ont., the farmers gather to learn the proper methods of modern farm feeding in all lines. Featuring as their slogan—"A Marmill feed for every need," the Markham company has on display a complete line of every farm feed manufactured in Canada, including several exclusive lines which had proven most profitable to farmers in Ontario. Farm feed for cattle hogs, sheep, horses, poultry and specialising feeds for growing farm livestock are all on display in glass jars which the booth attendant is clearly versed and who provides all information to the farmer, who is interested in raising healthy livestock. Chicken feed is the feature of the display, for both chicks and the matured bird.

W. C. Wood Company

The W. C. Wood Company of Toronto, also has an interesting display of various types of their farm implements, featuring a new type of milking machine that proved interesting to the farmers yesterday.

Educational Exhibit

The ravages and working of various types of parasites throughout Canada is the most educational feature to be seen in the Manufactures Building in the exhibit shown by the Dominion Entomological Branch of Belleville. The operations of the deadly spruce-fly, that is today menacing the growth of Canada's forests can be seen by the naked eye behind a glass-enclosed cage. Samples of parasites developed especially for combat other parasites are also seen in their favourite operations. Of special interest is the microplectron, a pupil parasite that attacks and destroys the saw-fly in its early stages. Enlarged photographs brought many crawling enemies of man closely before the eyes of the attending public for closer scrutinty.

Of interest to the farmer in this district today is a display of the corn-borer operating under glass depicting the worm eating its way through the succulent ear of corn. The attendants were asked many questions pertaining to the operation and elimination of the corn-borer, which has been quite prevalent locally this season. Other curculis were shown at their ravaging work upon various plants.

CITY MERCHANTS KEEP STEP WITH TREND OF TIMES

Merchants Building at Fairgrounds Veritable Showplace of Business Activity of This District

FINE DISPLAYS

Decorative Schemes of the Various Booths Show Care Taken by Merchants to Display Articles

For the past quarter century, old timers will tell you, merchants of this city and district have kept step with the trend of the times. And commensurate with the march of progress, these up-to-the-minute business men have, with the sense of fair dealing that has long characterized them, kept pace with the quality of merchandise of cities far greater than Belleville.

Exemplification of this is seen once again in the splendid exhibits that mark the Merchants Building as one of the outstanding attractions in this phase of the 1940 Belleville Fair.

And the up-to-the-minute business men have lost no sense of the decorative in their presentation to the general public of their many offerings of their wares. Colorful to the extreme, brilliant in many cases with the beauty of the many products enhanced by eye-pleasing decorative and lighting effects, the displays are monuments to the far-sightedness of those in charge and bring out to the fullest the many wonderful things that science has provided for mankind in the last decade.

Bowra Electric

Typical of the many fine displays that greet the visitor to this building is the fine exhibit provided by the Bowra Electric Company. Utilizing one corner this enterprising firm has spared nothing to make their display one of the outstanding ones in the building. Gleaming radios from the tiny compact mantel model to the shining cabinet style occupy places of honor.

Washing machines, that boon to the housewife, and brought up to the minute by science and invention, gleaming white relieving the coloring of other effects are in prominent positions. Stoves, kitchen ranges, vacuum cleaners, electric irons, refrigerators in an outstanding exhibit make this display the cynosure of hundreds of eyes on opening day.

David's Electric Shop

This fine offering also exemplifies not only the rapid advances made in the field of radio, but also in the decorative art of Belleville merchants. Attractively displayed are many beautiful models to suit every purse, but also the last word in electric sewing machines, and stoves.

Farrar Furniture Co., Trenton

From the neighboring town of Trenton comes the enterprising firm of the Farrar Furniture Company with a display, that rivals any of the larger city exhibits. The last word in furniture, that would delight the hearts of married veterans as well as the newest bride and groom are offered for approval. This up-to-the-minute company has cunningly arranged two concessions in the building, each with a distinct decorative individuality and sharply different classes of merchandise. Washing machines of the latest type, vie with gleaming white electric stoves and refrigeration for the public's approval.

Leslie Shoe Store

Distinct variety and taste is noted in the fine exhibit of the Leslie Shoe Store. Here everything from milady's dainty golden evening slip-

FINE LIVESTOCK ON EXHIBITION AT DISTRICT FAIR

Exhibit Proves Bay of Quinte District is a Dairying and Agricultural Centre

SPLENDID CATTLE

Proving irrevocably the area surrounding the Bay of Quinte is above all a dairying and agricultural district, the livestock exhibit at the Belleville Fair this year is one of the greatest in the history of the Fair. Primarily, of course, a fair is staged for the purpose of showing the products of the home and the field, but most important to the farmer is the livestock in which is noted the advancement that is being made by breeders in their breeding stock.

This was proven on Thursday afternoon during an inspection of the livestock on exhibition at the fair when many prominent livestock breeders in the district were seen making their rounds of the pens and viewing the many fine animals up for show. That the livestock entry is up this year is shown by the fact that despite the construction of a new cattle shed which is now in use, the space for showing cattle is still crowded. Breeders stated that Holsteins, in particular, were shown in greater numbers this year and in every exhibit the telltale strain of fine breeding was shown. Ayrshires are exhibited in approximately the same numbers as last year it was claimed and dairymen partial to this type of dairy cattle are privileged to see some very fine animals. Also on display are beef type cattle, including Herefords, Aberdeen Angus and Shorthorns.

Splendid Horse Exhibit

The popularity to which horse breeding has returned in this district is evinced by the surprising numbers of mares quartered at the grounds with foals by their side. These friendly little colts were the centre of attraction for the youngsters who crowded around the horse stalls all afternoon to view the graceful animals. A five-year-old Shetland pony, displayed by David Webster of Picton was also the object of much attention by the children who were anxious to know the pony's age and whether or not it was cranky, to which the proud young owner answered in the negative as he calmly "curried" his pet.

All livestock exhibited on the grounds proved to be in exceptionally fine condition, speaking much for the excellence of the summer's crop and the luxuriant pasture which was the rule through the early part of the season.

Many Cattle Shown

Heading the Holstein exhibit is the fine herd of Mr. J. C. Nelson and Sons of Campbellford. Mr. Nelson is a many times' repeater as an exhibitor at the Belleville Fair and his sixteen head of cattle are again this year the centre of much attraction. Other exhibitors in this class include Mr. Walter Cunningham of Mountain View with eight head of cattle and Duncan and Foster of Bloomfield.

In the Ayrshire class, there are three exhibitors, all of whom are repeaters from last year. The twenty-three head, shown by Mr. T. O. Creighton of Maplevale Farms, Bath, head this class, while Mr. George W. Jarrell of Canniffton with twenty-four head of Jerseys is the big showman in the Jersey class. Entries of beef type cattle were still arriving during the afternoon with Shorthorns, Aberdeen Angus and Herefords being represented. Exhibitors in these classes include J. L. Ashford with ten head of Herefords and Robert Fennell of Dansford, with nine head of Aberdeen Angus. Shorthorns are being shown by H. H. Lonsdale and M. H. Pimmett and Sons of Peterboro, with twelve head, and by Mr. Ben Bleecker of Halloway.

Mare Weighs 2420 lbs.

W. J. Ross of Campbellford is one big horse exhibitor, having ten of various classes on display. These include two teams of harness horses, one light draft team and one purebred draft team. Also he is showing two stallions, two and four-year-old Clydesdales and two Purebred colts. Possibly the largest mare ever to be shown at the Belleville Fair is being exhibited by Mr. Murney Ferguson of Picton. This mare, a nine-year-old Belgian roan tipped the scales at 2,420 pounds when last weighed. Her mate, also shown by Mr. Ferguson, weighs 1,890 pounds.

Sheep and Hogs Exhibit

The sheep and hog pens are filled almost to capacity with six different breeds of sheep and three types of hogs displayed. Included among the seventy-odd sheep displayed are Cotswells, Leisters, South Downs, Shropshires, Oxfords and Dorsethorns.

Exhibitors in the hog classes claim a pronounced swing to the Tamworth breed of hogs, pointing out as proof the fact that for the first time in the history of the fair, the numbers of Tamworth hogs exhibited is at least at par, if it does not exceed the Yorkshire display. According to one exhibitor this year's Tamworth exhibit is tripled over last year. Five pens of Birkshire hogs complete the livestock exhibit.

HIGH QUALITY POULTRY SHOWN AT LOCAL FAIR

Number of Birds Shown This Year Less Than Previous Years but of High Standard

FEW PETS SHOWN

Variety of Breeds Shown Makes Poultry Building Mecca for Farmers

Quality, rather than quantity, stands out as the feature of the Poultry Building at the Belleville Fair this year. Far less in numbers than in previous years, the display of poultry at the Fair now in progress has tended to give the judges a much harder task in the selection of the prize birds, as the quality of all types of poultry on display far surpasses that of other years, thus assuring the patrons the opportunity of seeing the more select birds in this section of the province.

Practically every type of poultry is on display for judging making the Poultry Show one of the chief attractions of the Exhibition. The colorful plummage of the birds adds considerable to the display and proves inviting to the eye at the first entrance to the building. Of interest to the urban fair-goers are the stately show birds of all varieties, ranging from the smallest bantam to the large and gaudy turkeys, some of a pure white coloring.

Lovers of poultry will welcome a stroll through the building that houses the stately Rhode Island Reds, plumed Orpingtons, to say nothing of the Sussex browns and whites as they stalk staunchly in their pens. Pure white Leghorns rule the roost in number, but the display of Plymouth Rocks and giant Wyandottes, of all varieties command the interest of the onlooker.

The smaller game birds are in abundance, as are several pens of old English Cochins and the larger Buffs, all wellknown poultry in the Bay of Quinte district. Unfortunately there is a marked absence of pets in the poultry building this year, but their absence is more than accounted for in the fact that the quality of poultry on display is the finest seen locally in many years.

The poultry building at the Belleville Fair is surely a gala display of kaleidoscopic coloring and is one of the features of the entire exhibition.

Hamilton Fire 'Speeded Up' by Dust, Loose Grain Left by Threshers

Hamilton, Aug. 30.—(CP)—Fire which destroyed five farm buildings at the Ontario Mental Hospital here yesterday, was "speeded up" by dust and loose grain left by threshing operations in the main barn, Inspector Carl W. Caskey of the Ontario Fire Marshal's department, said today. Damage was estimated at 50,000.

The threshing machine operations left a "film of dust" which aided the flames in their spread, the inspector said. He interviewed farm attendants and two trustees in a probe which opened at the hospital last night.

"I have pretty well established in my own mind where the fire started", Inspector Caskey said. He said he could not give a statement as to actual cause of the fire. He believed the fire started in the horse barn, on the main barn floor or second floor, and from there spread to other buildings.

The fire here followed two other large barn fires in Southern Ontario in the last few days. A large bank barn at Islington, near Toronto, was destroyed last Sunday and a large barn owned by the Ontario Hospital at London was razed last week.

"Who Cares?" Says Operator

New York, Aug. 30—(CP) — A cable operator in London, at the start of the sixth consecutive night air raid, tapped out a two-word message of personal defiance across the Atlantic last night.

Over the cable carrying British news from London to the offices of the Canadian Press, he sent:—

"Bulletin—Gunfire heard in one London area, planes believed suburbs."

He added on his own:

"Who cares?"

WINNERS IN MODEL PLANE CONTESTS

Toronto, Aug. 30—(CP)—John T. Dilly, Galt, won 38 points to become Canadian model champion in contests at Toronto Flying Club. Dilly, who has spent 16 years flying models, also became adult champion. Joel Isenberg, Montreal, is junior national champion with 21 points. The senior champion, Albert Comiskey, Toronto, scored 19 points to win the Imperial Oil trophy.

Agricultural Building Contains Products of the Farm and Home

Domestic Science Tables and Beautiful Flowers Commented Upon

SPLENDID NEEDLEWORK

Devoted principally to the arts of homemaking the Agriculture Building at the Belleville Fair presented a gala appearance. Special decorations of Union Jacks and streamers of white and green ribbon enhanced the colorful beauty of the lovely Autumn flowers which formed the centre of the display. About the room were arranged in attractive style the exquisite specimens of needlework, the many beautiful examples of the various fine arts included in the Fair competitions this year, the products of the culinary department, in appetizing array, and the exhibits of fruit, vegetables, roots, and grains. All these, with a splendid number in the entry lists, combined to make the Agricultural Building the centre of interest throughout the day.

With 332 entries in the Amateur class the flowers this year uphold in fine style the high standard attained at previous fairs. Captain John Watson was in charge of this department at the Fair and with his committee made a most attractive display of the flowers presented for competition. The deep tones for which Autumn blossoms are famous, rivalled the soft pastel shades of roses and many varieties of gladioli. Single blooms and masses of flowers in huge baskets showed the blooms to advantage, while the artistically designed table centres showed just what could be done in making a table charming.

Many Entries Seen

At each end of the display were the exhibits of the professional class, gladioli from the Bonisteel gardens, the perfection and variety of which won instant admiration, and the display of J. D. Keeble, Mountain View, truly beautiful in its appeal.

The awards for special classes were confined this year to amateur gardeners from Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, and there were many entries in this class.

Mr. Watson was also chairman of the Schools' display which formed an interesting part of the exhibits. The entries of Dairy Products were of a high quality and were in charge of Mr. J. Robinson.

The absence of one exhibit, which for originality and beauty, has become famous with Belleville Fairs, that of B. W. Bamford, was commented upon, and no one regretted that circumstances made it impossible for its arrangement more keenly than M. Bamford who has always taken such pride in its design. Because of war conditions Mr. Bamford found it impossible to make the display.

Mr. Bamford, the director in charge of the display of Roots and Vegetables, said that the entry list in the quality of the products was well in keeping with former years. The display of grains, of which D. Thrasher was chairman, contained the choicest of varieties, selected from the abundant crops with which this section has been visited this season. In the same building, Fruits, in charge of C. L. Babcock, were arranged, the colour and quality of the fruit, adding to the attractiveness of the building.

Domestic Science

Of special interest to the ladies were the Domestic Science entries. Mrs. J. G. Galloway was in charge, and the many delicacies offered in contest, from delicately textured breads and buns, beautifully iced cakes and well prepared preserves, to mention but a few of the exhibits pointed to the many excellent homemakers in this community. Mr. J. G. Galloway looked after the Fine Arts exhibits which contained not only fine examples of oil and water colours, but handicrafts for the adornment of the home, china painting, basketry, etc, that attracted favourable comment of the visitors.

Arranged about one half of the building were the entries in needlework, which combined the skill of expert workers with the art of design and colour. So fascinating did this part of the fair prove to the ladies that many visitors lingered, and returned again and again to admire some particular piece which caught their fancy. Exquisite lace cloths and table sets, daintily finished baby's wear, quilts both practical and lovely earned high praise from Fair visitors. But this was only a small part of the entry list. Nothing had been omitted from competition that skilled fingers could make. There were beautiful needlepoint bags of intricate design, tea cloths in peasant and conventional fashion, colorful luncheon sets of Italian cutwork, cross-stitch one article illustrating a coaching scene on each piece of the set, knitted wear aprons and smocks. Finely stitched and embroidered night gowns with lovely bedjackets in wool or satin were other items included in the display.

Mr. Wm. H. Brooks, director, was in charge of this section of the Fair, and judging of the items by the ladies in charge took place early Thursday morning.

Mr. H. L. Fair, Agricultural Representative for Hastings County arranged a fine exhibit of the work of the Junior Farmers.

THEIR MAJESTIES AMONG THE PEOPLE

Britain's beloved King and Queen are bearing the royal share of the war. They have all the anxieties of the people of every class in the land, even the dangers which beset the people in a time of war. They show at every turn the greatest solicitude for their people who are passing through the greatest trials as a race they have endured, perhaps, for all time. But their King and Queen are with them in their heroic defence. Their care for their people is that which has made them so cherished by the people of the Motherland and of the Empire.

The tasks that fall to the Sovereigns are heavy tasks at any time, but in wartime they are even more onerous. And these wartime burdens the King and the Queen and the Royal Family are bearing with the same spirit as makes Britain the fast fortress, sound against the foe's attacks.

Their Majesties are the very human symbols of the might and justice of Britain's people among the nations of the world.

NAZIS AGAIN CHANGE RAID TACTICS

The nazis made the longest of their raid this week for a period of seven hours but even with this the damage is not heavy. Another new tactic was employed, the use of the incendiary bombs which were dropped at random, according to press reports. It was another form of Hun ruthlessness and desire to destroy that which has no military value, unless it be to try and cause the upset of the morale of the people by wanton destruction. But there have been evidences enough that the British people are not to lose their nerve through the "frightfulness" tactics of the Hun.

For the first time it was shown that the type of incendiary bomb dropped by the nazis over British centres was not a clever or intricate device. It was nothing more according to reports than a ball of waste saturated with cheap inflammable material such as pitch. It was smoky and slow-burning.

The blitzkrieg as the enemy calls it continues. But Britain knows the technique. Her people are firm. On the other hand Hitler's command seems at times to show touches of frantic effort. This is not unnatural as Hitler and his lieutenants know that Britain is the supreme power against which they must pit themselves. Now the season is changing towards autumn and there are the signs of possible trouble afoot at Hitler's back door. No one doubts that Hitler himself can only hope to deal singly with his problems. He fears trouble on two sides. There are untapped sources of trouble in Eastern Europe whence may come trouble for the aggressor of Berlin.

Hitler's future moves are so well guarded against that the people of England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland are confident with courage.

THE RAVINGS OF 'D.N.B.' GERMAN AGENCY

The claim of the German news agency D.N.B. on Wednesday that the British had dropped incendiary bombs on non-military targets in the outskirts of the German capital shows to what extent the nazis are driven to enflame the minds of the people of Germany. Absolutely unfounded the ravings of D.N.B. are clearly enough seen to be for home consumption for outside of Germany and the overrun states there is no one to credit such claims. The world at large knows that the Germans have not confined themselves to military objectives near the outskirts of London but have included in their attacks a theatre which was fortunately empty, St. Giles Cripplegate Church and a non-military warehouse near St. Paul's Cathedral in a district where the streets are so narrow and tortuous they could not be used for military purposes and where there are no war industries. Germans bombed the market place at Folkestone in a vicious attack the other day. According to the dispatches they bombed a poor house further along the coast, killing several aged persons. They have machine-gunned pedestrians.

With this gruesome record of the nazis, the false claims of D.N.B. impress no one.

Gotham Warming British Forces

New York (CP)—A big map of the United States, stuck with 125 colored pins in all sections of the country, hangs on the wall of the room overlooking fashionable Park Avenue, where rich and poor come together with a common bond of wanting to help Britain.

The room is the headquarters of "Bundles for Britain," the colored pins denote other offices which have mushroomed from an idea by Mrs. Wales Latham, who asked Prime Minister Churchill how she could help and got an answer telling of the need for warm clothes for Britain's soldiers, sailors and airmen.

Rich and poor alike have been doing their bit for Mrs. Latham's organization until now her headquarters present a crossroads of New York Society. More than 1,000 letters a day come into the headquarters. Men began work almost as soon as the contract was signed and production was scheduled to begin during the first week of August with the whole job to be completed by February, 1941—more than six years ahead of time.

Contact Lenses

(Woodstock Sentinel Review)

A news item the other day reported that a Winnipeg clergyman almost completely blind for 40 years had recovered his sight by means of contact lenses. He had been able to discern only dim outlines, but with the lenses could see well, and remarked that he had almost forgotten the appearance of human beings.

As we recall the item, it did not disclose what this man's eye trouble was, or whether the lens used was of a special kind. There is nothing new about the contact lens; it has been used by optometrists for possibly 50 years. Contact lenses in various degrees of curvature are applied in cases of conical cornea. When the cornea protrudes the vision is distorted, and the use of a contact lens of correct curvature overcomes this difficulty.

They have been used sometimes by actors performing a play which does not call for them to wear spectacles but who require glasses on account of being shortsighted. The contact lens fills the need and is not visible to the audience. Myopia, or nearsight, is caused by an over-development of the eye-ball, and to correct it the weakest concave lens is used that will afford the best vision. Astigmatism, a very common defect, is due to curvature of the cornea being uneven, which causes a distortion of the image on the retina, and this calls for a very careful fitting of spectacles.

Spectacles were probably invented by the Chinese, and are mentioned in writings of the 11th century. Bi-focal lenses—glasses combined for distance and reading—were invented by Benjamin Franklin. No single name is connected with the invention of development of contact lenses, and the optometric profession as a whole may be credited with a device which has conferred benefits upon many.

Prevention of the Great Human Plague —Mental Ailments

Just a few years ago tuberculosis—consumption — was considered a fatal disease; the patient might last for months or even a year or two, but the disease would surely carry him off. Similiarly with diabetes and pernicious anaemia. Today, tuberculosis stands well down the list of the causes of death and to have tuberculosis is no longer a death warrant.

Similarly with diabetes and pernicious anaemia. As long as diabetics take their insulin regularly they are safe, and patients with pernicious anaemia have but to use liver or liver extract to keep alive.

What appears to be an even harder problem is the prevention and cure of mental ailments, yet Dr. Frederic Leavitt, Philadelphia, as guest editor of the Medical World states this should be tackled just as tuberculosis was tackled and overcome. Tuberculosis, the great white plague, was Captain of the Legion of Death. Through a campaign of education in acquainting the general public with knowledge of the cause, prevention, and treatment, tuberculosis in many places has dropped from first to fifth place as a cause of death.

That the same results may be obtained in the prevention of mental ailments is the belief of the medical profession. It can be accomplished by a campaign of educating the general public as to the cause, prevention, and treatment.

Dr. Leavitt points out the excellent results by educating the public about mental ailments obtained in the treatment of that "great destroyer" of the minds of young men and women—dementia precox or persistent dream state—particularly by the treatment with insulin and metrazol shock.

Perhaps the greatest advance in the prevention of mental ailments is that the family physician now recognizes the early signs of mental disorder, such as behaviour symptoms which, if corrected early, will prevent the growing boy or girl becoming a mental patient. The family physician advises the parents to get the boy and girl to play more and mix with others so that there will be little or no time for "day dreaming".

Dutch Describe Fiendish Lunge Of Nazi Attack

Washington (CP)—The ruthless barbarism of the Nazi air attack on Rotterdam during the lowland invasion—termed by Prime Minister Churchill "a massacre as hideous as anything in the 30 years' war"—is described in a Netherlands legation statement issued here.

Vast sections of the city were completely wiped out in the 7 1-2 minutes Nazi planes bombed the city, killing 30,000 persons and wounding 70,000, said the statement, based on a report compiled by the Netherlands government in London.

"The crime against Rotterdam was a deliberate and fiendish assault on unarmed, undefended civilians. The world knows Rotterdam is built on marshy soil and that therefore adequate underground shelters could not be constructed. Of course the Germans knew this too. The result was the greatest mass destruction the world has so far ever known."

Two groups of 27 Nazi planes staged the attack, raining 1,000-pound, high explosive bombs on the helpless city.

The business, financial and shopping district was laid in ruins; the Coolsingelt, the main street, was a pile of rubble; the chief residential sections were wiped out; the greater part of the docks of the Holland-American line and the luxury liner Statendam were destroyed.

Sections Spared

A corridor through the devastated area was left intact because of warehouses and stores in the section were valuable to the invaders. Bridges connecting the city with the mainland were untouched as the Germans needed them, the statement said.

The planes kept at an altitude of 4,500 feet and "with diabolical cleverness the bombardiers carved a pattern of destruction through the helpless city. And the final goulish touch to this man-made inferno of death was that the Germans made aerial motion pictures of their handiwork, this film presumably for terrorization purposes."

The statement declared that when Rotterdam was bombed the Dutch army capitulation had already been handed to the German high command. "The Germans say the planes were in the air and could not be called back. It is customary for all military planes to be equipped with radio and to be directed in their operations by radio. It cannot be believed that the German air force, so efficient in other respects, was deficient in this."

BOUND TO JOIN UP

Melbourne (CP)—Recruiting doctors were amazed when a man, rejected because one toe overlapped another, returned a fortnight later with the toe amputated. He was accepted.

EXPANDING PATRIOTISM

Sydney, N.S.W. (CP)— C. P. Johnson's war generosity stretched from a pair of field glasses to an automobile. His gift of binoculars led to a discussion about army needs and he handed over his new Rolls-Royce.

Life Under the Nazi Heel

It is a profitable exercise to sit back for a moment and think of what life would be like in Canada—in Ottawa—were this country occupied by the Germans.

We should lose our freedom instantly, of course. There would be German troops at Lansdowne Park and the Armories, German guns planted and Swastika flags flying on Parliament Hill. German airplanes would threaten us from the Rockcliffe port. Civic government would be taken over by a German official. There would be no rights left us. We would not be permitted to assemble in public meetings, the newspapers would be permitted to print nothing but German propaganda, and the radio stations would be controlled rigidly. We should be put in jail if we listened to a foreign broadcaster, put in jail if we made rude remarks about Hitler, shot if some person suggested planning revolt. If the Germans felt like it they would pack our young men and women in ships and send them to Germany to work in the German fields. If they protested they would be subjected to the merciless severity of internment camps. They might order the schools to teach German and we should be compelled to be in our homes by nine or ten in the evening.

And that would not be all. The Germans would seize our gold as a matter of course. They would plunder our banks and our food reserves. They would loot our art galleries and our fine shops, our homes if they felt like it. They might "buy" the goods they took, but they would pay for them with German marks at a rate of exchange set by themselves so that the result would be virtual confiscation. They would put us on a food ration, confiscate our automobiles, reduce us to slavery.

Far-fetched? Not a bit of it. The Germans have done all these things and things infinitely worse, in other countries they have conquered. They have murdered tens of thousands of Poles. They have imprisoned or forced into slave labor great numbers of Belgians and Hollanders. They are strutting over France in the pride of conquest, looting France in the guise of a fixed exchange rate—paying with marks which can be spent only for German goods. And that is our fate if the Germans win this war—Ottawa Journal.

Germany Bans Norway Reds

Daily News (New York)

We noted, with some amusement, this headline in a newspaper recently. The story tells us that Germany, signer of a non-aggression pact with Russia, has clamped down on the Communists in occupied Norway. This is one of the most clinching bits of evidence we've seen that all is not love-and-kisses between Stalin and Hitler. You'll recall that, in Germany, after the Soviet pact was signed, Communist leaders were released from their concentration camps, and the Internationale became a fashionable, more-or-less popular tune. It was generally understood that Germany wouldn't bother its Communists any more. We'd judge that the Norway smack-down is the result of Hitler's distrust of Pal Joey. Norway is pretty close to Finland and the Baltic, in ideology as well as geography. With Stalin sitting tight on the eastern side of the Baltic, hungrily eyeing what's left of Finland and giving the eye to Sweden. Hitler can't afford to take chances.

Fighting For Their Freedom

(New York Times)

A German bomber and fighter formation that was attacked by the new Czech squadron, among others, was between sixty and eighty strong. The Czechs shot down a Dornier and a Messerschmitt in their first engagement since they fought the Germans over France.

Many memories are stirred by this inconspicuous item of London news. They are memories of Munich, of the night Hitler first slept in the Hradschin at Prague, of the terrible day when Czech students were massacred by German firing squads. These memories are burned deeply into the minds of the Czech people. They are burning in the hearts of hundreds of Czechs in France who fought the Germans far from home, who crossed to England amid frightful dangers, who now fight on in the British skies. These men have neither forgotten nor forgiven the enslavement of their country. Fighting with them in Britain are Poles and Norwegians, Belgians and Dutch and French, who are determined that their countries, too, shall regain their freedom. Are we not wrong in calling this epic struggle the Battle of Britain? Should it not be called, more truly, the Battle of Liberation?

Real Wealth

(Sunday Express, London)

Must we be ruined in order to win this war? Is it necessary that we should impoverish ourselves for a generation in our drive to victory? These are questions which many men ask themselves today, and every woman waits for the answer. That answer is—NO. The wealth of a nation does not consist of its capital in terms of money. Its wealth is contained in the capacity of its population to labour and produce goods for consumption. It exists in the coal mines and forests, the brick and steel, timber and tin and iron which rest on and under its surface. When this war ends all the real wealth of Britain will be intact. Although there may be fewer millionaires and a shrinkage of fat bank balances, the standards of the population as a whole can be maintained. Indeed, these standards can be, and should be, increased. There is one immense national asset which for years has been squandered and neglected. Hitler, with all his venom, can never touch or defile it. That is our good earth. Agricultural land differs from every other asset we have, in that it is inexhaustible. A day will come when the last ton of coal is brought to the surface from our mines, but the day will never arrive when the final ton of potatoes will be lifted from our ridges.

WHOLE STREET IN FIRST AID

London, (CP)—Housewives on Stockton Road, Edmonton, a north London suburb, claim they've got the first street first-aid corps in Britain. Twice weekly they listen to first aid lectures.

Each housewife has contributed a bottle of disinfectant or a roll of cotton wool, bandages or scissors. Motto of the corps is "Self help saves minutes, saves lives."

A Blistering Indictment

Blistering candour and a startling thoroughness characterized Robert E. Sherwood's denunciation of Col. Lindbergh in his radio address in the Canadian Broadcasting series entitled, "Let's Face the Facts."

Mr. Sherwood fought in the last war as a private soldier in the 42nd Battalion of the Black Watch with the Canadian Expeditionary Force. The other night he spoke "as an American citizen who is devoted with all his heart and soul to our common cause." He emphasized this phrase, declaring that "the vast majority of Americans know that the future of our free institutions and our democratic faith is at stake in the Battle for Britain. We now realise that your Canadian men . . . are fighting to defend our homes as surely as their own."

Mr. Sherwood exposed with relentless logic the futility, the falseness and the fallacy of the Totalitarian ideals. It was from this that he developed his attack on "important men, who have succumbed to the demoralising, degenerative influence of Hitlerism." He specifically named, as the two outstanding American exponents of Hitlerism, Henry Ford and Col. Lindbergh, whom he described as "a tragic example of mental aberration . . . a man spiritually diseased?" whose opinions "are just as unpopular with real Americans as are the men from whom he got them—Hitler, Goering and Goebbels."

Mr. Sherwood closed his virile and inspiring address by assuring his radio audience that "the voice of our country is not expressed by Lindbergh or any other boot-lickers of Hitler," but truly and eloquently by President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie, and he declared that American help to Canada and Britain must continue and be increased.

When a man such a Robert Sherwood comes forward and speaks in words that burn their way into the imagination of the hearer, it is impossible not to feel that he is representing a body of public opinion that must make itself more and more manifest in practical form. Canadians have long felt that the vast bulk of the people of the United States were with them heart and soul. They will be further strengthened in this conviction by Mr. Sherwood's ringing words of sympathy, confidence and faith.—Montreal Star.

"ROMAN INFLUENCE ON MODERN ARCHITECTURE"

A TYPICAL CROSS

Smartly staged, the performances opened with numbers by the Belleville Municipal Band, following which Mr. Garden presented the numbers to the audience. Accompanying the show and contributing greatly to its success was the music by Ken Good and his Commanders. A group of talented dancers, the Griffith Girls, introduced the variety show, with a novelty tap number. These graceful young artists were seen in several acts, a Tiller Number, a Ballet Rhumba, and a Jitter Bug presentation, all given with rhythm and precision. One of the stars of the show was Zina, a charming and versatile dancer, whose numbers included a novelty tap, a contortionist act, and a Spanish number.

Clifford on the Slack Wire was watched with breathless interest by the audience as he performed his very clever act which was followed later by an equally interesting specialty, Togo in a top spinning and diablo presentation. Togo, a Phillipine, further entertained the audience with an amazing bit of rope walking when he went from the ground to the top of the grandstand and then slid backwards to his starting place again.

The Sea Gulls, musical and acrobatic comedians, proved a funmaking group with a very clever skit, while the Jitter Bug Farmer completed the dancing acts on the program.

An entirely new presentation to Fair audiences was Duke Art's number. When this clever sculpture, working with incredible speed and inspiration, created from clay a series of faces that followed each other with lightning speed. First there was "Little Willie" in his earlier infancy, "Willie with the toothache," "Sitting Bull," a strong Indian face, which became with a few touches, anybody's mother-in-law. To show that his art was not a mere routine, the artist selected a young lady from the ensemble, a stranger to him, and in a very few minutes, her charming features were reproduced throug the medium of the plastic material used. Then, with a few deft touches the artist added years to his subject until she appeared as an old lady of seventy. His final presentation was of a face familiar to all—a circus clown.

To many the most interesting act of all was the final item on the program, when Captain Billy Reid, with his performing lions took the centre of interest. In a wire arena, the lions, great tawny kings of the jungle, swung from a trapeze, walked a wire, pushed a barrel, and at one point, Captain Reid carried one of the lions, weighing 475 pounds about the ring.

This sensational act concluded the performance before the grandstand last evening, and Mr. Bill Garden, who acted as master of ceremonies throughout promised an equally interesting program for the rest of the week.

FRANKING PRIVILEGES CANCELLED

San Jose, Costa Rica, Aug. 29 — (AP)—The government announced cancellation of postal franking privileges to diplomats today, indicating the action was in response to complaints of German propaganda.

JUNIOR FARMERS

parents should see that sons and daughters get a good start. They should make sure of the road they follow, determine their qualities of living, and direct their thoughts, wants and actions along the proper channels.

"We all have a national duty to perform", Mr. Telfer concluded. "The country is looking to its young people to build up production service in all phases of agriculture and to assist the Empire in its defeat of the common enemy".

Must Think of Freedom

"We must think of our freedom home, and loved ones, and not place too much emphasis on the monetary side", he said.

"It is better if we gave all, and saved our homes and liberty from the terror of an enemy".

Mackenzie Robertson, Chairman

Chairman Robertson in his remarks cordially welcomed the young guests, and expressed appreciation of the fine work being done by them. He drew a comparison between the young people of earlier days and those of today, adding some forceful advice to the effect that "a few more don'ts in these stirring times would be better for discipline."

Official welcome was voiced by President Earl Bonter, who expressed board appreciation of the stand taken by the young farmers and women in view of the present difficult times.

The board's decision to cancel the fair, had been overruled by popular request, he said.

This was done only by a drastic reduction of expenditures, he pointed out, after the federal grant had been eaten away. "But," he added, "in spite of this, the directors thought the boys and girls of the district were too important to be neglected."

Large Surplus

The country is faced with the problem of having a large surplus of foodstuffs on hand, Principal McPhail, Kemptville Agricultural School, told his audience. "This will mean a big readjustment in the future and our school must take a part in meeting the situation when it arrives.

Changes in the school curricula which will include military training have been made, he said. Boys taking the course next year may take this training, which will be in lieu of military camp training. This will mean a great deal to not only farmers, but others taking the courses. In the girls' department, negotiations are already under way to include tractor, car and ambulance operation in the curriculum, so they will be ready should their services be needed.

Pointed to Fine Work

Mr. A. H. Martin pointed out the fine work being done by young farmers all over Ontario in raising funds to provide the government with an ambulance. He described the various ways and means used by various clubs to raise these funds. Hastings County has already subscribed $100 and other places are following suit. He urged all clubs to cooperate in this splendid patriotic gesture.

All speakers paid tribute to the ladies of Holloway Street Church for their efforts in providing the sumptuous repast that preceded the addresses.

Following are the winners in the boys' and girls' contests:

Harold Motley, Belleville, No. 7, Prince Edward, 470; Donald Walker, Picton, No. 3, Prince Edward, 452; Walter Thurlow, Odessa, Len. & Add., 443; Roy Bateman, Stirling, Hastings, 441; Duncan Creighton, Bath, No. 2, Len. & Add., 438; Wm. pers to the sturdy English brogue is shown in the latest modes of footwear. The last word in luggage, from the well-equipped overnight bag for the weekend traveller to the capacious yet compact steamer trunk is on display. Baggage in every color and to suit every purse stand out in an exhibit that is in itself outstanding.

A. Sills

A cottage window complete in every detail, including lace curtains and flowers sets off a colorful display of shingle siding placed on a miniature wall in the Arthur Sills exhibit. Here is seen the many colors and shades of shingles as well as flooring, siding, etc., set off to make the whole a decidedly attractive display.

Radios Galore

Yet more radios said to be the last word in wireless reception are encountered in the tastefully decorated booths of the Stewart Warner, the Rogers Radio Companies, Majestic models, the acme of cabinet construction that house the most up-to-date receiving sets vie with each other in grandeur of polished chassis. Models to suit every purse are here, with the almost startling beauty of the new 1940 sets overshadowing perhaps the colorful decorative motifs of the booths themselves.

Hydro

The familiar black-and-white of the Hydro Commission forms a decorative setting for an exhibit that Hydro alone can display. The many electrical appliances for which this name is famous are arranged in such a manner and form of decoration that to see them is to admire them. Tall, gleaming electric refrigerators form a background for the tastefully arranged display that first greets the eye. Washing machines, electric stoves and ranges placed to bring out to the full their best points, form an eye-pleasing picture. A modern room, the last word in electrical appliances sets off the display as a whole and attracted a large number of interested visitors yesterday.

John Lewis Company

This well-known Belleville firm has left no stone unturned to make their exhibit one of the outstanding ones in the building. Conspicuous in the display is the showing of modern oil-burning furnaces, said to be the last word in house-heating. Added to these scientific appliances are the electric ranges of peculiar beauty and design, washing machines and heating appliances of all sorts and kinds. A novel effect in this display is a modern fireplace complete with fittings that gleam in the glow of an artificial fire.

Last but not least is the concession of the "Greatest Mother of Them All," the Red Cross Society. Decorated in the familiar red and white of the organization, with a large red cross in the centre background, the booth brings home the full meaning of this all-important emblem.

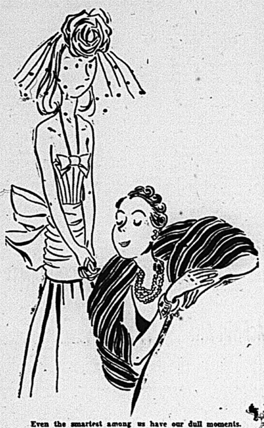
A Little Healthy Vanity Good for Shy Gals



Even the smartest among us have our dull moments.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Shy little girls who hang to their mother's skirts are the victims of too much devotion on the part of a mama who has had an "uprush of maternity to the brain," as somebody has expressed it. When these children become adults they are self-conscious, a condition that not only interferes with social and business life but which makes them wretchedly unhappy.

They overrate others and they underrate themselves. They suffer from social fear which can have unpleasant physical effects. When meeting a stranger it is possible that heart beats will increase the skin become pale, palms moist and clammy.

Healthy Vanity

The cure for self-consciousness is a little healthy vanity and conceit. The girl who thinks well of herself doesn't suffer from it. She realizes that even the smartest among us have our dull moments, say stupid things at times. We're all cut from the same cloth. To worry about little social errors is silly. What's done is done, what's said is said. Others are usually thinking so much about their own slips that they're not remembering the other fellow's. Pat yourself on your back.

Many a white-haired sister worries because her silver crown is dimmed with canary — colored streaks here and there. These conditions are treated at any high-class beauty shop. After the shampoo a special bluing is used as a rinse; it contains bleaching properties that remove the yellow stains.

There's no need of discolorations coming after the permanent wave if the operator knows exactly how to treat snowy tresses.

WEDDINGS

LANGVIN—GENEREAUX

Queensboro, (Special) — St. Henry's, Church, Queensboro, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday morning, August 28th, when Lena Mary, daughter of Mrs. John Genereaux, and the late John Genereaux, Queensboro, became the bride of William Leo Langvin, Tweed. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Father F. D. Hyland of Madoc.

The bride was prettily gowned in a white embroidered net dress over white taffeta in floor length, with wedding veil and carried pink gladioli. She was attended by her sister, Miss Jean Genereaux, who wore a blue satin floor length dress and carried a bouquet of peach gladioli.

The groom's brother acted as groomsman. The wedding music was played by the organist, Mrs. Frank Barry.

Later a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Langvin will reside at Tweed.

WILSON—GILMOUR

The marriage took place last evening in St. John's Chapel, Toronto, with Rev. Father Carvel officiating of Miss Hilda Gilmour, daughter of Mr. Alfred Gilmour and the late Mrs. Gilmour, to Flying Officer Herbert Malcolm Wilson, Camp Borden, son of Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. H. R. Wilson of Belleville.

Gladioli and ferns decorated the chapel and the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore her travelling suit of vapor blue wool with Arctic fox collar, grapewine felt hat and corsage of hybrid orchids. Miss Mary Boyle, her cousin, was her attendant, wearing a dusky pink crepe jacket dress with touches of coral, matching hat and corsage of Butterfly roses. Mr. William Newby of Belleville, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Douglas Newby and Mr. Thomas Gilmour, brother of the bride.

A reception followed in the Roof Garden of the Park Plaza Hotel. Mrs. F. R. Boyle, aunt of the bride, received in a gown of princella sheer, with navy accessories and corsage of Premier-Supreme roses. Mrs. Wilson was gowned in pearl gray crepe with hat of French flowers and corsage of orchids. On their return from a motor trip to Quebec, the bride and bridegroom will live in Barrie.

ERRINGTON—POWERS

Picton, August 30.—Historic old Castle Inn was the scene of an interesting wedding this afternoon at two-thirty, when Miriam Rosabelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Powers, Picton, became the bride of Roy Franklin Errington, Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Errington of Goderich. Rev. J. F. Reycraft of Picton United Church, was assisted by Rev. David Wren of Stratford.

Tall standards and baskets of lovely gladioli and phlox, banked around the fireplace, provided a background for the ceremony, while similar flowers were used in decoration throughout the Castle.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful gown of embroidered ivory silk net over taffeta with short train, full skirt with gathered bodice. Her finger-tip veil with a coronet of lace, was that worn by her mother on her wedding day, and she wore pearls, the gift of the groom. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of Hollywood roses.

Miss Ruby Errington, Goderich, twin sister of the groom, as bridesmaid wore a gown of light blue net over taffeta made with full skirt. She carried a Colonial bouquet and wore a tiara of Sweetheart roses in her hair. George Powers, Picton, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

Wedding music was played by Miss Adelaide Powers, cousin of the bride, including the wedding marches by Mendelssohn and Wagner and soft music before and after the ceremony. Mrs. Harold Ruttan, cousin of the bride, sang "Because". Ushers were Mr. Ted Burley and Mr. Charles Spencer.

A reception followed at the Castle. Receiving with the bridal party were the bride's mother, Mrs. Powers, smart in figured Queen's blue crepe with wine accessories and corsage of roses; Mrs. Errington, mother of the groom, in navy crepe with matching accessories and corsage of pink roses. The assistants were Miss Beatrice Huff, Mrs. G. G. Burley, Miss Mary Leavens, Miss Fannie Williams, Miss Grace Miller and Miss Lillian Van Dusen.

The bride's bouquet will be presented to her great aunt, Mrs. Charles Minaker, who was unable to attend owing to illness.

For travelling, the bride donned a smart dress of dusky rose, pin-tucked, with coat, hat and gloves of soldierette blue and shoes and purse of reptile. After a trip to Muskoka, they will reside in Toronto.

The bride was formerly on the staff of Leamington High School and the groom is a graduate of Toronto University.

STILL TOPS is the ubiquitous evening jacket that turns an evening frock into a dinner dress or just complements a decollette gown. A new beauty is in fiery red, its deep rolled revers embroidered heavily with jet. Jet also trims the hip-line pockets. Fitted at the waist.

Melvyn Douglas, Una O'Connor and Loretta Young, in one of the hilarious comedy scenes from "He Stayed for Breakfast," one of the funniest comedies ever screened, which opens Sunday after midnight at the McCarthy Theatre.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The Girl Who Waits For Something to Turn up Continues to Wait

If this changed world hasn't done anything else for us it at least has helped to snuff out the type of girl who waits for something to turn up.

Before we began having jobs for women, girl bachelors and women of leisure who cruised the world on tours, the girl who stayed at home waiting for something to turn up was pretty prevalent. If she was well-to-do, she manage to wait on the sofa of a more or less prosperous looking parlor, reading romantic novels and hoping for Prince Charming to present himself.

If she wasn't well-to-do at all, she waited in the kitchen and, between washing the dishes and cooking the meals, she scrimped pennies with the idea of consulting a fortune teller and being advised about the dark man who was waiting for her and the blonde lady who would do her dirt and walk off with the dark man.

Nothing very much happened to the girl who waited for something to turn up, whether she kept her watch in the parlor or kitchen.

The cure for this fruitless watchful waiting is to get busy and arrange something for yourself. Be a "joiner". Join some organization, or, better, two or three of them—civic, political, religious, cultural or what is known as "uplift". Joiners are apt to be a social bunch and when they're not working for the particular Cause which they are convinced will cure world evils, they take time off for picnics, excursions, hikes, community dinners and whatnot.

In this way you're bound to meet people, and among them—while he may not be the Prince Charming of song and story—one who may be an entirely creditable person who is terribly lonesome and looking for a nice girl. His attitude toward life may be exactly like yours.

The great thing is to be "up and doing", not with a heart for any fate, as the poem continues; you must be your own fate, the captain of your soul, the forger of your destiny, and a few things like that.

We'll face the worst. Suppose, as a great many girls have written me in unhappy, tear-stained letters, they can't have people at their own homes because some member of the family is absolutely unfortunate and unpresentable—a drinking father or brother, a half crazy person who would need far too much explaining to make a party possible.

The thing for the up-and-coming girl to do is to join up with some other girls whose home conditions are more inviting, and share the expense of a little party or an out-of-door get-together.

And as a parting injunction, don't stick around the house waiting for something to turn up. Don't be static. The world is full of all sorts of opportunities if you'll only go out and meet them halfway.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Straightening Out Problems of a Morning Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I plan to be married at the end of this month. The ceremony will be a simple one, in a small chapel at 9 a.m., with only the members of the families present.

1.—The breakfast will be held shortly after the ceremony, at a nearby hotel. I am confused about the appropriate menu. Is it necessary that we have a light luncheon served? The menus suggested by the hotel seem to me rather out-of-place for that time of day.

2.—The minister who is to perform the ceremony is a stranger to us, except for a rather brief meeting when we made arrangements for the ceremony. Should he be invited to the breakfast?

3.—What should the seating plans be? Both "sets" of parents will be present, and the best man and maid of honour.

4.—Will you suggest the best wine for us to serve? Champagne would, of course, be the nicest, but we must keep expenses down to the minimum allowed by good taste. We plan to serve only one wine.

5.—Whose responsibility is it to give a gratuity to the sexton of the church? Should my family do this, or the groom-elect?

6.—Does the groom order flowers for the mother of the bride and for his own mother, as well as for the bride and her attendants? Are the boutonnieres worn by the men part of my responsibility?

S. M.

1.—After a nine o'clock-in-the-morning ceremony, the menu should be a "real breakfast" menu, rather than a luncheon-menu. That is, first a fruit course (orange or grapefruit juice, or melon, or fresh fruit cocktail); then (I'm thinking of your budget), such a simple dish as scrambled eggs and crisp bacon; thin buttered toast or small rolls, or muffins, or tiny biscuits; and, of course, coffee. This is a minimum menu inexpensive, and completely appropriate for that hour of the morning.

2.—Since you are inviting only the families and do not know the minister well, you need not invite him to the breakfast.

3.—In your seating-arrangements, you should carry out as much as possible the traditional placing. At one end of the table, you, the bride, sit at the right of the bridgroom. The best man sits at your right, and the maid of honor at the left of the groom. At the other end of the table opposite your place, sits your mother, the hostess of the occasion, with the groom's father (the man guest of honor appropriately at her right. Then the best arrangement (although it will mean seating two women next to each other and two men next to each other), would be to have the groom's mother seated at your mother's left, and the bride's father seated at the left of the groom's mother. This will have the advantage of having the groom's mother (the woman guest of honor) seated at your father's right, as she should be.

4.—Your one wine should be champagne, the traditional wine for toast-drinking. You can get a very good domestic champagne inexpensively.

5.—The bride's family gives the gratuity to the sexton, since this is part of the church expenses.

6.—Yes, the groom should send a corsage to the bride's mother and to his own mother. Usually too he send the bouquet or corsage to his bride, although sometimes her family plans this as part of the decorations. Usually the bridal attendants' flowers are provided by the bride's family, but the groom may, if he wishes, take over this courtly gesture.

The bountonnieres for the men are provided by the groom.

FASHION FLASHES

NOT ALL HATS are set far back on the head. Jutting forward over the forehead is a handsome visor-brimmed toque of sea green felt trimmed with a mist of deep brown Chantilly lace veiling that veils the face too.

NO MATTER the season, chiffon is always popular for evening. A lovely frock has a snug bodice buttoned down the back with self-covered buttons. The bodice is deep sky blue, the skirt is light medium blue and full length panels floating from shoulder to the floor are of blue chiffon ombred from light to dark.

THERE'S A FLARE to many of the new fall coats. A widely flared skirt is a feature of a sheared beaver coat made with a wide band of brown faille set in at the snug waist. A rolled collar fastens high.

A LATE VACATIONIST will want a slip-over and cardigan set for those chilly days. A beauty comes in knitted cashmere in a rich shade of mustard yellow. Sweater is ribbed at the round neck and waist. Cardigan has long tight sleeves and a row of buttons for fastening.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Changelings

I have learned that a number of women have a strongly implanted idea that if they go to a hospital for childbirth, there is great danger of the baby being mixed up with others in the ward making it uncertain that the child she brings home is her own flesh and blood.

More than once I have had women refuse to go to the hospital to have a child and this fear was apparently their only reason for the refusal. They insisted on having the baby at home even though it was more inconvenient.

This phobia about baby mixup has its roots in fiction thrillers. The idea makes a dandy plot for a detective story, or a drama of almost any sort and has appealed to writers for centuries. Actual cases of babies switched in hospitals are exceedingly rare. I have never discovered a single authenticated case.

Hospital staffs learned long ago to be exceedingly careful to prevent such mixings. They never take it for granted that there really is a great deal of difference in the appearance of babies even when they are born. This is true, I know from long experience. And many nurses in Maternity Wards have told me they can tell all the babies apart even without looking at the identification tags of the infants.

The old theory that all babies look alike simply isn't borne out. Of course, twins might look almost exactly alike. The Dionne Quintuplets certainly looked alike the morning they were born, but this fact is not important for if babies are twins, or triplets, or quintuplets, a mixup between them isn't tragic. The mother gets all her own children.

But hospitals do not depend on doctors or nurses to tell babies apart. It is routine for a tag or disc to be placed on the child almost as soon as it is born and before the child is taken into the nursery and placed with the other children. This identification is never removed for any purpose.

Also, in many large hospitals the baby's foot prints, finger prints or palm prints are taken soon after birth. It is easier to get palm prints than it is either finger or foot prints at that time. Often these prints are filed on the same card with the mother's finger prints. Once such a document is filed, the proof of the baby's identity is established beyond doubt for all time.

Hospitals now favor this latter method, because it protects them completely in the event some mother gets it into her head that she wasn't given the right baby and goes to court to seek redress.

Choir Honors Popular Frankford Young Lady

Frankford — The choir and members of Frankford United Church gathered at the home of Mr. Lloyd Hannan on Thursday evening to do honor to Miss Edna Johnson, prior to her departure to Toronto where she is going to train for a nurse in St. Michael's Hospital. Rev. J. F. Lane acted as chairman and a short program was presented. Mrs. W. Morrow and her daughter Jean favoured with a piano duet. Mrs. Floyd Ketcheson gave a reading. Miss Donna Osterhout played — "There'll Always be an England" and a number of young people sang.

Miss Hazel Mikel read the address and the gifts, which included a camera, a comb and brush set and a set of toilet articles were presented by Mrs. W. Morrow. Five contests followed won by Mrs. Morrow and Rev. J. F. Lane. A most delightful lunch was then served to all present.

On Friday evening a number of the neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson to spend an evening with their daughter, Edna, prior to her departure to Toronto and to present her with a twin travelling set of bags as a small token of their esteem in which she was held in the community. Miss Ruth Kelly read a very appropriate address and Regina, Bernice, and Teresa McAuley made the presentation. The evening was enjoyably spent and music was supplied throughout. Lunch was served by the ladies.

On Sunday afternoon the members of the Frankford Orange Lodge and the War Veterans marched to the cemetery led by the Home Guards and the Band and decorated the graves of their departed loved ones. They then marched back to the cenotaph where a short program was conducted, and music supplied by the band.

On Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock the members of Frankford Mission Circle gathered in the Rose-Lowery Hall and held an indoor picnic. They had intended gathering at the Tourist Park, but owing to the weather the plan was changed. About 22 in number, they enjoyed a most delicious lunch. A few games were played and those present report a very enjoyable evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bennett, Joan and Roy are spending a week in Toronto at the Exhibition. Mr. Wrightmeyer of Trenton is looking after Charlie's business for him.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, August 31

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

WITH OMENS of stubborn obstacles and want of cooperation from those in position and power it may be imperative to bring to bear much keen and logical mentality as well as a more than usual degree of tact, finesse and cleverness to successfully break through impediment and opposition. The latter tactics may bear fruit with certain superiors or important personages whose hostility is but moderate or lukewarm.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves beset by delays, disappointments and tenacious obstacles during the year, with portents of loss, want of cooperation from desired sources and other impediments. However, the mind will be keen, shrewd and farseeing, suggesting the employment of tact, diplomacy and finesse to break down resistance and opposition.

A child born on this day may be rigid dogmatic and unyielding, perhaps too tenacious for its own good. However, a brilliant mind may break down a defeatist behaviorism. Training in this direction is indicated.

BE OFF for a holiday but don't forget a wearable travel coat, for dressy coats are no dice while en route. A new model is in plaided wool, bold block plaid in gray, yellow, tan and blue. A gray fox collar is detachable.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Rumania, reportedly threatened with immediate invasion by the Axis powers and Hungary and menaced by Russia and Bulgaria, today surrendered to Hungary about two-thirds of her rich oil and timber province of Transylvania.

The Rumanians were said to have been told at a four power conference in Vienna that they must answer "Yes" to Germany's terms for settlement of their territorial dispute with Hungary and say it by tonight—or Germany would march.

German Panzer divisions and aircraft were said to have been waiting on the German side of the border, ready to go had King Carol's Government become defiant. It had no recourse but surrender, faced with the prospect that if it elected to fight one neighbor it would have to fight all.

In return for the surrender Hitler's Foreign Minister, Ribbentrop, was reported to have promised that Germany would send troops to guard Rumania's new frontier with Russia. The Soviet recently obtained the Rumanian Province of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina.

What of the Future?

Many observers saw in today's Balkan developments a sudden German determination that Russia's territorial spread westward had gone far enough and that it must be stopped with force if necessary.

Loss of most of Transylvania undoubtedly was a bitter pill for Carol to swallow, but the offer of German help, if genuine, must have made him breathe a little more easily, for Russia was threatening his government, accusing his troops of causing border incidents and offering reprisals.

Negative Victory

Germany could claim a negative sort of victory in the solution of the Hungarian-Rumanian dispute. At least she had, for the moment at least, kept war from breaking out in the Balkans and menacing her food and raw material supplies from that source.

In the West, however, she had no cause for pleasure. Waves of German aircraft sought to reach London today and failed to penetrate the defences of the great metropolis, being driven off in two great raids.

Following up a night attack in which bombs fell in the extreme outskirts of London the Germans attacked again about noon, sweeping in from two directions in formations of 15 to 20 planes. Anti-aircraft guns hammered them and Fighter planes took after them, breaking up their formations and sending them in headlong flight for the coast and home.

400 Plane Raid Fails

A change of tactics sent a solid wave of about 400 German aircraft over in a second raid, but its success was no greater than the first. London's outer defences stopped it and it, too, had to retire.

Paint Developed Which Makes Planes Invisible

U.S. Army Air Corps Officers Have Been Experimenting With Special Buff Paint

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—Development of a paint which so reduced the visibility of an airplane that it was able to run a gauntlet of searchlights without being detected was reported by United States army air corps officers today.

Commenting on reports from Berlin that the Royal Air Force is using a sooty coating to black out their bombers, the officers disclosed that the United States army had been experimenting for years with various so-called "invisible" paints.

In contrast to the reported British method, the army has been using a special buff paint which absorbs light so that when subjected to the glare of a searchlight it reflects few rays that can be seen by observers.

For daytime use, a two-tone coating is employed, with light blue hues on the underside of the plane to blend with the sky and darker colors on the top to blend with the ground. By that method, the plane's visibility is reduced both to observers above and below.

This system of camouflage is reported to have replaced the method of using a patchwork of various colors to break up the normal outlines on an object and make it more difficult to identify.

Berlin, Aug. 30 (AP)—Something "resembling rough black soot," which is smeared on some British planes and makes them difficult to see at night is giving German chemists something to analyze, informed sources said today.

This new "war paint" absorbs the rays of German searchlights so that on clear nights these British planes which pay nocturnal visits to Germany are hard to detect, it was said.

Canadian Destroyers Escort Australians

Ottawa, Aug. 30 (CP)—The interlocking co-operation of the British Commonwealths in the war is demonstrated by another successful operation of Canadian destroyers, Navy Minister Macdonald said at a press conference today.

"During June it was announced that an exceptionally large contingent of Australian troops had arrived safely in England," the Minister said.

"An example of empire unity and co-operation is provided by the fact that the destroyer escort was composed of H.M.C.S. Fraser. Restigouche, St. Laurent and Skeena."

Cabinet Ministers to Tell Story of Canada's Effort

Will Speak at Simultaneous Luncheons from Halifax to Vancouver

CLUBS NAMED

Ottawa, Aug. 30 (CP)—At least 11 cabinet Ministers will tell the story of Canada's war effort at simultaneous luncheon meetings of service and Canadian clubs from Halifax to Vancouver next Wednesday, it was announced here today by Lt.-Col. James Mess, President of the association of Canadian clubs.

Conservative leader Hanson, three provincial Premiers, a number of Senators and distinguished War Veterans will also take part in the series of 19 patriotic luncheons which will mark the first anniversary of the outbreak of war.

"We have been doing our part too undemonstratively. Let us get demonstrative," said Col. Mess in announcing the arrangements. "We have lots to be proud of. Let us make a noise about it. Let us warm up the fires of patriotism to white heat.

"We are marking not only the end of one year—a dark and gloomy year; we are marking also the start of a second year of war—and the dawn of victory."

The luncheons will also serve to stimulate interest in the National War Loan to be launched soon. "What could be more fitting or better-timed, or of greater aid to the war effort, than this rousing stimulus to the true patriotism of all Canadians?"

Ministers speaking in Ontario follow: Munitions Minister Howe, Toronto Canadian Club; Labor Minister McLarty, Ottawa Canadian Club; Finance Minister Ilsley, Timmins, Kiwanis Club; Revenue Minister Gibson, Hamilton Canadian Club; Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of National War Services, London Canadian Club; Pensions Minister MacKenzie, Windsor Chamber of Commerce.

Among the distinguished war veterans to appear will be Flight Lieut. Wallace Barton, D.F.C., Canadian flyer who was one of the heroes of Dunkirk where he won his Flying Cross and a promotion in rank. He is now an instructor at Camp Borden. He will speak with Mr. Howe at Toronto.

Captain E. A. Baker, blinded in the first Great War will speak at the Sarnia Club.

Former U.S. Minister To Ottawa Favors Sale Of Destroyers to Britain

J. H. R. Cromwell Declares U.S. Can Do More to Assist Empire's Cause as a Benevolent Neutral Than as an Active Participant in Hostilities

Toronto, Aug. 30 (CP)—James H. R. Cromwell, former United States Minister to Canada, today declared his conviction that the United States "can do more to assist the Empire's cause" by remaining a benevolent neutral rather than taking an active part in the war.

Addressing the press day luncheon at the Canadian National Exhibition, Mr. Cromwell coupled this declaration with an expression of opinion that the average American is turning away from isolationism.

The American, he said, "has begun to question the validity of the doctrine that the ruthless destruction of Christian ethics beyond the frontiers of our own great continent is no affair of his."

Mr. Cromwell reiterated his belief that the United States should transfer 60 over-age destroyers to the Royal Navy—or more than the 50 usually mentioned in discussions in this matter—and urged strong co-operation in defensive efforts on the part of Canada and the United States.

He devoted much of his speech to a castigation of "that noisy but ineffectual little group of men with little minds, our professional isolationists," whom he called "trojan jackasses" with "loud and futile brays."

Strongly in Favor of Britain

Sentiment in the United States, he told his Canadian audience, is strongly against participation in the war but at the same time the vast majority is strongly in favor of aiding Britain.

He said he is convinced that the United States should remain a benevolent neutral because "it is obvious that the longer my country remains out of war, the longer time we have to prepare our defences. The stronger our fleet and land forces become, the greater will be our restraining influence on the dictator powers."

"The mists of indifference, of sloth, of propaganda, are vanishing before the sun of truth," he said. "We are, as a nation, swiftly learning where our safety lies, and just how our rights and liberties as a free people are menaced.

"And now that the peril is understood, let the trespasser approach at his own risk, for the giant awakes."

It was Mr. Cromwell's first major speech in Canada since March 19 when he said in Toronto that no citizen of a neutral country could be indifferent to the war in which he believed the allies were fighting for the perpetuation of individual freedom and liberty.

Contention Justified

"You may remember the veritable storm of abuse and contumely which met that speech across the border," he said. "And you all know how completely my contention and my warning to my fellow countrymen has been justified by the course of events.

"Yet despite all that has occurred since May 10 (when Germany invaded Holland and Belgium) we find these same groups continuing their campaign of abuse and calumny against any official who has the courage and abnegation to point out to his people the dangers now so imminent.

"You have witnessed, only recently, the threats, insults and petty sarcasms heaped upon the head of Ambassador Bullitt for his courageous speech delivered at Independence Square in Philadelphia. You have heard one isolationist senator go so far as to term Mr. Bullitt a traitor; the same senator, in fact, who last March accused me of treason."

Sentiment Aroused

Mr. Bullitt has been vindicated, he said, by the vote in the Senate last week in which approval was given to the United States peacetime conscription bill.

"The enactment of the conscription bill shows that in the States public sentiment has been aroused" he said. "My country is aware of the danger which threatens it from abroad . . . and from within."

Without naming him, Mr. Cromwell criticized Col. Charles A. Lindbergh for his recent isolationist speeches, saying:

"But a great aviator, who is far more a credit to his country in the air than on the air, professes to view with equanimity the spectacle of America isolated in a totalitarian world. Now if our aviators are henceforth to assume the raiments of statesmanship and shape our foreign policies, I hope that a course in political economics will be included in the air training curriculum."

R.A.F. Bombers Put Out Lights On Nazi Machines

Mooretown, Ont., Aug. 30 (CP)—Returning from a flight over Norway during May, an R. A. F. bomber piloted by a Canadian, met six German planes. The crew shot down two of the enemy before their own plane went down and spent the night on a rubber raft 90 miles off the coast of Scotland. Picked up by a trawler, they reached port that evening. Next morning they were off in a new plane for another raid.

This is the experience of Flying Officer Roy Buckley, D.F.C., Toronto-trained aviator, whose parents reside here. On active service with the R.A.F. for more than a year, he said in a letter home: "Unless we get in a real good fight with the odds about five to one, we think we are having a dull time. Some of the larger German aircraft have a searchlight mounted on them to enable the pilots to see more clearly where they are shooting. They are intended to blind us when they are flying head-on into us. This they never do because our front guns have a habit of going off with disastrous effect on the lights."

The night raids followed daylight forays on airdromes in Nazi-occupied Holland and on convoys and shipping along the Netherlands coast, it said.

CANADIAN TROOPS IN ICELAND GET THEIR FIRST MAIL

Highland Regiment Gets Out Pipes to Welcome This Event

ALL WELL, HAPPY

Francis Stevens, Canadian newspaperman, was assigned officially to visit Canadian troops in Iceland. This is his first cabled story.

By FRANCIS STEVENS

Reykjavik, Iceland, Aug. 30—(CP)—Glad shouts of Canadian soldiers echoed across the volcanic hills and mountains girding Iceland's fjords today when mail bags arrived heavy with thousands of letters and parcels from home.

To many Canadians serving in this northern outpost it was their first news from home since they arrived here last June. No letters to loved ones ever got a more joyful reception.

One Canadian highland regiment, after letters had been read, got out the bagpipes and let loose with wild music which was in perfect harmony with the wildness of the lava-scarred Icelandic highlands.

Although bagpipes are new to this country the people seem to take to them and Scotch pipers seem very much at home in this land where the scenery is likely the Scottish highlands multiplied gigantically.

Sport Equipment Arrives

Four auxiliary officers arrived with equipment for sports and recreation filling a long-felt want among the Canadian encampments and lightening the burden of Captain Spencer of Morden Man., of the auxiliary service.

The new arrivals are C. B. Burden of the French section, Canadian Legion Services, 15 years coach of the University of New Brunswick football team; Charles Box, of the Western Ontario football team and teacher at Malvern Collegiate, Toronto; Claude Tierney, Ottawa Knights of Columbus, and Fred Howlett, Toronto Salvation Army.

These officers have been assigned to different regiments but they are pooling their services and have furnished the troops with a large quantity of baseball bats, soft balls, soccer balls, gramophones, radios, and volley ball outfits.

The soldiers crave chocolate bars and fruit which are slow in arriving. To provide the necessary vitamin content food in a country where green vegetable supplies are scarce the soldiers are given anti- scorbutic pills to prevent scurvy.

McFARLANE SENT TO TRIAL UPON MURDER CHARGE

Preliminary Hearing Concluded in Case of Robert McFarlane of Frankford

Trenton, Aug. 30.—Robert McFarlane, 21-year-old bridegroom of Frankford and husband of Alice Archer McFarlane was committed for trial on a charge of murder here today by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., after the evidence of two witnesses had been heard. McFarlane, asked by the Magistrate if he had anything to say before sentence was promised, replied in the negative and hung his head. He will appear with his wife, who was recently committed for trial at the October session of the Supreme Court in this city. Both were charged separately with the murder of Gordon Archer, 18-months-old child of Mrs. Alice Archer McFarlane, the child's wire-bound body having been found floating in the Trent River near the C.P.R. bridge on the afternoon of July 25th last.

At today's session of the preliminary hearing, Chief William Bain, who has conducted the investigation and Harry Mondeville, bridgetender, were the only two witnesses heard and their evidence was practically the same as given at the hearing for Mrs. McFarlane. The couple will be confined in custody at the Hastings County Jail until their trial.

9,930,545 Tons of Shipping Imported Into U.K. in 10 Weeks

More Than 32,000 Merchant Ships Escorted in Convoy With Loss of 80 Since War Began, Says Canadian Navy Minister Macdonald

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—(CP)—Continued successful watch and ward of His Majesty's ships, including the 115 ships of the Royal Canadian Navy, over the sea lanes that link the Empire, was illustrated by dry figures presented to a press conference today by Navy Minister Macdonald.

The Minister noted that "over 550 vessels of the British navies are at sea every day". Since the war broke out more than 32,000 merchant ships have been escorted in convoy with a loss of 80.

Great Britain continues to receive food and fighting material dispatched in thousands of tons of shipping, much of it convoyed from Canadian ports by Canadian ships, the Minister said.

During the ten weeks ended August third, total imports to the United Kingdom were 9,930,545 tons of which 2,676,223 tons were food, 2,880,022 tons oil, and 2,212,716 minerals.

Up to August 17 he pointed out, enemy mercantile losses totalled 1,212,000 tons, British total shipping losses were 1,348,565 tons.

Merchant vessels to the number of 179 totalling 1,300,000 tons are under construction in the United Kingdom alone.

The total allied merchant marine tonnage, he said, is between six and seven millions, exclusive of 800,000 tons of Danish and French shipping, and 750,000 tons of neutral shipping in Allied service.

LONDON'S 3RD AIR RAID WARNING OF DAY SOUNDED

Waves of Nazi Aircraft Roar Over England Toward Capital

MANY DOG FIGHTS

Total of 22 German Planes Shot Down During Day Says Ministry

By PAT USSHER

London, Aug. 30—(CP Cable) — London's third air raid warning of the day sounded late this afternoon as waves of Nazi aircraft roared over southeast England—the United Kingdom's air front line—in a series of thrusts at the metropolitan area.

Fighters engaged hostile planes over the London area in the third raid. Dogfights developed and bombs were dropped. The sound of enemy machines and the faint thud of bombs were audible in the centre of the capital.

Unofficial reports said six bombers were brought down in the third raid alone, apparently while attempting to locate and bomb a factory.

In earlier tries to break through London's defences, the Germans lost 19 bombers. Thus, the total cost of today's smash at the capital was, unofficially, at least, 25.

A formation of 20 bombers flying at great height was broken up by a swarm of British fighters during the hour-long raid. One was sent spinning to death with smoke pouring from its tail and two others were forced from the formation and flew from sight with fighters following close behind.

The Luftwaffe's bombers unloaded their bombs in earlier attack aimed at airdromes in the vicinity of the metropolis and the home counties. The sky battles were fought at tremendous heights both morning and afternoon over various parts of the southeastern front line.

The thud of bombs was heard in suburban sections during the first raid. The second, lasting less then 20 minutes, sounded when the raiders again approached the capital. Fighters intercepted and chased them off.

VINCENT MASSEY VISITS HOSPITAL AS BOMBS DROP

Canadian High Commissioner Given Realistic Demonstration by Hospital Staff

MRS. MASSEY PRESENT

(By Edwin Johnson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in Southern England, Aug. 30—(CP Cable) — Nazi air raiders droned high overhead and bombs crashed in the distance today while Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, and Mrs. Massey were paying a call to No. 15 Canadian General Hospital from Toronto.

The high commissioner had just inspected a guard of honor and was chatting with a group of bedridden soldiers when the alarm sounded. The emergency organization promptly went into action and gave the distinguished visitors a realistic demonstration of what the efficient hospital staff does when the raiders come.

Doctors, nurses and orderlies, wearing steel helmets and their gas masks at the alert, rushed to action stations. Bed patients were quickly marshalled into special splinter-proof wards while walking patients, in blue hospital garb, were herded into nearby shelters. Off-duty nurses filed into shelters of their own.

Planes Speed Off

The hostile planes hovered momentarily above the huge red cross marking the hospital site and then sped off. They dropped bombs several miles away.

While the raid was on Mr. and Mrs. Massey continued to tour the hospital, accompanied by Col. C. A. Rae, the commanding officer, Lt.-Col. I. Urquhart, Major R. M. Wansbrough, Matron Agnes Neill and her assistant, Mary Shaffner, all from Toronto.

The visitors called at every ward, shaking the men's hands and wishing them a quick recovery.

They halted several minutes at the bedside of two chums, Privates O. W. Chester, of Sinclair, Man., and D. Eby, of Winnipeg who were injured a few days ago while working in the field. Abed nearby lay Lance Corporal Paul Lord of Hamilton, Ont., with his steel helmet propped on his forehead. Jokingly he remarked to Mrs. Massey that they looked forward to the raid warnings.

"If Jerry didn't come over once in a while we'd hardly know there was a war on," he said.

Yanks Creep Closer to Top Of American Loop by Beating St. Louis in Doubleheader

Score All Ten Runs Obtained in First Game in One Frame and Win Second in Thirteenth

TIGERS WIN TWO

Detroit Only Two Games Behind Cleveland, Who Were Idle Due to Rain

By JUDSON BAILEY

There is something catching about the spirit of the New York Yankees.

They've already captured the imagination of fans everywhere with the magnificent drive that has bagged 10 victories in their last 11 games and they're liable to catch Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers if the latter clubs don't watch out.

The Yankees polished off St. Louis Browns 10-3 and 6-5 in a doubleheader yesterday to show once more why they have been world champions for four years.

They reeled off 10 runs in one merry-go-round inning to overwhelm the groggy Browns in the first game and then in the second fracas rallied three times to emerge triumphant in the 13th.

With two out and two on in the ninth inning, Joe Dimaggio hit a pinch homer to tie the score. George McQuinn put the Browns' back in front with a home run in the 11th, but again the Yanks deadlocked the count. Finally in the 13th with two out and the bases loaded, Frank Crosetti caught the Brownies napping with a perfect bunt to squeeze the winning run home.

Detroit Tigers mowed down Washington Senators in a doubleheader 3-2 and 6-0 to advance within two games of the idle league leading Cincinnati Reds.

Schoolboy Rowe doubled the deciding run across in the first game for his 12th victory. Buck Newsom notched his 17th in the nightcap, abbreviated to six innings by darkness. Hank Greenberg helped out with a homer in each game, bringing his total to 26 for the year.

In the only other game in the American League Boston Red Sox were handed a 4-3 decision over Chicago by Johnny Rigney, who walked Joe Cronin with the bases loaded in the ninth inning.

Dodgers Helpless

In the National League the leading Cincinnati Reds beat Brooklyn Dodgers 9-3 in a rain-drenched ball game. The Dodgers were helpless before the seven-hit hurling of Paul Derringer, bagging his 17th victory. This boosted the Reds 8 1-2 games in front. St. Louis Cardinals obtained exclusive possession of third place by shutting out New York Giants 5-0 with Fiddler Bill McGee pitching two-hit ball. Pittsburgh Pirates extended their winning string to eight straight by shutting out the Phillies 4-0 behind Mace Brown's effective pitching. Sailor Bill Posedel shanghaied Chicago Cubs with five-hit pitching to give Boston Bees a 3-1 triumph.

Green Bay Packers Defeat College Boys

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP)—Now the College boys know only too well why the Green Bay Packers and their unexcelled end, fleet Don Hutson, are the scourge of the National Football League.

The Packers put on one of the most sparkling exhibitions of passing in the history of football, pro or amateur, whipping the All-Stars, 45 to 28, in the seventh game of this series. The victory gave the pros a three to two edge. Two games were ties.

The Packers scored twice in each of the first two periods, again in the third and added another touchdown and a 34-yard field goal by Ernie Smith in the final period.

The Collegians, with Iowa's Nile Kinnick, No. 1 player of the 1939 season, and Ambrose Schindler of Southern California, playing sensationally, scored a touchdown in the first period, two in the second and another in the fourth.

Schindler registered two of them to lead the All-Stars in point scoring. The other Collegians to register were Kenny Washington, negro star of U.C.L.A., and Banks McFadden of Clemson.

The professionals went into the air to score five of their six touchdowns. Hutson, former Alabama star end, snagged three touchdown aerials.

HIS 69 IS TOPS

Dick Metz of Oak Park, Ill., who shot a low 69 to take the first qualifying round of the P.G.A. tourney at Hershey, Pa., is shown lining the ball with the 18th hole before sinking it home. Metz's score was four under par.

GENE SARAZEN STILL A GOLFER

Veteran of Game Eliminates Defending Champion in P.G.A. Tourney

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 30—(AP)—Gene Sarazen keeps rolling along and today a handful of comparative youngsters still in the running for the 1940 professional golf championship found the veteran campaigner squarely in their path.

Sarazen didn't reach these quarter-finals by a fluke. He shot one of the greatest match rounds of his career to knock out defending champion Henry Picard yesterday.

There were perhaps more gallery goings-on around Sarazen's nearest rival, Walter Hagen, but the Haig lost and thus ended the hopes of many that these two would defy Father Time, get to Saturday's semi-finals and meet once more.

It was the young fellows with thick wrists and strong legs who survived the third round, 36-hole matches, by and large Byron Nelson knocked out Dick Metz, the medalist, 2 and 1; Eddie Kirk conquered Art Clark, 5 and 4; Ben Hogan whipped Al Brosch, 5 and 4; Ralph Guldahl pushed aside Jim Foulis, 5 and 3; Sammy Snead, Canadian open champion, had a breeze with Jimmy Hines, 7 and 6; and Paul Runyan disposed of Ed Dudley, 4 and 3. Hagen bowed to Harold (Jug) McSpaden, 1 up.

Picard was three down with only three holes to go when he turned on the best golf he knew and closed out with three successive birdies, but the last hole broke his heart. Picard was only two feet away and Sarazen was seven feet off the pin.

Sarazen grinned a bit and without apparently trying rapped the putt down for a deuce and the match.

RYBA WINS 21ST GAME OF SEASON BEATING BISONS

First International League Hurler to Pass 20 Mark This Season

TORONTO WINS

Les McCrabbe Hurls Three-Hitter and Does Not Issue Walk in Defeating Royals 2 to 1

(By the Associated Press)

Rochester's Mike Ryba, who at one time or another has played in every position on the team, seems to have finally blossomed into a first-class pitcher, where he'll probably stay.

Ryba last night won his 21st game of the season by whipping Buffalo Bisons 4-3. He is the first International League pitcher to get past the 20 mark this season.

Ryba gave only one hit in the last seven innings though Buffalo collected nine earlier and scored all its runs in the sixth when three errors by Lynn Meyers allowed two unearned counters. Ryba didn't issue a single pass and fanned 11.

In the only other game of the night, Les McCrabb of Toronto Leafs pitched a better game than Ryba did—but got credit for only his eighth victory of the season, a 2-1 win over Montreal Royals. It was his first win of the season over the Royals who had beaten him in three previous tries.

He limited Montreal to three hits and didn't issue a walk in the series opener.

Leafs scored two runs off Bill Crouch in the first inning and although the tall righthander held the home team to a pair of hits from then on, the damage had been done. Singles by Clifton, Tyler and Latshaw and a double steal provided the winning runs.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 30.—(AP)—Walter Hagen is still the top spender among the pros. Picked up $177 worth of checks, not counting tips, during the first four nights at Hershey. Jimmy Demaret was second with close to $100. . . Two rich Jersey Irishmen, interested in young Pat Comiskey, are Jack Kearns' Angels in his new fistic venture.

This one just leaked out . . . while trying to pick a successor to coach Jess Neely, the Clemson Athletic Council called in line Coach Frank Howard . . . when the questions had been answered satisfactorily a member motioned: "I move Frank Howard be appointed head coach" . . . dazed and befuddled and with no intention of being funny. Howard piped up: "I second the motion" . . . P.S.: He got the job.

If the Max Baer-Pat Comiskey bout goes through, Comiskey will call off his September 16 bout with Arne Anderson at St. Paul . . . Watch for a mad scramble for the N.B.A. presidency at Milwaukee next month. Usually the Vice-P is moved up automatically, but this year the field is wide open. Here's a vote for Ed Foster of Providence.

Joe DiMaggio and Frank Crosetti, Yankees — DiMaggio pinch-homered with two on in ninth inning of nightcap to tie score, and Crosetti laid down squeeze bunt with bases loaded in 13th to win game.

Jockey Frankie Mann Rides 75th Winner

Montreal, Aug. 30—(CP)—After three years out of the saddle Frankie Mann is pushing his comeback streak to new heights over the Montreal Jockey Club's Blue Bonnets track here.

Mann has been consistently top rider on Quebec circuits all season but he appears to be going better than ever at Blue Bonnets. He brought in four winners yesterday, running his firsts at Blue Bonnets to 14 in five days of racing at the current meet. That brought his number of winners on Quebec tracks to 75 so far this season.

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

It seems to be the general concensus of opinion around town that Johnnie Bawden will have to duplicate his pitching feat of Wednesday night against the "Tanners" again this evening if the "Oilers" can expect to emerge victorious. However, there is another phase to the picture—a little matter of concerted hitting by the entire Shell team. True enough the Oilers outhit the Tanners eight to six in their last meeting, but Kingston out-hit our boys 11 to 6 in Kingston, and it is seldom a team scores runs without registering hits. Wednesday night's game was one of the best defensively played games of the year, each nine committing but one miscue despite the fact the ball was wet and slippery at times. Tabby Gow's "Tanners" have only booted the spheriod for three errors in two games, which is below average and we would not be at all surprised if the fans see a little looser softball when the two nines meet at the Flats this evening. Kingston won the initial contest of the series handily and it's a case of victory for the Belleville boys tonight, or the moth balls.

One of the members of the Oshawa Westmounts junior softballers approached us prior to Tuesday night's Oshawa at Belleville O.A.S.A. game and stated that Ralph "High-Pockets" McCabe, former Belleville pitcher now with East Malartic, Que., had been tendered a contract by the Detroit Tigers for 1941. However, this corner learns, that it was Bob Shawkey, scout for the Yankees, who offered McCabe a Newark trial contract. Incidentally the baseball folk in Oshawa are interested in McCabe's diamond efforts, as he hurled for the Motor City juniors after being rejected locally. Where there is so much talk of McCabe being tendered a professional contract it would naturally lead one to believe there is more truth than rumor to the matter. Ralph McCabe has the proper size for a pitcher and is only about 21 years of age, which is another thing in his favor.

Jackie Bodner, Brooklyn's 16-year-old bat boy, often is approached by autograph-seekers, and he doesn't mind accommodating them. However, Jackie is annoyed by the disappointed look that follows when he signs their scorecards.

"Aw, nuts," said Bodner. "Kids and dames keep coming up to me and begging. "Won't you sign my card, Mr. Pewee?"

They take Jackie for Pewee Reese, the Dodgers' crack shortstop find.

Ken Strong, former major and minor league outfielder who has been in a New York hospital for four weeks following an emergency stomach operation, was discharged last week and plans to return as backfield coach of the New York Giants in the National Professional Football League this fall.

Lawn bowlers from Toronto to Brockville will be the guests of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club for the playing of the annual district open men's trebles on Labor Day, games chairman Cliff Argue informed us today. Two handsome trophies, besides an abundance of individual prizes will be won during this tourney. To the primary winner of the tournament goes the handsome Corbin Trophy, while the Ackerman Cup goes to the consolation winners. The play will be a straight knock-out draw of 12 ends and a full day of keen lawn bowling can be enjoyed by the public, as well as competing lawn bowlers.

Do you remember when: Tommy Farr, the talkative Welshman from Tonypandy, stunned the boxing world by staying 15 rounds with heavyweight champion Joe Louis at New York, three years ago tonight. The negro titleholder had no difficulty in winning but he failed to score a knockout as experts had expected.

Just about when Bubby Gaulin and his Cementmen were of the opinion that they had gained sweet revenge and would dispose of Wooler in the O.A.S.A. playdowns this year, things began to happen and before the dust had settled Wooler walked off the diamond at Trenton with an 8 to 7 win over the Ox-Point boys last night forcing a third game at Trenton Saturday. The Cementmen were leading 7-3 in the eighth, when suddenly the Wooler team broke out in a batting rampage, that saw them whack Ding Luffman for five hits and five runs to take over the situation. Jim Stacey then took care of matters as he halted the Cementmen in the ninth. A couple of errors were interspersed with the Wooler five-hit attack in the eighth, all of which goes to make up softball. Last year Wooler eliminated Point Anne, but the Ox Point nine are vowing vengeance today and are after the Wooler scalps Saturday. If Luffman and Steacy are at top form the game should be well worth attending Sport Hash — Oshawa drew first blood in their intermediate O.A.S.A. play-off with Peterboro yesterday, beating the Petes 8-6 right in the Liftlock City, which may have prompted Pete McGillen to call for the help of his policeman kinfolk. They may be playing a lower class of ball in the American League this year, but they've got the big baseball attraction, as we see there's only 8 1-2 games separating the first five clubs....Detroit and the Yankees each gained full game on the idle Indians yesterday by taking doubleheaders from the Senators and the Browns respectively....Joe DiMaggio was the hero in the second game as he delivered a pinch home run to tie the score in the ninth....It was his 28th circuit blow of the season....Perhaps the Kingston scribe realizes the differences between the surface of a Keninsky softball and those of other make now....With Rowe and Dean having recovered pitching prowess in the minors, the latest news is that "Two-no-hitter Johnny" Vander Meer, of the Reds, is ready to return and take his place on the Cincinnati mound any day now....Apparently the minors have what it takes in the matter of the rejuvenation of pitchers... And so to the Flats for the big Tanner-Oiler struggle.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Hitler—Beast of Berlin"

One of the most daring pictures ever produced, "Hitler—Beast of Berlin" is the feature presentation now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

According to Manager Vince Freeman of the McCarthy Theatre, the picture can best be described as an eloquent pictorial drama of courageous humanity struggling under the iron heel of Hitler's Nazi despotism. The action of the entire picture takes place in Germany and describes frankly and forcefully, what is transpiring in the minds, hearts and homes of the German people.

"Hitler—Beast of Berlin" was adapted from Shepard Traube's story "Goose Step" the most believable story ever written about the German folk not in sympathy with the Hitler regime.

Roland Drew, Steffi Duna, Greta Granstedt, Allan Ladd and Lucien Prival share top roles in a cast of over thirty internationally famous players.

An excellent laugh loaded comedy Buster Keaton in "Taming of the Snood" also an amusing cartoon "Millionaire Hobo" and "Tomorrow's Stars" a baseball sport-subject, precede the showings of "Hitler—Beast of Berlin" at each performance.

"He Stayed For Breakfast"

Acclaimed as one of the best comedies ever made, "He stayed for Breakfast" co-starring Loretta Young and Douglas, will have its Dominion of Canada, premiere showing at the McCarthy Theatre next week, starting with a midnight show, after Sunday. It is greater than "It Happened One Night" or "The Awful Truth" and other masterpieces of mirth which have made screen history. Do not miss "He Stayed for Breakfast."

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Farmer's Daughter"

There are cut-ups in the clover and thespians in the pasture in Paramount's gay comedy of the straw-hat theatre, "The Farmer's Daughter," comes to the Capitol Theatre with a preview performance after Sunday midnight.

An all-star laugh cast headed by Martha Raye and Charlie Ruggles features this story of summer dramatic stars on a rural romp.

The plot deals with the tribulations and woes of Charlie Ruggles, a producer, who takes his caravan of temperamental, players to the suburbs. He is obliging his backer who wants a chance to escape from the super - temperamental star. Complications arise when the leading man falls in love with the farmer's daughter, and a solution is reached when the star abdicates, leaving the road to stardom open for the farm lass.

Directed by James Hogan, the picture features Richard Denning, William Frawley and Gertrude Michael in leading roles.

Martha Raye's dramatic and comedy performance is highlighted by her versatile singing of two contrasting musical numbers, "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair," and a new hit swing tune, "Jungle Jingle," and on the same programme another extra special attraction

"The Man Who Talked Too Much"

"The Man Who Talked Too Much," one of filmdom's most thrilling exposes of illegal law practices will be on view.

Starring George Brent and Virginia Bruce, the new motion picture combines romance with drama dealing with a suave young lawyer who takes the easiest way of making money only to learn that the honor and love of a beautiful woman are infinitely more important. The unusually fine supporting cast includes Richard Barthelmess, Brenda Marshall, William Lundigan and George Tobias. Vincent Sherman, new studio find of "Saturday's Children," fame, directed "The Man Who Talked Too Much."

"The Carson City Kid"

A big western featuring Roy Rogers in "The Carson City Kid," is now playing at the Capitol. Such stars as "Gabby" George Hayes, Bob Steele and Noah Berry, Jr., support Rogers. "Parole Racket," the added thrill feature stars Paul Kelly.

AT THE BELLE

"Andy Hardy Meets Debutante"

"Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" brings Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney and the rest of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's popular Hardy family, with Judy Garland as "guest star next at the Belle theatre and after Sunday Midnight beginning the 3rd anniversary picture an adventure that promises to top all the previous chapters in the saga of this typically American family.

Glamorous Manhattan Island provides the background for a story that mingles laughs and thrills, tense drama and poignant human interest, the swank of a socialite coming-out party and the inspiration of American idealism. The picture starts in Carvel with Mickey Rooney in his familiar character of Andy Hardy, falling in love with magazine photographs of a New York debutante. He is taunted on his onesided romance by his high-school sweetheart, Ann Rutherford, and protects himself by boasting that he knows the debutante. Judge Hardy, played by Lewis Stone, is called suddenly to New York to defend the Carvel Orphanage against financial machinations and he takes the family with him. Thus Andy is faced with the necessity of making good on his boast that he is a friend of the debutante.

The Judge Almost Loses

How he manages to make the acquaintance of the debutante provides a score of hilarious situations. Judge Hardy meanwhile, almost loses his case until "Ma" Hardy supplies him with a clever legal stratagem. Another highlight is a visit by Andy Hardy and the Judge to New York University Hall of Fame where the Judge proves to Andy that true American ideals are better than any ambitions to be a cafe society notable.

With Stone and Mickey are the rest of the family, Fay Holden, Sara Haden and Cecilia Parker, while Judy Garland makes her second appearance in the series as little Betsy Booth, the New York girl who is an avowed admirer of the energetic Andy. She sings two melodious songs in the picture and comes to Andy's rescue by introducing him to the debutante when all seems lost. Diana Lewis, who appeared last with Eddie Cantor in "Forty Little Mothers" plays the glamorous debutante, and George Breakston again appears as Beesy, Andy's school chum.

Assuring the new film the human, down-to-earth flavor that characterises the Hardy family series, is the fact that George B. Seitz, who has piloted all but one of the pictures, again directed.

A comicolor cartoon, "Tom Turkey," the popular Belle Newsreel and "Night Descends on Treasure Island" a beautiful Fitzpatrick traveltalk in technicolor will be exhibited on the same program.

Two Hits

Linda Darnell lives up to the title of "Hollywood's loveliest and most exciting star" in "Star Dust," her new 20th Century-Fox stellar vehicle which is now at the Belle theatre.

The raven-tressed beauty gives a grand performance in a grand picture—a story so thrilling and real that it might well have been a chapter out of her own meteroic rise to stardom.

John Payne, Roland Young and Charlotte Greenwood score at the top of her supporting cast, while others who do excellent work are William Gargan, Mary Beth Hughes, Mary Healy and Donald Meek.

Jane Withers' Latest

Combining drama with hilarious comedy, "Girl From Avenue A," the entertainment-packed 20th Century-Fox film starring Jane Withers is announced as the companion feature attraction. It is Jane's most pretentious picture, giving her lots of room to display her varied talents and providing her strongest supporting cast to date. Kent Taylor, Katharine Aldridge, Elyse Knox, Laura Hope Crews and many others are featured.

"The Fighters" is the title of the next adventure of the newsreel cameraman series to be presented on the same program.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were starting to eat supper, being chicken frickasee with dumplings and looking swell and smelling as if it would taste even better, and ma said, I'm so hungry I just know I'm going to injoy this to the extent of countless callories, just when I'm suppose to be watching my weight. My, how I dread it, but what am I going to do when Nora fixes up a platter like this? she said.

I dont know of anything that could spoil my appetite for it either pop said. Well, there's nothing to be done about it, the old waistline will have to take another beating, he said.

Not sounding quite as sad as ma about it, and I thought, G, I bet I could take their appetites off the subject.

And I said, May pop, hay ma, Is it true that dogs perspire all in one place just by sticking out their tongue?

Bring that up some other time, pop said, and ma said, My goodness yes, this is no time and no place.

And we kept on eating the chicken and dumplings a while, and I said, Well here's one thing I do know, tripe is made out of cows stummicks and yet millions of people eat it and enjoy it as if they didn't give a darn.

Are you itching for an invitation to leave the table? ma said. Because if so I'll see that your father extends it to you, she said, and pop said, And most cordially, I assure you.

Well anyways, maybe that's enough, I said. You both said you didn't want to eat too much chicken and dumplings, but there's no use spoiling your appetites all aways so you wont even eat enough, I said, and pop said, Yee gods, eat your dinner.

And mind your own business, ma said.

Proving people dont always want to be helped no matter what they claim.

Laurence Olivier And Vivien Leigh Wed in California

Santa Barbara, Calif., Aug. 30—(AP)—Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh of the films were married early today.

The ceremony was conducted by Municipal Judge Fred Harsh at San Ysidro ranch, resort popular with motion picture celebrities, in suburban Montecito.

The couple left by motor for an announced destination in northern California.

Olivier and Miss Leigh, British film figures who have attained prominence on the American screen recently were divorced in London by their former spouses.

Miss Leigh, best known for her role of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind," was divorced by Herbert Leigh Holman, London barrister, who named Olivier as co-respondent.

Olivier was divorced by his actress-wife, Jill Esmond, who named Miss Leigh as co-respondent. Olivier has starred in "Wuthering Heights," "Rebecca," and "Pride and Prejudice."

German Coastal Ship Stopped Thrice by Japs

Shanghai, Aug. 30.— (CP)—The 1,040-ton German coastal steamship Hanna, with some 20 missionaries aboard, including Americans, returned to Shanghai today after having been stopped three times by Japanese warships in trying to reach the Port of Kuaotao, south of Chekiang. Japanese officials admitted Kuaotao was outside the "forbidden zone" which they are blockading to keep supplies from China, but insisted it would be dangerous for the Hanna to enter the port.

FIRM RESISTANCE

northwest, including Manchester.

The attack on the northwest, one of the heaviest of the war, was coupled with others on the southeast the midlands and south Wales. Many persons were killed and injured in these forays.

Of the 19 Germans known shot down in the try against London, at least six bombers were shot down in a single battle over the southeastern area.

The Air Ministry communique announcing the results of the morning raid was issued from the Ministry of Information's special deep shelter press room during the second raid.

Some bombs were reported dropped in the outskirts of the London area and the drone of planes was heard in one London district. The city's first air raid alarm sounded shortly after noon (8 a.m. EDT) but was lifted about an hour later without the appearance of any raiders over London proper.

Dog fights, however, still were going on between a few German planes which remained, and fresh patrols of British fighters which were circling over the sea.

Some bombs were reported dropped on the outskirts of the London area.

The drone of planes was heard in one London district. Anti-aircraft guns were active and the chatter of machine guns could be heard high in the sky.

Bombs were dropped in southeastern England, while Nazi raiders also were reported over two towns in the industrial midlands.

Some of the heaviest fighting during the half hour before London's first raid in more than 30 hours was reported over the southeast, but fighting took place at such great altitude it was impossible for ground observers to follow its progress.

At times as many as half a dozen dog fights were going on 25,000 and 30,000 feet up in a cloudless sky.

Three Raids in Night

The southeast coastal area had three raids during the night, but the only definite damage reported was a seaside entertainment hall set on fire. An Associated Press correspondent on the southwest coast reported one raider there was believed to have been downed by anti-aircraft fire. Yesterday's official toll was nine German planes and three British craft shot down.

About 20 high explosive and incendiary bombs fell on a northeast coast town, trapping a family of three in the ruins of their house. A rescue squad got out the parents and continued to search for their son. The bombs fell in a residential area, leaving a numbers of persons homeless.

Elsewhere in the northeast German planes dropped flares, and in rural districts a number of water mains were shattered.

Innovation Introduced

London's "stand-by" warning was an innovation introduced in order that factory work need not be halted each time a single German bomber or a few approaching raiders are reported. In the future, a "purple" light warning in munitions and other plants, as well as hospitals and public service stations, will indicate Nazi warplanes are near, to be followed by the "red" signal equivalent to the sounding of sirens.

The London press, while acknowledging the "unavoidable risks" entailed by the new policy, approved. Newspapers pointed out that sounding the sirens for only a few raiders interfered with Britain's war effort and cited a government statement that "everyone is in the front line at this time" and "must be prepared as a citizen's duty to take a risk."

Guns War Into Action

Anti-aircraft guns gave the raiders their first hot reception and seemed to have found the range, for they continued firing for several minutes before R.A.F. Spitfires and Hurricanes raced into action.

During the first 15 minutes of the London alarm there was no sound of plane motors. Traffic continued and was, if anything, heavier than normal.

Friday is London's traditional pay day, and banks were crowded. A few people took to air raid shelters, but most stood in doorways looking at the sky.

A few moments before the sirens sounded ambulances raced down the streets to take up their posts as usual during a preliminary warning.

One group of three German planes appeared to have turned back toward the coast after fighters dived on them.

The raiders took full advantage of any wisps of clouds there were.

Three raiders which tried to take cover were followed by one Spitfire fighter while two more waited outside. As soon as the three came out the two Spitfires attacked them and the Germans headed for the coast.

A "Breathing Spell"

Today's daylight attacks followed a night and early morning in which Britain had a relative "breathing spell." The most severe pre-dawn attacks were reported in northwest England.

There were two known dead in a London residential section, where two scream bombs fell. There were at least three killed in an inland town in the northwest.

The British capital came through the night with only a "stand-by" warning. The air raid sirens were silent; anti-aircraft guns, except for those in one suburb, held their fire, and millions of Londoners had their first good night's sleep in nearly a week.

Bombs Dropped at Random

The British Press Association said the raiders which flew repeatedly over a northwest England town "dropped their bombs at random, and some fell near a railway station." Incendiary bombs fell on one of the town's principal streets, and there was some damage to "houses and commercial property," a communique stated.

The communique said the Nazi planes dropped an unusually heavy proportion of incendiary bombs in attacks which also struck at northeast England, the industrial midlands and South Wales, but which took a "small" toll of casualties throughout the country.

The resident of one London suburban district said he was awakened by a "terrific explosion." He added, "everything seemed to sway as if in an earthquake."

"A lone raider had dropped its bomb and bolted," he said "Two houses were demolished, and other houses over a large area suffered some damage from the blast, which left a large crater."

At least five persons were killed during attack on one northeastern town. A few others were reported injured severely.

A number of the casualties were caused when one of the raiders, apparently hard hit, jettisoned its bombs on a large housing development, all but demolishing three houses and badly damaging several others on three roads.

In another northwestern area, some 30 incendiary bombs fell around an isolation hospital.

Smothered With Blanket

One fell through the roof of a ward from which all except two patients had been removed to a shelter. One was a convalescent sailor who smothered the bomb with blankets.

A matron in the hospital, where there are some 40 patients, said that except for the hole in the roof "there was no damage." The hospital lies some distance from the nearest town and is surrounded by fields.

One or two persons were killed and some 30 injured during a night raid of several hours over a northwest coastal district.

One report said the district was "plastered with high explosive and incendiary bombs." Several fires were started, but damage, including fires in two warehouses, was said to be comparatively slight.

A children's hospital was hit. Heavy anti-aircraft fire met planes which swept low in successive attacks.

Slight damage to scattered bits of property was reported from Wales where the crash of bombs frightened an elderly woman, she died of shock.

Trapped in Air Shelter

A man was killed and his brother injured in a northeastern town which was struck by 16 high explosive and a number of incendiary bombs.

In a northeast coastal town, a number of persons were trapped in an air raid shelter under a fish shop in a working class district. A bomb scored a direct hit on the shop.

Rescue workers reported they could hear voices shouting to them from deep down beneath a great pile of rubble.

In a northwest country district, there were believed to be several casualties when a bomb burst near a public air raid shelter, which collapsed.

In the hardest-hit northwest coast area a number of people in a working class district were trapped under the debris of shattered dwellings.

The only German plane definitely reported downed during the pre-dawn hours was a junkers bomber which crashed on a village green in southeast England. One airman was killed and three others were injured.

One northeast coast town reported that about 27 large high explosive bombs and 1000 incendiary bombs were dropped in two raids over that area.

Most of the incendiaries were reported to have fallen in the open country.

PAID ADMISSIONS

a fair that promises to compare favorably with those of former years.

"These are difficult times, Mayor Glen Thompson pointed out in his address at the formal opening of the fair yesterday, and "it is up to each and all of us to do what we can to help with the successful prosecution of the war."

Increased Production

Mr. James Telfer, in his address to the junior farmers and girls last night, urged that they forget monetary matters and bend all efforts towards increased production. "It is better that we get nothing at all for our efforts," he said, "than to surrender our liberty, freedom and homes to the enemy."

The Fair Board appeals to citizens to keep these points in mind. The annual exhibition is an institution to Belleville and Hastings County and will be greatly instrumental in encouraging the rural population in the breeding of better livestock and increased agricultural production that is so necessary in these dark days of the Empire.

Aid in War Effort

By patronizing the Fair they pointed out, the general public will indirectly be aiding the Dominion in its war effort. For from the rural granaries of Canada come the supplies that are the Empire's lifelines, and if these granaries are depleted then the battle will be that much harder. Encouragement of agriculture is the battle-cry of the home defences for it is one of their bulwarks. And urban and rural residents as well can show their appreciation of the splendid work being done by producers of agricultural products by attending the Fair.

MILITARY ROAD

He stated he believed the matter had been discussed at the Ogdensburg, N.Y., meeting between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt and that it was also on the agenda of the Defence Board considerations.

Before Mr. Roosevelt went to Ogdensburg, Mr. Dimond sent him a telegram reminding him of the importance of the highway in North American defence.

A reliable official source said "it is reasonable to assume" that the highway plan is among the questions before the Defence Board, although east coast defence would likely be considered before any west coast program.

The cost has been a stumbling block so far. It has been estimated by different authorities here at anywhere from $15,000,000 to about $125,000,000. Mr. Dimond said cost would not exceed $25,000,000 and the highway could be completed in 18 months, and possibly in a year.

Reasons Given For Road

The Alaskan representative has been in Congress since 1932 and has lived in Alaska most of his life, working as a prospector and practising law.

He said that if the United States fleet was forced to move from the Pacific to the Atlantic it would leave Alaska totally undefended and "with Alaska in possession of an enemy the United States is in jeopardy."

"In my opinion the building of this road in order to ensure the continuous supply of our military posts and bases in Alaska is not only of great but of outstanding importance," he added.

"I think it is absolutely vital to start the construction of the road right away and to rush it to completion. Otherwise we may some day find ourselves with some perfectly good defence works, by the way of air bases, in Alaska, but without adequate means of supplying them.

Confidence in Canada

Mr. Dimond declared he had every confidence in the Canadian spirit of cooperation on this matter for it means, he said, as much to the defence of Canada as it does to the defence of the United States.

"The dense population and the great wealth concentrated on our eastern seaboard will almost inevitably act as a magnet to draw the fleet to the Atlantic in the case of serious trouble," he said.

"I ask how the military and naval forces and the civilian population in Alaska are to be supplied unless we build, and build immediately, the highway to Alaska?"

WALLACE FEARS

'Symbol of Democracy'

"These appeasers will have their way if the Republicans win, because they have contributed largely, both politically and financially to the Republican cause. These people believe the Republicans in power would give them profitable business with a German-controlled Europe at the earliest possible moment."

Wallace was applauded when he expressed belief that the American people would not "turn their backs on the man that Hitler wants to see defeated."

President Roosevelt has become "the symbol of Democracy" particularly to the nations of North and South America, he said.

"Hitler must not be permitted to break the solidarity of the Americas," he continued. "If the Americas present to the Axis powers the same divided front as the democracies of Europe presented to them, we shall assuredly walk the same path of destruction and lost freedom."

Charges Designs by Dictaters Against U. S.

The nominee charged the "dictators have definite designs against this hemisphere" and said, "they hope to get rid of the unyielding Roosevelt" in the coming election.

"They know that a political campaign is distracting to our people," he added, "and they know that in the many months that would elapse before a new administration could act effectively, they might have their chance."

He termed the present conflict "a war to destroy freedom and democracy."

"It is a war to prevent the people of North and South America from developing their resources without paying tribute to Europe and without being victims of European secret police serving a self-appointed master race."

AXIS ARBITRATION

mixed Hungarian - Rumanian commission.

45 Per Cent of Transylvania

The territory gained by Hungary is about 45 per cent of the entire province which many Hungarians had hoped to get.

The ceded area takes in the northern half of Transylvania and is in the shape of a horse's head with the nose extended on a line along the old pre-war eastern Hungarian frontier.

Threat of an immediate Soviet invasion as a consequence of a Hungarian attack backed by the Axis forced the early morning capitulation to the four-power conference at Vienna where Rumania reportedly was told German motorized columns were ready to move at a moment's notice if the demand for a part of Transylvania was ignored.

Rumania Given Sharp Warning

An authoritative account of the all-night palace conferences in which telephone contact was maintained with Vienna and leaders consulted with King Carol, said that at one stage Rumania was told she must make her decision within five minutes.

At 12:14 a.m., this story said, Foreign Minister Manoilescu, with German Minister Ribbentrop of Germany sitting beside him, telephoned that he had been given five minutes in which to get a definite acceptance of the Vienna plan from Bucharest.

If the five minutes passed without Rumanian official approval, Ribbentrop was reported as having said, Rumania might face immediate invasion by Russia on one side, and Hungary, backed by the German motorized columns and air force, on the other.

The Rumanian General Staff was reported to have advised the government to accept the Axis award at Vienna on the ground that the Rumanian army would be helpless to protect the country against possible Russian, Hungarian and Bulgarian attacks especially if these were backed by the strong airfleets of Germany and Italy.

Besides pressure from Hungary and Bulgaria, informed circles saw indications that Soviet Russia was prepared to take advantage of any Rumanian preoccupation on these frontiers by entering Southern Bucovina from the north and Moldavia from the east.

The Russian News Agency Tass made public a note disclaiming Soviet responsibility for border clashes in Southern Bucovina, warning Rumania of the "consequences" if such clashes continued, and declaring that Russian-Rumanian relations would "take a grave turn" if further incidents occurred.

Soviet Warnings Discussed

It was learned diplomatic warnings from Moscow were discussed at all-night government conferences.

The army was ordered to be ready for any emergency.

King Carol was counselled in making his decision by hundreds of political personages who streamed through the palace doors until after dawn.

Government quarters said Joachim Von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, minced no words at the Vienna Conference, but told the delegates what had to be done under threat of an overwhelming attack.

The Vienna Conference was called by Germany and Italy after Rumania and Hungary had failed to settle the Hungarian claim between themselves at recent negotiations at Turnuseverin.

One unconfirmed report said the Rome-Berlin Axis would guarantee the Rumanian-Russian frontier, if the government here should yield immediately to the Hungarian demands.

Vienna Version

Vienna, Aug. 30—(AP)—Rumania, under the whiplash of Germany and Italy, surrendered the greater part of Transylvania to Hungary today.

Rumania made clear she was capitulating to what she regarded as the axis' ultimatum that she cede most of the province to Hungary. Rumania got Transylvania in the 1919 settlement.

In return, Rumania received a German-Italian guarantee of her hacked-up frontier, according to a D.N.B., German news agency, announcement in Berlin.

Besides her submission to Hungary, Rumania recently has seen two other sizeable areas of her territory go—Bessarabia to Soviet Russia and the southern Dobruja to Bulgaria.

Guarantee of Borders by Axis

The axis' guarantee, it was said in Berlin, is meant for a general guarantee of Rumania's shrunken borders—only her frontier with Russia but also with Hungary and Bulgaria in case any elements in those countries get the idea they can help themselves to more.

In Berlin it was said there was no information on reports that the German and Italian Ambassadors in Moscow had visited Foreign Commissar Molotoff to discuss Balkan problems.

This source said it has long been known to all powers, including Soviet Russia, that Germany considers the Balkans her "special sphere of influence" whereas Russia, in her recent phase of expansion, merely wanted the frontiers of her former empire —that of the Czars—restored.

These sources said that with the acquisition of Bessarabia this had been accomplished and the gain of northern Bucovina had gone beyond this aim.

Final negotiations to end the long territorial dispute between the Balkan neighbors were conducted in the ornate gold room of Belvedere Palace this afternoon.

Hungarian sources estimated that the ceded area included 19,300 of Transylvania's 35,000 square miles.

There was no indication whether an exchange of populations would be undertaken.

The German and Italian Foreign Ministers, Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano, read similar statements explaining the purposes of the negotiations.

'Impartial' Says Von Ribbentrop

Von Ribbentrop said the negotiations had been conducted "impartially," that the outcome was just and that it would bring lasting friendly relations between Hungary and Rumania.

Besides Ribbentrop and Ciano, chief figures at the conference were Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu of Rumania, Hungarian Premier Paul Teleki and the Hungarian Foreign Minister, Count Stephen Csaky.

12,494 REGISTER IN P. E. COUNTY

C. G. Rutter States 8,427 Were Registered in the Lennox Section of Riding

Picton — During the National Registration last week, a total of 12,494 people were registered in Prince Edward County, C. G. Rutter, Picton, Chief Assistant Deputy Registrar, stated. In Lennox section, Registrar W. S. Wilson announced 8,427 registered, making a total of 20,921 for this electoral district.

Mr. Rutter stated that about 80 per cent of those in Prince Edward registered the first day and that it would have been possible to set up a machine capable of handing the entire registration in one day. The work was carried out efficiently and in Prince Edward there are 1,181 single men between the ages of 19 and 45. Some checking up on doubtful registrations is being carried out. All cards must be carried and shown to police if so demanded.

NEW AIR RAID WARNING TACTICS

Effort to Save Londoners Sleep and Keep Production in Motion

London, Aug. 30—(CP)—New air raid warning tactics were in effect yesterday in an effort to save Londoners' sleep and reduce the number of false alarms which send armament workers into shelters and disrupt production each time an enemy bomber nears.

Hereafter in hospitals, factories and public service stations, a "purple" light warning will be used as a standby signal preliminary to the "red" flash which is equivalent to the sound of sirens.

This new measure perhaps explains why London authorities did not immediately sound the sirens even though Nazi raiders were hovering near the capital last night and this morning.

The Daily Herald, commending the new policy, admitted the public would undergo "unavoidable risks" with the new system but expressed belief Britons would endorse it.

"If sirens went off in every area across which the raiders fly, a handful of raiders could stop production everywhere," the paper said, "and several million people would lose their sleep to no purpose."

"So sirens will sound only in areas where an attack is thought likely. Even then, often enough, the attack does not mature or bombs are dropped only on one or two widely separated spots."

EXHIBITION SWIM NEWS

The two favourites in the women's senior one-mile race for the Wrigley Trophy at Canadian National Exhibition, August 31st, are Dot Hobson, Canadian champion, and Irene Barr of Hamilton.

In the Canadian mile championship on August 24th, Dot Hobson swam the mile in open water in twenty-three minutes and thirty-five seconds, which is within a few seconds of the world's record. Miss Hobson was extended all the way by Canada's new sensation in the swimming world, Irene Barr of Hamilton, who has not yet reached her seventeenth birthday. Miss Barr's time was 23:39.

These two outstanding Canadian athletes will stage a spectacular race on August 31st in their effort to establish a new world's record in the Ontario mile championship, for the Wrigley Trophy. Jimmy Thompson, famous Hamilton swim coach, states that Irene Barr is supremely confident after her performance at Exhibition last Saturday. Great public interest is developing around the performance of these two young swimmers who have almost reached world record time as a result of their years of effort under the guidance of Gus Ryder of Toronto Lakeshore Club, and Jimmy Thompson of Hamilton Aquatic Club.

SCHOOL OF ADMINISTRATION AT R. C. A. F., BASE, TRENTON

Because the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan is "big business", to keep it functioning smoothly a large, well-trained administration staff fully conversant with the complex problems of service procedure is a vital necessity.

For this purpose alone, therefore, apart altogether from the great number of schools turning out airmen of all kinds, there is operated at Trenton, Ontario, a School of Administration. Every four weeks there graduate from the school approximately 40 officers who in civilian life would provide a representative cross-section of the legal, financial and industrial activity of Canada.

Business College of R. C. A. F.

The School, which is literally the business college of the Royal Canadian Air Force, moulds the wide experience gained by these men in their civilian endeavours to meet and solve the difficulties which will inevitably arise in the administration of the vast Air Training Plan.

The R. C. A. F. is a highly organized "business". Rules and regulations are laid down to cover virtually every situation which may arise in the handling of routine matters. Certain procedure must be followed in the administration of discipline; the payment of travelling and other extraordinary expenses; transfer of personnel from one station to another; movements of aircraft; complaints from both civilians and Service personnel; the rights of the Service and so forth.

Service Procedure

All these subjects are covered in one of the R. C. A. F. publications. They may be found in the Manual of Air Force Law, King Orders and Regulations (Air), Pay and Allowances, Financial Regulations and Instructions or Administrative Orders. Each officer upon graduation from the School of Administration must be familiar with all of these publications and be able to turn instantly to the section or paragraph covering any specific case.

In addition to their knowledge of service procedure these officers, before they can assume posts as adjutants, assistant adjutants or other administrative positions in any of the 115 units of the training plan, must have a thorough knowledge of drill. To this end two hours of each day are devoted to a session on the parade ground.

Not a Moment Wasted

The syllabus of training for the School of Administration is itself a model of efficiency. Not a moment is wasted. When the day's lectures are over at 4.30 P. M. the officers under instruction snatch the two hours between then and 7.00 P. M. for recreation because each night they are required to write an examination of all the subjects covered in the course of the day.

Selection of these men is made from available applications, only those unable to serve in a combatant capacity as pilots, air observers and air gunners being accepted.

The School in under Command of Wing Commander F. J. Mawdesley, a veteran of the R. C. A. F. He was one of the Officers who took part in the expedition which made aerial maps covering more than 12,000 miles in the Arctic and Northwest Territories, for the use of commercial aircraft operators and geologists. In 1933 Wing Commander Mawdesley flew a Singapore Flying Boat from England to Singapore and Hong Kong.

Must Act As Liaison

The Wing Commander and his staff, each of whom has had specialized training in some particular branch of administration, go even further than the actual curriculum in fitting officers under their instructions for the posts they will have to fill. Administrative officers must act as liaison between the R. C. A. F. and the people of Canada and they are trained to assume much of the responsibility for fostering amicable relations and mutual understanding.

The school itself is a part of the very extensive R. C. A. F. establishment at Trenton which includes the Central Flying School, an Air Navigation School, an Air Armament School, a Motor-boat Crewmen's School and a Repair Depot.

COLLOSAL BATTLE FOUGHT IN AIR—22 NAZIS DOWN

British Defenders "Scatter Nazi Formations All Over The Sky"

Nine German Craft In Squadron of 30 Shot Down by RAF

One Nazi Raider Plunged into Sea, When Struck by Rifle Fire From a Ground Crew

London, Aug. 31 (CP)—German air raiders thrust at London this afternoon in the third raid within five hours, apparently uncurbed by a mounting toll of lost bombers.

About the time that the third alarm sent Londoners hastily to cover, the Air Ministry announced that "at least six enemy planes were shot down today and one enemy bomber last night."

Three of Britain's fast-rising Fighter planes were missing after the morning combat.

The third alarm of the day came at 1.03 p.m. (8.03 a.m. E.D.T.) and it was London's 21st alarm since Aug. 15, when the German Air Force struck first in the London area with a dive-bomber attack on Croydon Airfield.

Ace German pilots of the "Yellow Nose" Squadron or Messerschmitt Fighters were reported routed in a great battle over a southeast coast town after "suicidal" attacks on balloons.

An unofficial count of the day's German losses, which usually runs ahead of official communiques, said that by early afternoon the Germans had lost 14 bombers and fighters. The 14th plane, by this count, fell in flames on farmland in Southeast England, just missing rooftops.

Some of the raiders droning in across the Channel penetrated the London defence area in the third raid. The two morning thrusts were beaten back.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Air holding water vapor! People often think of the air as holding or having a capacity for water vapor. They even think of the air as soaking up or absorbing water in some way. This is not at all the case. Water vapor comes from the evaporation of moist surfaces, which process would take place with no air present at all. Water vapor is simply mixed with the oxygen, nitrogen and other constituents of the air. The presence of the air does not even limit the amount of water vapor that is mixed with it. The amount of water vapor that can exist in space with or without air depends solely upon its temperature.

R. A. F. Pilot's Body Riddled by Bullets After He Bailed Out

London, Aug. 31 (CP Cable)—The Air Ministry said Friday that three Messerschmitts attacked a Royal Air Force pilot after he had bailed out, and riddled his body with bullets.

The incident took place during a battle Friday afternoon.

"The British pilot had jumped by parachute from 15,000 feet," the Ministry said. "As he was floating down three Messerschmitts swooped on him and opened fire at his swaying figure.

"His body was riddled with bullets."

ROBERT STROUD TORONTO, KILLED AT BANNOCKBURN

Charles Schwinger Also of Toronto Seriously Injured When Car Overturns Pinning Men in Machine

FOUND BY MOTORISTS

Robert Stroud, 24 of 210 Glenview Ave., Toronto, was instantly killed and Charles Schwinger, 286 Oriole Ave., Toronto, seriously injured when the automobile in which they were travelling overturned as it failed to negotiate a curve near Bannockburn yesterday. Schwinger was brought to the Belleville General Hospital suffering from a fractured wrist, broken collarbone and internal injuries. He was attended by Dr. G. H. Stobie.

The two men were returning from a week's fishing expedition near Bancroft. North of Bannockburn the motor car, which was driven by Schwinger, went out of control as it was rounding a curve and overturned in the ditch. Stroud was crushed beneath the wreckage and it is believed he died almost instantly. Schwinger was trapped beneath the overturned vehicle for some time before Wilfred Thompson and Douglas Pigden, of Eldorado happened by and observed the overturned automobile. They were able to extricate the injured man, but it was impossible to remove the body of Stroud until additional help was obtained.

Provincial Constable Dymond of Madoc, investigated, while Coroner Dr. E. Nickle attended the scene and rendered first aid. It is yet uncertain whether or not charges will be preferred in the matter and upon which hinges the question of the holding of an inquest. One or the other must be held, however.

ANOTHER ESCAPEE CAPTURED

Bala, Ont., Aug. 31 (CP) —One of two German prisoners of war who escaped from a Muskoka prison camp yesterday was reported captured at this Muskoka resort today. No details of the reported capture were available immediately.

The pair who escaped were Fritz Pietsch, submarine petty officer, and Herbert Maumann, infantry sergeant-major. First reports did not identify the one recaptured.

40,000 Airplane Engines Are Ordered for U. S. by Mid-1942

Experts Estimate This Total on Basis of 1½ Engines Per Plane Will be Adequate for 25,000-Plane Fleet

BIGGEST ORDERS LET

Washington, Aug. 31 — (AP)—Newly placed orders for airplane engines—once called the bottleneck of the United States defence program—today brought prospects for engine production abreast of the army-navy goal of a 25,000-plane fleet in the next two years.

With new plant facilities already under construction and output steadily increasing, a survey of contracts showed that upwards of 40,000 motors for all types of planes have been ordered for delivery by mid-1942.

At the rate of 1 1-2 engines per plane figuring in multiple-motored craft experts estimated that this total would be more than adequate for the goal set.

The two largest engine contracts let so far, were made public by the army and navy this week. They call for the manufacture of 20,000 Wright motors by the Wright Aeronautical Corporation and 17,000 Pratt and Whitney motors by United Aircraft Corporation.

Previously 3,000 Rolls-Royce motors had been ordered from the Packard Motor Company — which also agreed to produce 6,000 for Great Britain.

PROBE ORDERED AFTER TWO MORE GERMANS ESCAPE

Three-Man Board to Investigate Internment Camp Set-up Appointed by Ralston

Men Put Planks on Chassis of Army Truck and Ride Out of Camp to Make Getaway in Bush

Ottawa, Oug. 31.— (CP)—As a double-barrelled investigation was ordered into organization and administration of Canadian internment camps, search continued today for two more German war prisoners who escaped from an internment camp in the Muskoka District last night.

Acting swiftly after the escape of the two latest prisoners, which brought the total in the last two weeks to six, Defence Minister Ralston late last night announced the appointment of a three-man board to investigate the internment camp set-up. In addition he ordered a Court of Inquiry to investigate last night's escapes.

The latest prisoners to escape are Fritz Pietsch, a petty officer in the German submarine service and captured last November in the North Sea, and Herbert Naumann, an army sergeant major, captured during fighting in France around Arras. Both of them had been interned in Britain but later brought to Canada for the duration of the war.

DEATH DUEL FOUGHT IN LOBBY

Policeman and Gunman Battle in Theatre, Gunman Ending His Life

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—An unscheduled drama unfolded before last-minute theatregoers in the Times Square sector last night as a policeman and a gunman fought a death duel in the lobby of a playhouse.

The gunman, his identity a mystery, ended his own life with a bullet through the temple as he fell wounded from the officer's fire. Patrolman Joseph Schecker and James Mitchell, negro porter at the Plymouth Theatre were wounded in the battle.

Schecker, wounded in the left leg, told the story that a stranger approached him on his beat and whispered:

"That man (pointing) has a gun. He's going to shoot me."

The informant melted into the crowd and Schecker started in pursuit of the man who held a pistol. Both broke into a run. As they neared the Plymouth, the gunman fired a shot that went wild, then dodged into the lobby.

Mitchell attempted to tackle the man, but lost his grip. The fugitive fired and wounded the porter in the jaw. As he fled the lobby he sent a bullet into Schecker's leg. The policeman hobbled to the shelter of a car and fired, striking the man in the chest.

The gunman then put his pistol to his own head.

Nothing was found in the man's pockets to identify him.

After First Year of War

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 31 (CP)—A year of war has resulted not only in military convulsions in Europe but diplomatic disturbances that are almost as far reaching.

A year ago Germany stood alone against Britain and France. Italy was on the fence. Japan was preoccupied with the Sino-Japanese war but inclined toward friendship with the Allies as the result of the Russian-German alliance. Russia, the diplomatic enigma of Europe, had just signed a pact with Germany which was nothing more than a trade agreement and not much of a trade agreement at that.

The smaller nations of Europe, the Scandinavian lowland and Balkan countries, were pro-Ally because they feared the result of a German victory. Even General Franco of Spain, who had reached power only because of German and Italian intervention in the Spanish civil war, was keeping quiet.

Diplomatic Line-up

Look at the diplomatic line-up today. France is either occupied by Hitler's army or governed by the Petain administration under the dictation of Berlin. Italy is in the war against Britain. Japan seizes every opportunity to embarrass Britain and hinder her war effort by dispersing her strength.

The smaller European nations either are German occupied territories or jump to the whip when Berlin cracks it. Franco makes vague speeches about Spain's traditional claim to Gibraltar. Russia remains the enigma, outwardly friendly toward Germany but seizing a little territory now and then, in the Baltic and the Balkans, as bastions against the day when she may have to fight Germany.

What has brought about this convulsive change in the diplomatic line-up of Europe and Asia in the space of a year? There are many reasons but the principal one is the success of Germany's armed forces and particularly the crushing defeat of the French army leading to the capitulation of the French nation.

Even in diplomacy, nothing succeeds like success, particularly military success.

After Hitler's Attacks Fail

At a hasty glance the diplomatic lineup of Europe and Asia may not look very promising for Britain but there are several factors that disprove that theory.

In the first place, everything depends on the success with which the Royal Air Force, the navy and the army can repel attacks on this country. At the present time the pilot of a Spitfire is a bigger factor, diplomatically, than the most venerable British ambassador.

If German attacks on this country fail, the people of Europe will begin to realize Hitler is not an all-conqueror. And when they realize that, Hitler's iron grip on Europe will start to go.

Factors That Favor Britain

Because even today, with Germany master of Europe, millions of people realize Britain's ideas and ideals for the continent are preferable to Hitler's. All they need is an object lesson in standing up to him because, while Hitler's position may be splendid, it is also fearful.

Another factor is that Anglo-American relations were never closer than today. Every time Hitler conquered another country the people of the United States saw more clearly their own peril, their own vulnerable position and realized they must help Britain in order to help themselves.

Britain and Empire Maintain Morale at Highest Level

Spirit of Dunkerque and of Battle of the River Plate Prevails

EVENTS OF YEAR

(By the Canadian Press)

In the small hours of a September morning—a year ago tomorrow — Germany's Fuehrer issued an order of the day to his as yet untried legions. He told them to repel "force with force."

The idea was that if the Poles attacked the Germans there was to be a counter-attack.

When the order of the day was made public German planes already had bombed Polish cities, killed hundreds of civilians; the Nazi legions were on Polish soil and the year of Nazi conquest had begun.

That same morning, Hitler, solemn, sombre, ceremonious, self-consciously trying to make history, told a heiling Reichstag he would be the first soldier of the Reich; announced he was off to do or die, and named his successors in the event of his death, Goering or Hess.

Hitler "Sprawling" Over Europe

At the end of the year Hitler stands like some dim shadow of a Napoleon on the French rim of the English channel and sends his air legions into Britain's blue skies. For the time being he is "sprawling" over Europe—in the words of Prime Minister Churchill—but the world is agreed that he is as far from his objective of complete conquest as ever.

Highlights of the Fair

That splendid young musical aggregation, the Belleville Public School Band, which under the tutelage of Conductor A. Cooper has progressed by leaps and bounds during the past few months, acquitted themselves nobly in their first "Fair" appearance. The youthful musicians showed no signs of stage fright at anytime and their performance on opening day was one that will be long remembered by those who heard them.

The two newspapermen argued long and loud in the warm afternoon air. In a nearby cattle-stall stood a splendid specimen of a gentleman representative of a prominent cattle breed. "I tell you, its a Holstein," one of the scribes declared to the high heavens, while an amused crowd of fair patrons looked „on." Holstein, my eye", "what do you know about cattle," retorted his fellow slave. "If you want my opinion, and I am usually right, I would say that Nicodemus there, belonged to that noble strain of bovines called the Ayrshire."

"So is your grandmother's ducks" came back the opposition. And so into the afternoon waged the argument. And in all probability it might still be ranging had not a farmer, silent witness to the cow-drama staged by the writers, calmly remarked, "Sorry, boys, but if that bull there," pointing to the animal in question," is what you are talking about, he is what is known to cattle breeders as a Shorthorn."

Then there was the dainty little miss who strayed from her parents, and was brought to the secretary's office. So much at home did she feel there after being regaled with candy, and other sweetmeats that she was loth to leave, when Mama finally came looking for her.

Amusing incidents—The exhibitor who heard that Mounted Police were stopping cars on the highway and demanding registration cards, and who spent three dollars in a long-distance telephone call to have his card sent him, only to discover it in his pocket a few minutes after the call had been paid for. The urchin, slyly helping himself to the warm candy in the bottom of a mixing pail, who inadvertently sat in a mess of the sticky stuff, and stayed there until help came along..The sweet young thing from a nearby metropolitan centre who thought the Calf Club was a beauty contest....The opportunist concessionaire who greeted every airman with the title "Wing-Commander." His quick promotion increased sales considerably.

It was amusing on Friday night to watch the antics of Lieut. Fred Jobson and the boys of the Belleville Municipal Band who did such a swell job between showers in front of the grandstand. Came the rain and the musicians hurriedly reached for the rain-proof covering for their instruments. And that loud laugh one heard from the vicinity of the band, was not the aftermath of a humorous story, but the piccolo player having his own joke with the tuba performers.

There was a study in expression in the grandstand last night when the number of the first ticket drawn from the container was announced. Old and young gazed intently at tickets, or sheets of paper on which were written long columns of figures There was hope, expectancy and finally despair on the faces of the crowd, all of course with the exception of Len Pozard. Len's eyes nearly popped out of his head, and his mouth opened but no sound came forth, when he saw the number on his ticket.

BRITISH BOMBERS PLASTER BERLIN GERMANY REPORTS

Says Big Siemens Schuckert Electrical Equipment Factory Hit by Bombs

EXTENSIVE RAID

Press Correspondents Declare They Could See Planes and Flash of Exploding Bombs

Berlin, Aug. 31.—(AP)—British warplanes bombed the centre of Berlin early today with explosive and incendiary bombs, damaging the big Siemens Schuckert Electrical Equipment factory.

The 4,000,000 residents of the metropolitan area huddled in underground shelters for an hour and 37 minutes as the British planes, striking under cover of darkness, carried out their most extensive assault on the German capital since the start of the war.

German officials claimed one high explosive bomb fell in the court yard of the fire department headquarters on Linden Street, basting a seven-foot hole in a concrete floor.

(The fire department headquarters on Linden Stret is only four blocks east of the Wilhelmstrasse, on which the Reichs Chancellery, The Foreign Office and other government buildings are located.)

The Germans also got in their usual claims that the British bombers had struck apartment houses and business buildings.

(This has been a regular Nazi charge, usually followed by threats of reprisals on Britain, where military and non-military objectives have been bombed indiscriminately since the start of the war.)

GERMAN ESCAPEE GLAD OF CAPTURE HE TELLS GUARDS

Theodor Steyrer, Covered With Poison Ivy, Hungry and Bedraggled, is Recaptured

SPENT TIME IN BUSH

Ottawa, Aug. 31 (CP—Both German war prisoners who escaped last Tuesday night from a Sudbury district internment camp have been recaptured in the bush within seven miles of the camp, internment operations headquarters here announced today.

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 31 (CP)—Covered with poison ivy, tired, hungry and bedraggled with rain, Theodor Steyrer, German naval petty officer, was returned early today to the Northern Ontario internment camp from which he and a fellow prisoner of war escaped last Tuesday night.

Steyrer told his guards he was "glad to be back" after he had a bath and ate a big breakfast. He said this was the first real meal he had had since he and Hans Kibart, a Nazi aviator, escaped by tricking their guards. He had spent three days and nights in the rugged rock and bush country of this northern district.

'Mechanical Bird Dog' Used To Hunt Nazi Night Raiders

Range-and-Course Predictor Called 'Sausage Machine' Particularly Effective

MACHINE A SECRET

By ROBERT BUNNELLE
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—The defenders of Britain are using a sort of "mechanical bird dog" to hunt down German night raiders.

The British censor permitted disclosure for the first time today that "pointing" is done not only by searchlights but by an ingenious range-and-course predictor sometimes called a "sausage machine" and by other equipment of a nature kept closely secret.

It works like this:

With the secret devices, perhaps listening apparatus, anti-aircraft gun crews determine the position and direction of the approaching raider. They feed this data into the "sausage machine," which turns out a series of positions for the plane in the immediate split-second future.

These positions then are subjected to heavy fire from 3, 3.7, and 4.5-inch anti-aircraft batteries.

Searchlights also cover these spots, to try to catch the raider in the beam for the benefit of ground defenders and defending fighter planes.

The crews say that once an enemy is caught in the glare, it is relatively easy to hold him in the light of first one beam and then another until the anti-aircraft guns or fighter pilots can catch up.

The difficulty is to catch the raider in the first place, since sound travels slowly in relation to the speed of planes.

Nevertheless, military circles credit the anti-aircraft guns with 100 of the 1,000 planes shot down in the past month. The record is much better than in the first Great War, when gunners fired an average of 5,000 rounds for each plane brought down.

Rumanian Protest In Transylvania Loud, Incessant

Germans to Establish Air Bases and Tank Headquarters in Rumania, Report

Bucharest, Aug. 31. —(AP) — Establishment of German air bases and headquarters for Nazi tank corps and motorized units on Rumanian soil was reported by government circles today to have been agreed upon at the Vienna Conference yesterday which gave half of Rumania's Transylvania to Hungary.

German planes and soldiers had not put in an appearance in Rumania today, although the Rumanian General Staff began demobilization of most of the Balkan Kingdom's 1,300,000 men under arms.

Other plans were being rushed to vacate the Northern Transylvania area ceded to Hungary by the Axis Powers in an arbitration award. This must be completed in fifteen days.

Incessant Demonstrations

The aroused Rumanian population in Transylvania carried on incessant demonstrations of protest to the government's capitulation.

Ten of thousands Rumanian peasants flocked to Cluj, ancient Transylvania capital. There and elsewhere in Transylvania there were frequent anti-Fascist outbreaks with Italy blamed largely for "selling out Rumania", as one speaker put it.

The tension in Bucharest itself was sharpened by the resignation of the Minister of Public Health, Vasiele Noveanu, an Iron Guardist, who stepped out as an admission of his "grave error" in agreeing to the award.

At public meetings in Transylvania those who signed the agreement were branded "traitors" Church bells tolled throughout the night in protest.

Meanwhile the agreement for slicing off another big bite of Rumanian territory—the return of Southern Dobruja to Bulgaria—was expected to be signed within 48 hours at Craiova.

Liberal Leader George Bratianu sided with Juliu Maniu, peasant leader, in opposition to the cession during heated debate at the Crown Council which lasted through most of the night.

'Most Sorrowful Moment' of King Carol's Life

King Carol, worn and haggard after two sleepless nights, finally called for silence and in a tired voice declared it had been the most "sorrowful moment" of his life, but that no other solution was possible.

The King explained that Rumania had to keep herself from being torn to pieces by armies on three of four frontiers, that resistance would have made it impossible ever to restore the kingdom.

The council finally rallied around the throne by drawing up an appeal to what is left of Rumania "for unanimous solidarity with the Crown, without which there is no great hope in the future".

Police guarded the Council's Palace session with sawed-off shotguns.

Ontario Intelligencer Will Not be Issued On Monday, Labor Day

Monday, being Labor Day and a public holiday, there will be no issue of The Ontario Intelligencer.

It was understood that as part of the agreement whereby Germany and Italy guarantee Rumania's shrunken territory German motorized troops will guard the frontier with Soviet Russia.

Transylvania's churchbells clanged an incessant dirge of protest against the new cession.

Opposition to 'Cession'

All Bucharest theatres, movies and night clubs were ordered closed for an indefinite period of national mourning, and music was forbidden in restaurants.

Unreconciled Rumanians formed "defence corps" in parts of Transylvania, and from the Province capital, Cluj came a petition bearing thousands of signatures lauding Juliu Maniu, Rumanian Peasant Party leader, for his opposition to the cession and calling "traitors" those who agreed to it.

Ten of thousands of Rumanian public employees, judges, army officers and politicians, with their families, began an exodus last night from Northern Transylvania, which soon will be Hungarian property again.

Head Toward Old Rumania

They headed toward Old Rumania by train, automobile, river boat and even in horse-carts heaped high with personal belongings.

In Cluj, Oradea and other large towns in the ceded area, the Hungarian minority staged impromptu celebrations.

At the same time Rumanians in Arad and other localities which Hungary claimed but failed to receive celebrated their "escape" from the transfer.

There was a widespread report that the German minority in Rumania which recently has been setting up an armed militia under general staff officers of German blood might take over the guarding of oil fields and other strategic points.

Occupation to Begin Monday

Budapest, Aug. 31 (AP)—Formal occupation of Northern Transylvania by the Hungarian army is expected to begin Monday, Government circles said today.

Press and public celebrated the Axis-dictated return by Rumania of half the province for which Hungary has clamored for 20 years.

The press elaborated on the theme that Hungary, her population soon to be increased by an estimated 2,500,000 and her territory enlarged to 99,820 square miles, will assume a more dominant role in Southeastern Europe within the framework of the Rome-Berlin axis. The newspapers emphasized this country's "new debt of gratitude" to Germany and Italy.

Hungarian Army

Observers expressed belief the Hungarian army, soon to be entrenched in its old lines in the Carpathian Mountains, now may become an openly recognized part of Germany's eastern defences.

PASSING PEDESTRIAN DISCOVERS BLAZE

Fire sirens sounded loudly just after the midnight hour on Friday night as a result of a passing pedestrian discovering a blazing fence in the alleyway leading to an open lot south of the Hume Arena. The short fence running between the arena and the building on Pinnacle Street, only a few feet distant, was almost completely demolished but no other damage resulted as the blaze was promptly extinguished with the application of three cans of water.

PIKE WEIGHING 18 POUNDS HOOKED

Climaxing what he terms one of the "biggest-fish" years in his history of the sport, George J. Wallace, 183 Charles Street, assistant-principal at Queen Alexandra School, hooked what is said to be the largest pike of the current season in the Trent River this week. The big fellow tipped the scales at eighteen pounds and a few ounces.

The pike is one of a number of large fish caught by Mr. Wallace this year, principal among which was a bass that weighed well over six pounds.

So interested was an American fisherman in the large pike, Mr. Wallace said, that he requested the head "to take home to show the boys," and also posed for his photograph with the big fellow.

18-lb. 'Lunge Hooked In South Bay

South Bay, Aug. 31—One of the largest muskies landed from these waters in several seasons, was taken by Mr. John Rose and son this week. The fish, which put up a fighting battle for several minutes, weighed 18 pounds. Lunge have not been plentiful in South Bay waters, and this large fish was a rare catch for Mr. Rose.

SECOND CRASH SEQUEL OF FIRST

Accidents, However, Happen Twelve Hours Apart, Police Report

Two motor car accidents occurred on Highway No. 2 west of Belleville and although 12 hours apart the second crash this morning was a sequel to the initial accident, which happened shortly after 7.30 p.m. last night.

Last evening a motor car driven by Henry Jordan, of Heron Bay, skidded on the wet slippery pavement and collided with another automobile being driven in the opposite direction and by M. N. Martin of Camp Borden. Both cars went into opposite ditches as Jordan was proceeding easterly while Martin was returning to his military base. Motorcycle Patrolman J. J. Hatch investigated and Martin sold his damaged car to a neighbour after the matter was settled regarding damages between the respective owners.

This morning as Martin's damaged vehicle was being towed into Belleville by a garage repair truck, a second truck driven by George Ryckman of Toronto, was about to pass the tow truck, when he observed a motor car approaching from the east. Ryckman swerved his truck sharply to the right and drove into the south ditch, narrowly missing a large tree as he avoided a head-on collision. The truck load of soft drinks was strewn along the highway, but no injuries or serious damage resulted when Ryckman's truck turned over.

Seek Information

Provincial Police authorities are seeking information regarding a motor accident that happened six miles west of Belleville yesterday, when a motor car turned over in the ditch. Passing motorists assisted in righting the vehicle, police heard, and the driver proceeded on his journey without reporting the matter to the authorities. The O.P.P. are seeking further details pertaining to the accident and its results.

ROBT. McFARLANE TO STAND TRIAL ON MURDER COUNT

Committed for Trial in the Death of 18-Months-Old Gordon Archer

19 WITNESSES

Trenton, Aug. 31.—Robert McFarlane, 21-year-old shoe employee of Frankford, was committed for trial on a charge of murder by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., at the conclusion of the preliminary hearing into the count in police court here yesterday.

The youthful bridegroom will stand trial with his seventeen-year-old wife, Alice Archer McFarlane, committed several days ago, on separate charges of murder at the Fall Assizes of the Supreme Court of Ontario sometime in October. The youthful Frankford couple were arrested by Trenton police and charged with murder, following investigation of the finding of the wire-bound body of Gordol Archer, eighteen months old son of Mrs. McFarlane, in the Trent River on July 26th.

Nineteen Witnesses Heard

Nineteen witnesses were called by Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson, in the hearing into the charges against the accused man, practically all of whom testified in the hearing of similar charges against his wife. Evidence was concluded yesterday after the hearing had been adjourned from Friday, August 23rd due to the inability to appear through illness of an important Crown witness.

McFarlane maintained the stoical calm that has characterized him through the lengthy hearing. Asked if he had anything to say by Magistrate Butler, prior to committal, the accused man hung his head and made no sign.

Two witnesses and press photographers, who identified pictures taken near the scene of the alleged crime ended the Crown's testimony yesterday.

Harry Mondeville, C.N.R. bridgetender, told the court he had seen a couple near the footbridge of the railway at 9.05 on the night of July 25th., the day before the body of the dead infant was discovered.

He had investigated their appearance and the man had muttered something about visiting a sister-in-law, and gone on his way. Later, the witness said, he had seen them emerging from a pathway that leads under the footbridge to the river. Again, he had seen a couple sitting on the riverbank but could not identify them as being the same couple.

Chief of Police Testifies

Chief of Police William Bain, Trenton, who led the investigation of the case, told the court of the circumstances leading to the apprehension of the accused couple. Statements had been given by them he said, in the presence of a court reporter. Further evidence given by the witness was of a corroborative nature to that given by him in the hearing into charges laid against Alice McFarlane.

Intense local interest in the hearings was evidenced in the crowds that packed the police court to capacity on each day of the separate hearings. During the hearing into the charges against the woman, curious spectators brought piano stools, chairs and other pieces of furniture in order to be comfortable during the hearing.

E. Ormonde Butler, appeared for Robert McFarlane with Jacob Goodman, representing the accused woman. The couple will be held in custody in Hastings County jail pending their trial.

B.C.I. & V.S. Summer Class In Welding and Mechanics Concluded, Diplomas Awarded

P. C. MacLaurin Delivered an Inspiring Address to Graduating Students

64 ENROLLED

The summer classes in machine shop instruction, aero and auto engine mechanics, and oxy-acetylene welding which have been operating at Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School for the past two months were completed on Friday afternoon with presentation of diplomas to the graduating students at which P. C. MacLaurin delivered an inspiring address.

"You have arrived at the conclusion of your courses and are going out into active service," said Mr. MacLaurin. "The positions which you are going to are not just ordinary jobs, but jobs which in no small measure will assist the Empire on to victory."

"You may not be enlisting with the armed forces to fight at the front," he continued, "but the entire credit of winning battles does not always go to the fighting forces. Sometimes there is not enough credit given to the shopmen who make it possible that armies may be kept at the front."

"War, above all else, teaches preparedness, efficiency and application, and you are going away from this school better prepared and better trained in your chosen profession. You are going out with a determination that you will be doing for your country the very best that you can, and the work which you will be doing will in no small measure help carry the war to a successful conclusion," said Mr. MacLaurin.

32 Have Positions

So successful had many of the students been in their studies during the summer courses that out of an enrollment of 64 in the three classes, 32 had accepted positions in industry before the classes were completed. These included 18 from the machine shop, 12 from the mechanics' class and two from the welding class.

The instructors of the three classes presented the diplomas to their own particular group of graduating students, with Mr. Harold Howard doing the honors for the welding class, Mr. Bill Davies for the mechanics' class, and Mr. G. Ferguson for the machine shop lads. At the conclusion of the diploma presentations, the boys of the welding class showed their appreciation of the work done by their instructor, when they presented Mr. Howard with a handsome brief case. Earlier in the week the mechanics' class had presented Mr. Davies with a leather camera case, while Mr. Ferguson had been remembered by the gift of a purse from the machine shop class.

Mr. Ferguson acted as chairman for the afternoon, while Mr. Howard with Mrs. M. P. Duff as accompanist, provided musical entertainment with two much appreciated solos.

Bancroft, Aug. 31 (Special — Wednesday evening was the official visit of the new D.D.G.M., the Right Worshipful Brother Arthur Hill, of Belleville, to Bancroft lodge A.F. and A.M., No. 482. Owing to the greater part of the young officers enlisted in the local N.P.A.M. the special meeting was called in order that the new D.D.G.M. would have an opportunity of meeting the officers prior to their moving into camp at Petawawa. The work of the lodge was in the form of an initiation of a candidate duly exemplified by the officers of the lodge which work was highly commended upon by the District Deputy and District Secretary.

Following the regular meeting of the lodge the brethren repaired to the banquet hall, where a sumptuous banquet was tendered by the ladies of Bancroft, O.E.S. No. 157. Wor. Bro. W. E. Wiggins acted as toastmaster. The first toast was to the King and Craft, which was responded to by the brethren singing the National Anthem. The toast to the Grand Lodge of Canada was proposed by Wor. Bro. J. M. Joynt, responded to by Rt. Wor. Bro. A. Hill, D.D.G.M., and Wor. Bro. Carl Crosby, District Secretary, which was very much appreciated by the brethren present. The toast to the visiting brethren was proposed by Bro. J. D. Deyell, Inspector of Public Schools, and responded to by Wor. Bro. Wright and Bros. Follis, Morton and Severn. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the Junior Warden's toast and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

Len Quite Happy About Whole Thing After Winning Car

"I don't know how I feel, I haven't come down to earth yet, but I can say it is the first thing I have ever won in my life," smiled Len Fosard, whose ticket "H-3037" won for him the first handsome automobile given away by the directors of the Belleville Fair Board last night.

Mr. Fosard, who is an insurance adjuster of Bridge Street E., could not remember where he secured his ticket. "I'm still up in the air and cannot realize my good luck, and it is good for I have never won a thing in my life," he laughed.

Mr. Fosard's ticket was the third drawn from the drum by dainty Miss Marie Turley of Frankford. Two preceding tickets "A-28194" and "B-31923" were not claimed by the holders and consequently the third ticket was drawn.

MIDWAY POPULAR

Len Fozard, Insurance Adjustor, Winner of Car at Draw Before Grandstand

Despite the fact that Jupiter Pluvius after covering the scene of activities with a cloud screen all morning and the early part of the afternoon, and during the evening sent his rain legions down in intermittent forays, residents of the city and district refused to be intimidated by the inclemency of the weather and patronized the second day of the Belleville Fair in numbers that surprised the most optimistic director.

Again the lure of the country fair proved irresistible to a large crowd, thoroughly representative of the county and surrounding districts. They refused to be daunted by heavy showers that fell at intervals during the evening, and donning raincoats and crouching under the protection of parasols and umbrellas, defied the elements and satiated their "Fair" appetites to the full.

In a drizzling mist they "rocked" on the horses of the merry-go-round, whirled dizzily in the air on the airplane ride that took them through a misty drizzle, and rode high above the arc of the lights in the rolling seats of a ferris wheel.

Grandstand Packed

But dampened apparel covered spirits that were "high and dry". Sweet young things and their escorts giggled their enjoyment as they munched hot dogs beneath the protecting canopy of concessions. Wheels of the various games whirled at a more or less consistent pace and vendors of other chance enjoyment gained their share of a rainy day business.

The grandstand was packed to capacity for the evening performance. And the good-natured throng amusingly enjoyed the antics of Lieut. Fred Jobson and the gallant members of his Municipal Band as they alternately packed and unpacked instruments according to the whims of the weather man. For all that, the fine musical aggregation gave another sterling performance that merited all the applause the audience gave it.

The splendid show of Billy Garden and his Canadian Vaudeville artists lived up to true theatrical traditions. "The show must go on" and the show went on. The artists, troupers true, went through their various acts with all the skill, artistry and grace that they would have exhibited had the atmospheric environment consisted of a warm August evening with moon, gentle zephyrs and whatnot.

And the generous audience cognizant of the difficulties under which the artists worked gave unstintedly of their applause as act after act "went through their paces" with all the deftness and ability of the trained trouper.

A. L. I. Parades on Grounds

But interspersing the gayety and hilarity of the fair came grim realization of the fact that Canada and the Empire were at war, when the marching columns of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Regiment swung through the drizzling mist in front of the grandstand to the martial tempos of the bagpipes and the regimental band. Heralded in the misty distance by the skirl of the pibroch, the kilted pipers suddenly appeared in the wan glare of a spotlight at the east end of the grandstand while in the shadows beyond appeared the khaki-clad black bereted files of the marching troops.

Past the brilliantly lighted stage, Belleville's civilian volunteer soldiers, arms swinging like veterans of the last war, eyes glued to the front, swung to the stirring tones of their bands. And as the companies strode by, thunderous acclaim reached out from the dim recesses of the grandstand as Belleville paid vociferous tribute to her gallant soldier sons.

"Give 'em all you've got" shouted a voice over the microphone. And as the troops swung back along the line of march, again the cheers and applause rocked the grandstand as young and old again gave vent to their feelings.

Len Fozard Wins Car

But in direct contrast to the acclaim given the soldiers was the tense silence that preceded the most dramatic moment of the night, one which thousands of people, young and old, had been waiting for, the draw for the motor vehicle given away by directors of the Fair.

A hush, one that bordered on the reverent, fell over the crowded grandstand, and the packed adjacent bleachers as dainty little Miss Marie Turley of Frankford extracted a ticket from the large circular container. Minutes later a sigh of what may be termed relief sounded from the gathering as the holder of the ticket drawn failed to appear. Again a ticket was extracted and again the owner did not claim his reward. But the third time Mr. Len. Fozard, Belleville, insurance adjuster, became the winner of the automobile, when he produced the corresponding ticket to the stub numbered "H-3037", drawn from the drum.

Large Attendance

The tension relaxed, the bubble of excitement and suspense had been pricked with the draw of a ticket and the good-natured crowd, all disappointed but one, gradually filed out of the grandstand to the attractions of Midway and exhibition buildings.

Inclement weather reduced the proportions of the expected afternoon crowd, but despite this fact, the exhibition was well attended. Judges, working under difficulties, completed their duties while members of the Belleville Boys' Calf Club celebrated their Archievement Day. Results of these features appear elsewhere in this edition.

Five horses competed in the running races and three thrilling heats were run before Mildred Royal, Kingston mare, was acclaimed the winner of the race.

Apple Seeds

(London Free Press)

Thanks to the scientists who have now proved the worth of that old saw from grandmother's day: "An apple a day keeps the doctor away." In this particular case, however, it is apple seeds that contain the new elixir of life. Adults seldom chem apple seeds, but youngsters do, which may account for their resilience and general bloom.

For, according to these scientists, it is no less a product than apple seed oil which rejuvenates tired, overworked muscles. The Oregon University Medical School has discovered, through a series of experiments, that apple seed oil restores flabby, paralyzed muscles to normal strength an dactivity, and that at a minimum cost. Previously it was wheat germ oil at around $12 a pint which had to be relied upon for this curative property.

As usual, in this topy-turvy world of industry which man has created, apple seeds are "a waste product" thrown away by apple processing plants as without value.

Pigeons in Camouflage

(The New York Times)

Because of its mysterious homing instinct the pigeon still proves useful as a message-carrier to augment the field radio and other newer methods of communication in wartime. But even the pigeon must conform to the modern tempo.

By experiments in cross-breeding at the Chaffey Junior College in California, and at the Army air base at March Field, hoping pigeons have been produced of mixed colors which have the effect of camouflage in flight. This will afford a degree of protection to the birds winging their perilous way through barrage and anti-aircraft fire. But a new coat, however pied, will add nothing to the stout heart of the homers whose record in wartime is bright with courage and devotion to duty.

Cheese Production From Jan. To End of July Up 12.1 P.C. Over Corresponding Period of Last Year Says J. F. Singleton

By J. F. SINGLETON

Associate Director of Marketing Service, Dairy Products Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, Ontario.

Volume of Production

Production of cheese in all Canada from the 1st. January to the end of July, 1940, is reported by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics as having been 12.1% greater than during the corresponding months of the previous year. The quantity of cheese graded in all Canada from the 27th. November, 1939, to the 10th. August, 1940, was 103,597 boxes, equivalent to 14.78% greater than during the same period of 1938-39. The percentage of increase in the number of Ontario cheese graded during this period of 1939-1940 was 15.5%, which is slightly more than the percentage increase for all Canada. The increase in the quantity of Quebec cheese graded during the same period of 1939-1940 was 8.7%, which is considerably less than that of all Canada or of Ontario. An interesting feature of the volume of cheese graded during recent weeks is the progressive increase in the percentage graded as compared with the corresponding weeks of last year. These percentages of increase, as compared with the corresponding weeks of 1939 are as follows:

For week ending 27th. July 8.63% increase.

For week ending 3rd. August 12.93% increase.

For week ending 10th. August 14.84% increase.

For week ending 17th. August 19.26% increase.

For week ending 24th. August 18.50% increase.

Quality.

The percentage of cheese graded as First Grade in all Canada to 10th. August of the current grading year, was 93.63% as compared with 89.85% during the corresponding period of the previous grading year, an increase of 3.78%. The percentage of First Grade cheese in Ontario during this portion of the current grading year was 95.4% as compared with 92.7% for the previous year, an increase of 2.7%. The percentage of First Grade Quebec cheese during this period of the current grading year was 90.9% as compared with 84% last year, an increase of 6.9%.

These increases in the percentages of First Grade cheese this year as compared with last year, are very gratifying, but even more gratifying are the increases in the quantities of cheese scoring 94 or more points and 93 points. In all Canada during this period of the grading year, viz., to 10th. August, 1940, 79,409 boxes were scored 94 or more points as compared with 18,874 boxes during the previous year, an increase of 60,535 boxes, equivalent to 321%. Of the 60,535 boxes increase in cheese scoring 94 or more points, Ontario contributed 56,274 boxes, an increase of 9% of the total quantity of Ontario cheese graded, while Quebec contributed 3,775 boxes to the increase, equivalent to 2.3% of all the Quebec cheese graded.

In all Canada there was an increase of 116,016 boxes of cheese scoring 93 points, an increase of 47.4% over the number of cheese scoring 93 points during the previous year. Of the increase in cheese scoring 93 points, Ontario contributed 80,032 boxes, equivalent to 8.2% of the total of the Ontario cheese graded, and Quebec contributed 29,342 boxes, equivalent to 16.3% of the total Quebec cheese graded.

The increase of the percentages of cheese from the two provinces grading more than 92 points does not vary widely, being 17 for Ontario and 18.6% for Quebec. However, the increases for Ontario were 9% for the 94 or more score, and 8.2% for the 93 score, whereas with respect to Quebec, the increase was 2.3% for 94 score, and 16.3% for the 93 score. The increase in amount of premium payable on account of the improvement in quality over last year will be equivalent to about $213,500.00.

No doubt, improved quality of milk received at factories and greater effort on the part of makers are important factors in securing this improvement in quality.

That the improvement in the ripening rooms of cheese factories has also been a factor in improvement of the quality, is evident. The following are extracts taken from reports of the Senior Dairy Produce Grader, Mr. T. J. Hicks, who is in immediate charge of the Montreal office, and who has been visiting Ontario grading centres. Reporting to the Ottawa office under date of the 15th. August, Mr. Hicks wrote:

"The quality of the cheese in the different warehouses in one district was not as good as it had been in previous weeks, owing to the warm weather, and especially cheese made in factories which are not equipped with mechanical refrigeration in their curing rooms. The texture and general character of the cheese was so much better from factories equipped with mechanical refrigeration than it was from those factories with ordinary curing rooms, that we could notice the difference as soon as we bored the cheese. Most of the cheese made in factories equipped with refrigeration scored higher during hot weather than the cheese made in factories with ordinary curing rooms."

Writing under date of the 20th. August, Mr. Hicks stated:

"You will notice a marked increase in the percentage of high scoring cheese this year to date compared with the same period last year. In visiting the different centres and talking with the cheesemakers from different sections, I believe this can be attributed to the following reasons:

"Up to the 10th July this year, we had ideal weather conditions with an abundant supply of grass, and water of the best quality. The premium on quality has put the cheesemakers on the spot, although some of them did not realize this a year ago, and, therefore, did not co-operate with the patrons of the factories for a better supply of milk until the season was pretty well advanced.

"When the hot weather started this year, there was quite a decrease in the percentage of high scoring cheese, and especially from factories where the curing rooms were not equipped with mechanical refrigeration. I was in the Kemptville district at that time, and it was possible in most cases, to draw the line between the cheese held in ordinary curing rooms and those held in rooms where the temperature could be controlled.

"Of course, if the milk is overripe or has other defects when delivered to the factories, it is impossible to have a high scoring cheese, regardless of the curing rooms, but knowing the cheesemakers as well as I do, and also the quality of cheese that our best men put up at all seasons of the year, I could notice a marked improvement in the cheese held in curing rooms where the temperature could be controlled.

"I also noticed that a great many of the makers operating factories equipped with cool curing rooms are not making cheese with as dry a texture as they did a few years ago, since they know that their cheese will not be subject to a high temperature in the curing rooms. This should improve the yield in these factories."

As is generally known, there was during 1939 and the early months of 1940, a great deal of activity on the part of Ontario factories, and particularly those in Central Ontario, with respect to securing financial assistance under the Cheese and Cheese Factories Improvement Act on account of insulation and refrigeration of the ripening rooms, and it is therefore, not surprising that since so many of the Ontario factories are now so equipped, there has, during recent months, been less activity in this respect on the part of Ontario factories.

During 1939 and the early months of 1940 there was not as much interest shown in improvement of ripening rooms in the factories in the province of Quebec as was the case in Ontario, but during recent months this movement has gathered greater momentum in the province of Quebec. Many factories in Quebec have been taking this matter up with the department during recent months as is illustrated by the fact that in three days last week, letters were received regarding the improvement of the ripening rooms of fifteen factories in this province.

Boxing Cheese Too Soon

Regulation No. 13 (d) (1) under the Dairy Industry Act reads as follows: "No person shall place in boxes within eight days from the date of manufacture, any cheese destined for export to the United Kingdom, Northern Ireland or Europe." Regulation No. 12 under the Cheese and Cheese Factories Improvement Act reads as follows: "No premium shall be paid on cheese which have been placed in boxes within eight days from the date of manufacture or otherwise contravene any provision of the Dairy Industry Act or regulations thereunder."

This has been interpreted by the Department of Justice to mean that eight full days must elapse from the day the cheese are made until they are placed in the boxes. For example, if milk is received in the factory and made into cheese on the 1st of the month, eight full days must elapse from the 1st before the cheese may be boxed, which means that boxing cannot take place before the 10th day. If the cheese are boxed prior to the 10th day, and if this is known to the grader, the grade certificate will be marked "Not eligible for export to the United Kingdom, Northern Ireland or Europe," as provided by regulation under the Dairy Industry Act. This usually means a reduction in the price which the factory receives for the cheese, and in accordance with Regulation No. 12 under the Cheese and Cheese Factories Improvement Act quoted above, no premium will be paid on cheese so boxed, even though the cheese may be otherwise eligible for premium.

Boxes

Reports received from the United Kingdom with respect to the condition in which the boxes containing cheese are now arriving there are most gratifying. Within the past few days, a letter was received from the London, England, Cargo Inspector of the Dairy Products Division, with reference to a shipment of Canadian cheese which were landed at Liverpool, shipped by rail to London, and transferred by barge in London. The boxes containing these cheese, which had received considerably more than usual handling, were reported as being sound, and in good condition.

In connection with the marking on the boxes, there have been some complaints that the marking is not as clear as it should be, and this applies, not only to registered numbers, date of manufacture, and vat numbers, but also to the weights. Evidently, cheese are being stored in warehouses in the United Kingdom where this commodity has never been handled before, and the light is bad in some of these warehouses.

It is very important, therefore, that the marking should be clear and legible on every box, and co-operation of the makers is desired in seeing that this is done in future. In all cases, the weights of the cheese should be marked with stencil, and the figures should be at least one inch in height. Regulations under the Dairy Industry Act require that marking of vat and date numbers be applied to the cheese within twenty-four hours from the time the cheese are removed from the press. Not all makers are following the required practice, and such makers are liable to prosecution, and cheese not marked within twenty-four hours are not eligible for premium.

Export

The quantity of Canadian cheese exported through the Port of Montreal to the United Kingdom from the 1st May to the 24th August, 1940, was approximately 11,800,000 lbs. greater than for the same period of a year ago.

The fact that the British Ministry of Food now desires to secure the greatest possible quantity of cheese from Canada during the current year, has received wide publicity. New Zealand's statistical year with reference to production and export of dairy products closes with the month of July. Information recently received from New Zealand is to the effect that during the ten months ending May, 1940, production of cheese was 24,640,000 lbs. greater and production of butter 22,400,000 lbs. greater than during the ten months ending May, 1939. Recent information also indicates that the British Ministry of Food has completed arrangements with both Australia and New Zealand for the purchase of their exportable surpluses of cheese and butter during the year ending July, 1941, and it is reported further that New Zealand has undertaken to supply to the British Ministry of Food during the year ending July 1941, 33,600,000 pounds more cheese than supplied during the year ending July, 1940. This will be an increase of 58,240,000 pounds as compared with the quantity supplied two years earlier. The prices to be paid for the exportable surpluses of Australian and New Zealand cheese and butter during the year ending July, 1941, are reported as the same as those paid for cheese and butter from these Dominions during the year ending July, 1940.

Although New Zealand's production of cheese during the ten months ending May, 1940, was 24,640,000 pounds greater, and the production of butter 22,400,000 pounds greater than during these ten months ending May, 1939, stocks of cheese in New Zealand as at the 1st of August, 1940, were only 75 per cent of stocks of cheese in New Zealand as at the 1st August, 1939. Stocks of butter in New Zealand as at the 1st August, 1940, were almost three times as great as stocks of butter in New Zealand as at the 1st August, 1939.

That the British Ministry of Food is moving New Zealand's surplus cheese more promptly than surplus butter indicates that the United Kingdom's position with respect to butter is comfortable. That this is the case is also indicated by information received a few weeks ago from the United Kingdom to the effect that the British Ministry of Food is not disposed to use Canadian dollar exchange for the purpose of purchasing Canadian butter.

Canadian Butter Situation

Stocks of butter in storage and transit in Canada as at the 1st August, 1940, were reported by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics as 3,898,090 lbs. greater than as at the 1st August, 1939. During August, 1939, net exports of butter to the United Kingdom amounted to 1,130,375 pounds, but when war was declared on the 3rd September, 1939, exports of butter to the United Kingdom ceased entirely. Taking into consideration the amount of butter exported to the United Kingdom during August, 1939, and that there is no similar export this year, it appears that our surplus as at the 1st August, 1940, is actually 5,028,000 pounds. Production of butter in Canada during the first seven months of the year showed an increase of .9 per cent, but during recent weeks the Ontario Creamery Association has reported a progressive decline in the rate of increase of production over that of a year ago. Distribution of butter during the first six months of the year has been calculated as 4,687,000 pounds greater than during the first six months of 1939. This increase in distribution during the first six months of 1940 does not differ greatly from the increase in distribution during the first six months of 1939 as compared with that of the same months of 1938. It is difficult to make any forecast at the present time with respect to the butter market during the next several months. It would seem unwise to base optimism concerning the butter market during the next few months on any probability of relieving this market by shipments of surplus Canadian butter to the United Kingdom. There is, as is generally known, a market in the United Kingdom for all the cheese Canada can supply; in fact, it is urgently desired that Canada increase the quantities of cheese exported. Production should, therefore, be directed as far as possible, to cheese rather than to butter.

Melvyn Douglas and lovely Loretta Young who are co-starred in one of the best comedies ever screened, "He Stayed for Breakfast," which starts Sunday after midnight at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Andy Hardy Meets Debutante"

As fresh in its viewpoint and as new in its appeal as though it were the first picture ever filmed of that popular family, the Hardys, Metro - Goldwyn-Mayer's "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" will bring laughs and a goodly share of tense drama to audiences at the Belle.

Comedy, of course, is an important goal of all the Hardy pictures but it is a brand of comedy which is as natural and homey as the typical family which the pictures portray, and it is always pointed up by contrast with the disappointments, embarrassments and near-tragedies to which any average family is the prey. "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" does not fall short of this ideal and there is never a moment when the onlooker loses his sympathy with Andy Hardy and his family no matter how comic their misfortunes may seem.

The story begins in Carvel with Mickey Rooney, as the ebullient Andy, falling in love with magazine pictures of a glamorous New York debutante. His secret is surmised by his high-school sweetheart, Ann Rutherford, and one of his school chums and he becomes the victim of some vigorous heckling for being so silly as to lose his heart to a girl he doesn't know. He answers their taunts by boasting, not very truthfully, that he really knows the glamour girl and that if he could just get to New York he would bring back a picture of them together to prove it.

Fate, in the person of Lewis Stone, as Judge Hardy, steps in by transporting the whole family to New York, where the Judge is to fight a legal case involving the financial welfare of the Carvel orphanage, and Andy is forced to make good on his boast. How he does it, employing an etiquette book published in 1881, a swank night club, a top hat too big for him and General Grant's tomb, makes for situations that are hilarious to an audience if agonizing to Andy.

Perhaps the most dramatic sequence is that in which Judge Hardy and Andy, who is disgusted with life and humiliated by his treatment at the hands of the Four Hundred, visit the Hall of Fame at New York University. There the Judge proves to Andy by a dozen examples that American youth has everything to be thankful for and very little to be disgusted about in comparison with the youth of other nations. And Mickey Rooney's transition from deep despair to quiet pride in his country is a bit of acting that has not been topped in any of his previous performances.

Judy Garland, who appears with Mickey for the third time in their film careers, is a lovely foil to the comedy of Andy and the glitter of New York scene. She plays a subdeb who admires and helps him finally to meet the debuntante, and contributes two song numbers, "Alone" and "I'm Nobody's Baby," in her best manner.

The other members of the "family," Fay Holden, Sara Haden and Cecilia Parker deliver their customary stellar performances and Diana Lewis sparkles as the glamour girl.

A clever comicolor cartoon, "Toni Turkey and His Harmonica Humdingers," the popular Belle newsreel, and a beautiful traveltalk in technicolor, "Night Descends on Treasure Island," precede the feature attraction.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Farmer's Daughter"

Martha Raye and Charles Ruggles, two of Hollywood's front-rank laugh-getters head the cast of Paramount's "The Farmer's Daughter," which opens with a special preview performance after Sunday midnite.

With two such zanies in the top roles, the film settles down to accumulate laughs, and its success in that direction is indicated by the unusual story angles. Charlie is a Broadway producer with a backer for his new production, who adds two conditions to the sum of money needed.

On opening night, Gertrude Michael deserts the troupe, pursuing her fleeing friend on his honeymoon. With a multitude of misgivings, Charlie allows Martha to try the leading role in the production.

Martha's awkwardness, mistaken by the audience for meant comedy effect, makes a smash hit of the show, and, with Gertrude out of his way, the arms of Denning are open to her.

Martha gets a chance to sing both sweet and swing songs in "The Farmer's Daughter." "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair" gets smooth treatment, while a new tune, "Jungle Jingle," finds Martha really "sending."

James Hogan directed from a screen-play by Lewis R. Foster. Also on the same program is "The Man Who Talked Too Much".

When production started on Warner Bros.' "The Man Who Talked Too Much," featuring Geo. Brent, Virginia Bruce, Brenda Marshall, Richard Barthelmess and William Lundigan, David Bruce bemoaned his fate His brief appearance is as the unjustly accused boy sent by Brent to the electric chair, early in the production.

"I don't mind going to the hot seat," he said, "but does it have to be so early in the picture?"

Brent consoled him by pointing out that Barthelmess was getting the worst of it. As the gangster who hires Brent as his mouthpiece, he eventually is confronted by justice in the form of a squad of policemen taking shots at him. To insure realism, eight expert marksmen "shoot" at him.

"The Man Who Talked Too Much," which is based on a play by Frank J. Collins, was directed by Vincent Sherman.

A colored cartoon "The Egg Collector" closes the bill. We urge you not to miss this gala holiday treat show.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Hitler-Beast of Berlin"

"Hitler-Beast of Berlin" which easily can be acclaimed one of the most wonderful motion pictures of this year, is now playing at the McCarthy theatre. The Ontario Censor Board in passing this picture for showings in Ontario added the following statement to their report, 'Every loyal Canadian should see this picture!' Never before and perhaps never again will you have the opportunity of seeing such a frank, fearless and entertaining picture which describes the manner in which Hitler and his Nazi gang, came to power. Also what is taking place in Germany by the German people themselves not in sympathy with the Hitler regime. It is not a propaganda film or newsreel, but is a truly sensational and dramatic thunderbolt of high entertainment. We would like to tell every individual person to see it, if this were possible, therefore to all readers of this column, take our recommendation see "Hitler-Beast of Berlin." A fine array of short subjects completes this great program.

"He Stayed For Breakfast"

Two of the screen's grandest stars, Loretta Young and Melvyn Douglas, with a fine cast of supporting funmakers, in what is already acclaimed by the preview critics as one of the best and timeliest romantic - comedies ever screened, "He Stayed For Breakfast" is the next attraction at the McCarthy theatre starting with a special show Sunday after midnight. On the same program will be shown an-all-star comedy entitled "His Bridal Fright" which promises to have you rolling in-the-aisles with laughter. Latest Fox News events also an interesting sports-subject "Diving Rhythm" completes this gala holiday show.

Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney in "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," the best of the delightful Hardy pictures, now showing on the Belle screen, with a special showing after Sunday midnight.

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

AFTER ONE YEAR OF STRUGGLE

What after one year of war has Nazi Germany to show as trophies of the war? Nowhere has she shed light on any nation. She has tried to destroy and has made peoples subject in name but not in heart to the aggressor of Berlin. She has not accomplished what she tried to achieve for Britain stands strong, and defiant of the machinations of the Hun and his ally, the Duce of Italy. She has tried to gather overrun nations into her fold but there remains the undertone that no Hitler nor Goebbels can read and fathom even with the aid of their hated gestapo.

Germany after a year of war has made herself hated by all nations with any sense of liberty. She has tried to terrify some nations but she has caused to be welded a solemn covenant even if it is not expressed in treaties, that prays and works for the overthrow of the Berlin usurper and tyrant. She has solidified world attitude and thought against her. True it is she beguiled the greedy, grasping fascists of Italy with the lure of conquest when France's impending collapse looked good to the Duce and his brethren. But the world outside of the Duce and his satellites has seen the hollowness and criminality of the Hitlerian policy. Germany has led the world to call her actions barbaric but the word is unfair to the barbarians of old. Even the word savage does not carry enough implication of degradation to justify its application to the Nazi Germans. A word with the lowest of implications may have to be created to describe the character of the Nazi in war and in diplomacy.

Now the entire world has been greatly strengthened, fortified and heartened by Britain as she prepared for her defence. Every day tells of heroic defence and of great efforts put forward for the carrying on of the war and of the victorious culmination of British effort. This is cheering and it must be disheartening to the enemy who has no world opinion backing him but rather the hate and scorn of all humanity.

British commerce plies the seas, the great merchant ships come and go, carry to Britain the wealth of a world in food and other supplies and bring out British products. The Royal Navy is strong as ever.

The Royal Air Force is glorious in its achievement and in its suggestions of the way in which victory is to come to Britain with the accompaniment of the thanks and gratitude of the world. The British army is the mightiest in history, the Channel and the Seas are as repellant as ever to a foe who would try to invade the British Isles.

Britain has created in the world the confidence that she will win and restore to freedom the races who have been subjected to aggression. The world knows Britain will win.

NAZIS SHOULD BE DISAPPOINTED

When Adolf Hitler set a schedule for himself and allowed his people to build their hopes upon it, he did what other dictators have done, he sowed the germs of disappointment at least. Now it is stated that there is a feeling in Germany that the war is not to be a short one. That will disappoint the Nazis who have wanted booty quickly.

Everyone has heard of the prophecy that the German Fuehrer was to be in London on August fifteenth. In Britain there was laughter with plenty of sarcasm over his "failure" to attend. The English, the Welsh, the Irish and the Scots made Hitler's non-appearance on the appointed date the butt of their humor. But if the story of the prediction had got to the Germans, there must have been disappointment in Germany that their Adolf had failed the "rendezvous." All Britain was 'waiting" for him on that occasion and he was not to be seen. He was neither in London, nor in any part of the British Isles, nor was he on the Channel. He was somewhere south or east of the Channel.

The German tactics in the blitzkrieg change but they do not prove effective. The Nazis never had any reason for believing that the British would quail before their frightfulness. They might have expected that British resistance would be the most prominent feature in the early stage of the war as British offensive thrusts will prove to be in the later period of the struggle.

Looking over a year of war the Germans have nothing to be very proud of. Germany has made nations bow to her, she has the butchery in Poland, the outrage on the Scandinavian countries, Denmark and Norway, the invasion of the Low Countries, which will do her no credit for overrunning these smaller states with a high-powered machine, to her credit as a betrayer of her neighbors and a cruel tyrant. There is nothing to be proud of in that and Germany has not yet shown one reason why Hitler should have started the war except for his insensate ambition to spite, destroy and crush other nations.

All in all, the Germans should feel disappointed that the first year of the war has found them possessing so little that will prove a final asset to Germany. What Germany has seized will certainly be the seeds of uprisings in the days that are ahead. Foreign corps which are to battle against the Hun are organized or about to be organized. The Poles are giving a good account of themselves, the Czech air squadron has joyed to take a smash at Goering's air force. About the French Gen. De Gaulle in England is assembling the basis of a great free French force which will strike for the emancipation of France from the grip of the enemy. It is said that Netherlanders in Canada and the United States will be recruited for services against the Nazis. The Duchess of Luxembourg has flown to London to make plans for a government of the people of her country. In the New World mighty plans are going forward for the construction of armaments for Britain. The Empire school of aviation is in operation.

'Casey at the Bat'

The world which 52 years ago began to hear "Casey at the Bat" is now talking to the man who wrote it for its author, Ernest A. Thayer, died recently at Santa Barbara, California, at the age of 77. He wrote the poem in 1888 while a young newspaperman.

The poem, a classic of baseball, was made famous by De Wolf Hopper, musical comedian, who recited it thousands of times in more than forty years, but its author did not share in that fortune.

Young Thayer, son of a wealthy New England textile manufacturer, was graduated in 1885 from Harvard, where he knew William Randolph Hearst, also a student. Mr. Thayer had been editor-in-chief of The Harvard Lampoon and two years after his graduation he went to work on the Hearst newspaper, The San Francisco Examiner. "Casey at the Bat" was one of a number of ballads printed in that paper over his initials.

It might have remained in relative obscurity but for the fact that a friend of Hopper's, as the veteran actor told the story years later, clipped it from the paper and that same year gave it to Hopper to recite at a special performance of "The Prince Methusalem," attended by the Chicago White Sox and the New York Giants baseball teams, at Wallack's Theatre, Thirtieth Street and Broadway.

Many Claimed Authership

Authorship of the poem was subsequently claimed by "some ten thousand imposters," as Hopper said in his memoirs, but the actor was convinced that Thayer had written it. He said he did not know the author's identity until he was playing some years later at Worcester, Mass., and was introduced to Mr. Thayer at a club. Describing the meeting the actor said: "Thayer indubitably wrote 'Casey' but he could not recite it. He was the most charming of men, but is slight of build and inclined to deafness and, like most persons so afflicted, very soft spoken. He had, too, at that time a decided Harvard accent.

"At the importunity of his fellow club members that night he recited some of his comic verse, but begged off on 'Casey' pleading that was my particular stunt. The crowd, which had been long at the bar, would not take no, however, and backed him into a corner.

"I have heard many another give 'Casey.' Fond mammas have brought their sons to me to hear their childish voices lisp the poem, but Thayer's was the worst of all. In a sweet, dulcet Harvard whisper he implored 'Casey' to murder the umpire, and gave this cry of mass animal rage all the emphasis of a caterpillar wearing rubbers crawling on a velvet carpet. He was rotten."

Differ on Publication Date

It might be noted further that while Mr. Thayer said the poem was first published in the newspaper in June, 1888, Mr. Hopper said he learned it from a clipping from The San Francisco Examiner and first recited it in May, 1888.

Daniel M. Casey of Silver Springs, Md., has several times claimed to be the "mighty Casey" of the poem, but asserted he was a pitcher and not a crack batsman and also that the famous game was played in Philadelphia and not in Mudville. One of the newspaper reports of Mr. Casey brought a letter to the sports editor of The Times which asserted Hopper had changed the name of Mike Kelly to "Casey." And the editor quoted a letter by Mr. Thayer that "the poem has no history."

The Blockade

(From the Economist)

The power of blockade, as an instrument of military success, has been constantly overstated since last September. It could never be more than a means to the end of victory in the field, and it was heartening to hear Mr. Dalton refer to economic warfare as only one among many weapons. The aim of blockade and other methods of exerting pressure upon the enemy's war economy is simply to weaken his powers of attack and endurance. Without parallel steps to strengthen those powers on this side of the battle, by the full mobilization of economic resources. the efficacy of blockade is a mirage, a delusion comparable to the Maginot-complex that bemused and enervated France.

Nevertheless, blockade remains a major indispensable weapon, which will play a crucial part in the further stages of the war. Its use is based upon the enemy's lack of materials, which his war industries and fighting forces need—metals, alloys, textiles, rubber, vegetable oils, animal feeding stuffs, farm fertilizers and oil. The index of striking power in modern war is power to produce, and the first question now is whether Germany's conquests have yielded supplies of the basic materials of production to make up her former deficiencies. The answer is an encouraging one, except in the important instances of iron and steel and aluminum. True ordinary controls by occupation, intimidation or alliance, practically the whole of Europe outside the expanding sphere of Soviet Russia; but Europe is far from able to supply her own needs of either raw materials or foodstuffs. The Continent, in fact, is scarcely less blockadable than the Reich.

Nevertheless, on balance, Germany's vulnerability to economic pressure has been little altered. Warplanes and tanks need oil and petrol, and apart from captured stocks Western Europe has yielded no oil at all for the invaders. Italy, too, has very little oil apart from what was accumulated during the months of her non-belligerency.

x x

The food position, too, will be serious. Blockaded, German Europe is potentially worse off than Germany was before. Normally, Europe is a net importer of all the basic foodstuffs except potatoes. For all kinds of animal feeding stuffs and many fertilizers, as well as for edible oils, European agriculture is very largely dependent upon imported supplies that the blockade can now cut off. In addition, the mobilization of peasants and farm workers and the ravages of actual warfare, coming hard upon an abnormal frost, have gravely diminished the chances of a good harvest all over the Continent.

In sum, therefore, Germany's basic gains by conquest are not enough to weaken Britain's blockade weapon very much. The invaders have, admittedly, captured stock of food, oil, war equipment and raw materials, as well as scrap of all descriptions. But most of these stocks cannot be replaced in Europe. They are short-term gains only. While they last, Germany is undoubtedly stronger than she was before the campaign of Western Europe began, but it is now the task to blockade to ensure that she will never be so strong again, to make certain that, encompassed by her conquests, she will become progressively weaker.

Before the blitzkrieg started, the Allied blockade was hampered by the existence on Germany's borders of neutral countries whose right to trade with the outside world was fully recognized. The only means of limiting the usefulness of neighboring neutrals to the enemy was by agreement; but the war trade agreements could not bar the door as blockade can. There remains now only Russia. For the moment it is not Russia's interest to hew wood and draw water for the Reich, and it should be well within the capacity of sea power and firm diplomacy to seal the gaps and starting holes still left.

x x

At bottom, it is a simple strategical problem. So long as the British navy commands the Atlantic sea routes, the Mediterranean approaches, the Western Mediterranean and the Levant, Hitler's military successes make very little difference to the pattern of economic warfare, unless they lead to decisive changes at sea. As Napoleon found, the British blockade cannot be beaten on land.

The final question, then, is: Has the strategical position at sea been altered? The proof of the pudding will be in the eating. It remains to be seen whether the Axis powers can effect any decisive change in the balance of power at sea. There is nothing to suggest that they can. German submarines and bombers have so far failed to disturb the carrying-out of the navy's daily duties. The Italian navy has shown no confidence in its power to wrest supremacy in the Mediterranean from the British.

Tactically, Germany with more ports and bases is better off than she was. Strategically, she has made no advance, unless she can turn the tables, either by invading and subjugating the British Isles themselves or by isolating them, cutting off vital supplies by sinking ships and blockading ports.

Germany cannot beat the blockade. She can only try to defeat the blockaders.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Pulse Rate Shows Strength of Heart

While examining a group of professional women swimmers before a ten mile race, I found that after the stationary run exercise, two steps to the second, the pulse rate in every swimmer was back to normal within two minutes. In fact, the pulse rate of the winner was back to normal within fifteen seconds.

The increase in the rate at which the heart or pulse beats due to exercise and the length of time required for it to return to normal, is one of the best methods of measuring the strength of the heart.

One of the tests is noting the difference of the pulse rate when you are lying down and standing up. The heart rate is increased, in normal hearts, 12 to 15 beats from the rate when lying down.

The test we used in examining recruits for overseas service was to have them do 50 steps of the stationary run, two steps to the second. If the pulse rate increased 25 to 40 beats and returned to its normal rate within two minutes, the recruit was accepted as far as his heart was concerned.

Drs. Albert S. Hyman and Aaron E. Parsonnet, in their book 'The Failing Heart of Middle Age', state that the amount of the increase of the pulse rate after exercise in individuals varies with age. In young individuals with normal hearts, increase in the pulse rate after sudden excessive effort may amount to as much as 50 beats per minute; for example, with a resting rate of 80 beats per minute, at the end of exercise the rate may be 130.

The heart rate for middle aged normal individuals after exercise should not be more than 25 per cent, that is a heart rate of 80 should not be more than 100 after exercise.

Normal pulse rates in a series of 100,000 insurance examinations ran from 60 to 90 a minute with the average at 80. Instead of the two minutes given in the army tests, three minutes is given as within normal limits for the heart to return to its normal rate after exercise by insurance examiners. In fact, most physicians consider a heart normal in which the beat returns to normal within five minutes after exercise.

These figures should calm the fears of many who think they have failing heart.

Of course, being excited or having just eaten a heavy meal may send up the pulse rate 10 to 20 beats.

NAZIS HAPPY TO BE PRISONERS

These German soldiers appear to be in a happy frame of mind despite their capture by the British. The war is over for them, unless a Nazi bomb happens to hit their internment camp.

"Britain Sold us Ships"

A letter to the Editor of the N. Y. Times:

With Great Britain needing our moral and material aid in her courageous single-handed fight to preserve freedom for the world, it might be well to mention that during the Spanish-American War, when the United States was sorely in need of warships, Great Britain sold two newly completed cruisers to us. These were the New Orleans and the Albany. They were built at Barrow-in-Furness.

Bettina F. White.

'O'Canada'

(Vancouver Province))

The Women's Canadian Club of Vancouver suggests that when our patriotic hymn, "O Canada" is sung in this city during the war it should be sung in the Buchan version rather than the Weir version.

The Buchan version does very poetically and feelingly recognize the membership of Canada in the British Commonwealth of Nations, while the Weir version does not. The Buchan version associates Canada with Great Britain and invokes the help of God in the affairs of Canada and the Empire. The Weir version is more narrowly a Canadian anthem.

At Gracie Fields' memorable concert here the singing of "O Canada" impressive and moving as always in the strains of its music, was marred by the clash of the two versions in the use of the words.

Here is the Buchan verson:

O Canada, our heritage, our love,
Thy worth we praise all other lands above,
From sea to sea, throughout thy length,
From Pole to border land.
At Britain's side, whate'er betide,
Unflinchingly we'll stand.
With heart we sing: "God save the King,
Guard thou the Empire wide", do we implore,
"And prosper Canada from shore to shore."

A pretty wedding took place quietly at Holloway Street United Church personage, 44 Hillside St., at three o'clock this afternoon when Eva May, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hogle, became the bride of Mr. Charles Elliott Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Anderson. The bride wore a smart ensemble of rosewood wool crepe with wine hat and accessories and silver fox cape. She wore a corsage of Johanna Hill roses. Miss Helen Wotten was bridesmaid and was attired in Heavenly blue crepe with black accessories and corsage of red roses. Mr. Jack Sills was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, 30 West Bridge Street. Later Mr. and Mrs. Anderson left on a wedding trip to Ottawa, the bride travelling in airforce blue with wine accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

BRYANT—BROCKWAY

Pink and white gladioli adorned the altar and chancel of Christ Church for the wedding at four o'clock this afternoon of Ethel Lorraine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Brockway and Lieut. T. W. Bryant, 102nd N.B.C. Heavy Battery, C.D. R.C.A. Canadian Active Service Force, son of Mr and Mrs. George Bryant, Prince Rupert, B.C. Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church officiated.

Mr. George Maybee presided at the organ for wedding music and during the signing of the register, Miss Dorothy Fallis, Toronto, sang Grieg's "I Love Thee".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a charming picture in her gown of white chenille taffeta, with finger tip veil caught to her hair with a halo of white gardenias. She carried a white prayer book, tied with white gardenias.

Miss Margaret Brockway, Toronto, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and wore flowered taffeta with touches of royal blue, and a graceful Mary Stuart headdress. She carried yellow and pale pink Butterfly roses.

Misses Betty and Jean Brockway sisters of the bride as bridesmaids, were attired in similar gowns of charme pink and turquoise blue net over satin, with flowered headdresses. They carried Colonial bouquets.

Little Miss Shirley Clarke was flower girl, wearing a dainty frock of salmon pink taffeta with a garland of cornflowers in her hair. She carried an old fashioned nosegay.

Mr. Bill Thompson, Toronto, was groomsman and the ushers were Sergeant Allan Davis of Prince Rupert, and Corporal Charles Simmons, Belleville.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 8 Warham Street, the rooms being beautifully decorated with white and pink gladioli. Mrs. Brockway received her guests wearing hyacinth blue crepe with matching hat and corsage of yellow Butterfly roses and bouvardia.

The bride and groom left for the Thousand Islands and will enjoy a boat trip to Quebec City. The bride chose for travelling gray wool crepe with navy accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Winnipeg.

Out of town guests at the wedding included—Mr. John Pugh of Oshawa; Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. W. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Flower, Mr. Frank Hendershot, Mr. Don Abbott, Mrs. J. C. Grainger, Mrs. Helling, Mr. Bert Helling, Mrs. Gordon Parker, Miss Hilda Standing, Miss Geraldine Flower and Miss Dorothy Thompson, all of Toronto.

SOBLE—BURR

The Victoria Avenue Baptist Church parsonage was the scene of a quiet wedding when Rev. C. T. Olmstead united in marriage Carol Squire, eldest daughter of Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Burr, Ameliasburg, to William Frederick, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Soble, Ameliasburg.

They were attended by cousins of the bride Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fox.

The bride looked very charming in a dress of wine celanese crepe with black accessories. Mrs. Fox wore black and white crepe with white accessories.

After the wedding Corporal and Mrs. Soble left for a short trip to North Hastings. On returning home, Corporal Soble will join his regiment at camp and Mrs. Soble will remain at her home of the time being.

McGUIRE—YOUNG

St. Michael's Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Friday, when Margaret Evelyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Young became the bride of Mr. James Francis McGuire, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McGuire. Rev. J. J. Collins officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Albert Young, was charming in royal blue crepe with matching hat, white accessories and corsage of red roses. Mrs. William Tracy was matron of honour, wearing golden brown crepe matching accessories, with corsage of pink roses.

Gunner Fred McGuire, 3/47th Field Battery, Kingston, was groomsman for his brother.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, 23 Brassey Street, the rooms being beautifully decorated with autumn flowers. Mrs. Young wearing black sheer, and Mrs. McGuire, attired in black crepe, received with the bride and groom. About one hundred guests were present.

Later Mr. and Mrs. McGuire left on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the bride travelling in a smart ensemble of Queen's blue. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Among the out of town guests was Cadet Harry McGuire of the Royal Canadian Navy, Kingston, brother of the groom.

OBITUARY

LATE RICHARD MORLEY HAGGERTY

(Stirling)

Stirling, Aug. 31 (Special)—Residents from all parts of Hastings County gathered on Friday afternoon to pay their final tribute of respect at the funeral of one of its oldest and most respected natives, Richard Morley Haggerty, aged 81 years. Born in Stirling district, deceased spent his entire life in the county, he being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Haggerty, whose names appear among those of the earliest settlers in the district. A true son of the soil he was recognized as one of the most successful agriculturists of the county. A diligent worker for the general good of the community in which he lived, a staunch friend to hundreds of people, who looked upon him proudly as their neighbor.

On Friday afternoon, in drizzly dreary weather that added to the darkness felt throughout the entire district by his sudden passing, workmen laid aside their tools, farmers left their fields, important County municipal officials left their desks to be present at the funeral, which took place from the family residence under the direction of Rev. W. H. V. Walker, assisted by Rev. K. Stewart. Richard Haggerty had completed a well done earthly task and the tribute paid was fitting and earnest. Rev. Mr. Walker, in conducting the service, delivered a comforting message to those who mourned and during the service a requested message in song was rendered by Arthur Duncan of Stirling. Deceased was a senior member of the Kirk Session of St. Andrew's Church, West Huntingdon, where he attended services with marked regularity. Fraternally he was an honorary member of L.O.L., No. 300 under whose auspices the last rites were administered at the graveside.

As County road patrolman for several years he won the sincere friendship of many with whom he came in daily contact and his passing creates a vacancy in the life of the entire district that can never be filled.

Left to mourn besides his sorrowing widow, formerly Edith Thompson are four sons, Morley and Donald of West Huntingdon; John of Halifax, N.S.; Warren of Trenton; and six daughters, Mrs. Wallace McInroy, Moira (Helen); Mrs. John Wallace, West Huntingdon (Lillian); Mrs. W. Clancy, Wellman's Corners (Margaret); Mrs. Ed. Fitzpatrick, Windsor (Molly); Mrs. George Varty, Toronto (Ruth); Mrs. Kenneth Ray, Campbellford (Hilda.) There is also one sister, Mrs. J. S. Sprague, Holloway, and one brother, Mr. James Haggerty, of Belleville.

The pall bearers were Messrs. W. Clancy; John Wallace; George Varty; Wallace McInroy; E. Fitzpatrick and Harry Thompson.

Interment was made in Stirling cemetery.

Advice to the Lovelorn

The Lament of a Young Lawyer

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I read with great interest and no little amazement your answer to the letter of J. G. published a couple of weeks ago. The girl J. G. said if her boy friend were out of work and couldn't afford to take her places, she wouldn't mind one bit. But he's a college graduate and has a good profession.

"In your answer you say: 'As the young man has a good profession it can't be lack of money that's making him so housebound.'

"As to that, let me say I'm a college graduate, four years at —— University and three years at law school. I have a good profession (attorney at law). Yet I don't have enough money to buy a light lunch for a humming bird.

"Just because a man is a college graduate and has a good profession doesn't mean that his pockets are lined with anything except the usual cloth. People think because you're a professional man you're making money. They don't realise that three-fourths of the persons opening your office door during the first two or three years of practice are bill collectors and not clients.

He should give himself a little more time before becoming discouraged.

And I wonder if he hasn't overlooked some of the well-travelled roads young lawyers take in getting themselves established. It just happens that I have a wider acquaintance among young lawyers than among those of other professions, and have heard them tell repeatedly how they've caught on.

One way is to visit judges' chambers and tell them they will take cases for clients unable to pay. I realise that the young man has got to eat and keep a roof over his head while this unprofitable business is in progress. If he makes a good showing in the courts it will not be long before he has clients who are willing to pay.

He can join a political party, and I am not giving away any state secrets when I say that all political parties have a way of looking after their own. If the young man will get out and hustle for his political party, his party will do something for him.

Another way to avoid these humming-bird lunches is to ally one's self to civic agencies such as the Legal Air Society, where many a bright young lawyer has discovered an entering wedge to profitable legal business.

In law, as in medicine and other professions, the personal equation counts for so much. An agreeable young man who dresses decently is always in demand whether he has money to spend or not.

I should like to show my correspondent scores of letters from girls writing something to this effect: "If he'd just come and see me once in a while, I'd be delighted. I know he hasn't money to spend, and I don't want him to spend money on me".

On Bringing Gifts to Your Hostess' Children

Remember, when you were a child how thrilled you were when a visitor arrived with a present that delighted your heart, intrigued your interest. You didn't know and you didn't care, whether it was expensive. But you did know, by instinct, if the gift had been chosen by some one who knew and loved children, someone who had chosen the gift with care and understanding. (And even if you were as mannerly as mannerly could be, you didn't think much of a guest who arrived without something for you!)

Knowing children, we probably realise that it's more fun for them and for us to take the gifts with us, rather than to send them to the children after the visit, as we may decide to do with our gift to the hostess. This gives children a more personal participation in the gift.

If there are several children in the family, we may either take a gift for each one, or one gift chosen to amuse them all.

If you bring the children candy, you may run the risk of being unpopular with your hostess. If you have children, you'll know why; if you haven't, you can easily figure out why.

Children are usually enchanted with gifts that have their names on them. A little girl (a big one, too) will treasure a small white linen handkerchief with her first name embroidered on it in a bright pastel shade. Either a boy or girl will welcome a pen or pencil with his or her full name stamped on it. A box of letterpaper or cards (or a combination-box of these), of a type appropriate to the age of the child, may be stamped with the first name of the child. And show me one little girl who wouldn't love to have a charming little pocket-book.

A scrap book is an excellent idea too . . . children, proverbially, are collectors. If you know the child is enthusiastic about collecting stamps or coins or butterflies or whatever, an addition to these will be welcomed with special glee. Or you might bring the beginnings of such a hobby.

Never have we had such beautiful books for children . . . stories of the history of this country, books of adventure, books about children in other lands, fairy tales magnificently illustrated.

A world of original and entertaining gifts for children await our choice in the toy departments. And the trend that has happened in the vast world of games makes it easy for a guest to choose a game that will captivate children . . . and lure the grown-ups too!

Sliver Down You Overweights

By HELEN FOLLETT

Figuratively speaking, the phrail sex can be divided into three classes, the skinny ones who count their ribs, the cream puff shapes who count their calories and the untroubled ones who conform to normal measurements.

Heavyweights have difficulties in getting becoming clothes; they are likely to wrinkle early, and excess baggage slows them up generally. If they are in good health, if adipose padding is not caused by some glandular disturbance, they can sliver down and will feel all the better for it.

Train the Appetite

Reducing is simply a matter of cutting down on fat-forming foods. The appetite may need a little training; it yearns for sweets, pastries, starches and it must not have them. There is plenty of other good chow—broiled lean meats, sea foods, vegetables that grow above ground, green salads, fruits, cottage cheese, buttermilk, unsweetened lemonade.

Exercise is necessary if fat has collected at the mid-section. Lie on the back in bed, hands under the buttocks. Lift the legs slowly until you are fairly standing on the back of your neck. Lower them slowly. Ten minutes night and morning. These movements shuffle off fat cells, tighten abdominal muscles, have a favorable effect upon bulky thighs, hips and waistline. Go to it, if you stand among the plumpies.

Lacquer Smart for Colonial Rooms

As an accent of added elegance in colonial-type rooms, lacquered or japanned furniture is being revived. Exquisite examples of this exotic mode of decoration are seen in the finer interiors of the day; discovery of these, and the growing vogue for English Regency with its own black and gold adornment, suggest a still greater emphasis on these pieces, which harmonize well with oriental pottery, ivories and silks.

For those interested in the background of today's fashion for lacquered furniture, as well as for the collector of such pieces, an enjoyable half hour is in store through inspection of the American Wing of the Metropolitan Museum. Exciting because of their rarity are several recent accessions, rounding out the largest and most varied group of antique lacquered furniture in America.

Lacquering furniture became a popular fad in the early years of the 18th century, when, in Queen Anne's day, amateurs as well as professionals took it up. Even young ladies in finishing school had their fling at the fascinating hobby. But the pieces in the museum are the work of skilled American craftsmen who followed the designs most popular abroad.

Mothers Clever at Justifying Selfishness With Their Children

Dear Miss Chatfield:

I'm the widowed mother of an only daughter for whom I have sacrificed everything. I sent her through college at great cost to myself and naturally thought she would go to work and do for me what I have done for her. Instead she's going to be married right away and I am to be cast out of her life. This has come as a terrible shock to me as I had no idea she was thinking of marriage, though I knew this man was very attentive to her. She has let me believe they were just friends. If you can give me any comfort I would appreciate it as I have nowhere to turn.

Mrs. S.

Answer:

No real comfort, perhaps, but a few thoughts which haven't occurred to you, evidently. Your daughter deceived you because she didn't have the courage to face what she knew was to come: your indignation and resentment. In all kindness, you have made the mistake that many mothers make, particularly widowed mothers, of believing your daughter belonged to you, body and soul, present and future. You have failed to take into account her natural desire for a husband and home of her own.

Yes you saw beyond the cradle to the college, sacrificed to give the girl an education that would fit her for life. But you didn't see beyond the college to the larger life which every girl wants and should have, if there is a way to lay hands on it.

Had you thought of your own youth you would have remembered how you felt at her age. You were not less loving or dutiful a daughter because you married and moved away from your parents' home. Then think before it is too late and instead of alienating your child by making her feel an ingrate, try to get her point of view and give her the sympathy she needs now as she may never need it again. Only in this way can you hold on to her.

After all, love and marriage are the normal cycle of life for a girl. She shouldn't be cheated of her rights to happiness because her mother is a widow. Can't we all look around us and see fine, attractive women who would have made excellent wives and mothers, see them going it alone through life because there was a parent to be looked after deferred to, and that parent said, "Stay with me". And they stayed and youth passed and with it opportunity for marriage.

No doubt these mothers failed to realize what they were doing. They justified their selfishness on one score or another. But it was selfishness and those they loved best paid the price. No doubt these daughters had a satisfaction in the great renunciations they made for their parents. But I wonder if, when the parents are gone, these daughters don't ask themselves the question: Why did my mother cheat me?

What Could Be Better Than C.B.&C.?

CORNED BEEF is a good picnic meat, and also good for the cold meat platter, when it is well cooked and sliced thin. Cook new young cabbage with it and you have a dish fit for a king—or for Jiggs.

Today's Menu

Corned Beef and Cabbage
Boiled New Potatoes
Allerton Salad
Grant Cake Iced Tea or Coffee

Corned Beef and Cabbage

3 or 4 lbs. corned beef	1 medium sized cabbage

Wash meat in cold water, put in heavy kettle, cover with boiling water, cover and simmer until meat is tender, between three and four hours. Add cabbage cut in eights or smaller pieces suitable for serving, and cook, uncovered, until tender, which should not be more than from 5 to 10 minutes if the cabbage is fresh and tender. Serve on large platter with cabbage around meat. This amount of meat would serve 8 or 10 persons and would leave plenty to serve cold, in sandwiches and for hash. It is difficult to get a good cut of corned beef of less weight than this.

Allerton Salad

Wipe, pare and cube 1 cucumber, add an equal amount of celery, cut in thin slices crosswise. 1-2 as much English walnut meats or peanuts broken in pieces; 1-3 the amount of finely chopped green pepper, moisten with your favorite salad dressing and pile on slices of peeled, chilled tomatoes on lettuce.

Grant Cake

1-2 cup butter	1 1-2 tsps. soda
1 cup sugar	3-4 tsp. allspice
1 egg	3-4 tsp. cloves
1 cup sour milk	1 1-2 tsps. cinnamon
2 3-4 cups flour
1 1-4 cups raisins	1-2 tsp. salt

Cream butter, add sugar gradually, creaming well, then add beaten eggs and sour milk. Sift 2 1-2 cups flour with soda, baking soda and salt and add to first mixture; then add raisins, seeded and cut in quarters, and sprinkled with remaining 1-4 cup flour. Turn into oblong cake pan and bake in 350 degrees F. oven for 50 minutes. Ice with coffee confectioners' frosting.

Coffee Confectioners' Frosting

2 tbsps. hot coffee	Confectioners sugar
1 tsp. butter	Pinch salt
1-2 tsp. vanilla

Melt butter in coffee and add vanilla, salt and confectioners' sugar until mixture is the right consistency to spread.

Lovely Flower Gardens About Niagara Falls Wonder of Visitors

IT ISN'T all rushing torrents of foaming waters at Niagara, even although the Falls seem to constitute the prime attraction to visitors. The wise traveller makes a pilgrimage to Niagara to visit some of the most beautiful flower gardens in the world, for he knows that the miles and miles of roses are just as beautiful as the majestic Falls themselves. There are 200,000 acres in the Niagara Parks, and to enjoy them all one has to proceed systematically. One good way is to start at the bottom and work up the thirty-six mile stretch along the Canadian side of the Niagara River, between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario.

The Peace Bridge

Coming off the Peace Bridge from Buffalo is beautiful Mather Park with its colorful formal gardens which afford a colorful foreground to the recently restored historic Fort Erie, southern terminus of Queen Elizabeth Way, Ontario's new 91-mile express highway to Toronto. Niagara Boulevard follows close to the river to the Falls. Beautifully landscaped all the way, the boulevard takes the traveller along the placid river until suddenly the mighty torrent pours over the precipice that forms the famous cataracts, crashing to the rocks below with a roar.

From there the road leads to Queen Victoria Park, gardens always beautiful with flowers sprayed by the mist from the Falls. The Oakes' Garden Theatre, which is not a theatre at all, but is one of this continent's most beautiful array of gardens, is located at the place where the Rainbow Bridge is being built over the gorge. Through tall tupils in the Spring, roses in Summer and dahlias in Autumn, the grounds are a changing carpet of color.

Rose Garden

Another superb spectacle is the magnificent Rose Garden near the Falls Administration headquarters. Here virtually every known variety of rose is grown, including several developed in the parks. Further north is another beauty spot, the new garden of early roses, set out near the Whirlpool Rapids. The Glen, once part of the Niagara riverbed, is now a spot that abounds in rare plants and ferns.

Horticulturists who visit Niagara delight to learn about the School for Apprentice Gardeners maintained by the Niagara Parks Commission and the only one of its kind in America. Visitors are welcome at this unique establishment, and if one has a garden it is grand to talk with experts and come away with some swell hints and ideas.

One of the most beautiful gardens in the Niagara Falls region is at Hamilton on Burlington Bay. Here, formal gardens, both private and public, present a display that is worth coming far to see. Vast beds, carefully tended, sweep to the edges of estates and beyond. Where the public gardens leave off amateur gardens have taken over and have created a flower expanse of breath-taking beauty. Close by are the rock gardens of Hamilton. Stretching along the upper road passing through the region, their natural rugged beauty in appealing contrast to the carefully planned and nurtured flower beds along the route.

Vincent's Infection

In recent weeks I've seen a few cases of Vincent's Infection or "Trench Mouth", to give it the name most of us know it by. It is by no means confined to adults or men, as the name, which it got during the first World War, may suggest. Children are subject to it also.

After it got its start abroad, conditions in the trenches made it epidemic. After the war the soldiers many of them chronic carriers of the infection, brought it home to spread all over this continent. Now it is a very common infection and it seems to me that it is on the increase. Certainly I know I see a lot more of it now than I used to.

The first symptom of trench mouth may be a general feeling of illness, and a slight rise in temperature and a lack of appetite. The throat becomes sore and sores can often be seen on the tonsils. However, the most serious attack is made upon the gums where large, ulcerative sores appear, usually accompanied by pus. There is an unpleasant taste in the mouth most of the time, and the breath is quite apt to be foul. Only in the mildest cases can the patient take solid food.

Outbreaks of trench mouth in a person can usually be cleaned up in a week or ten days, but the bacteria that caused the outbreak are much more difficult to eradicate permanently than in most diseases. Consequently, when a child has had the disease once, parents must expect a recurrence. With this in mind it is wise to have the mouth examined three months after the first outbreak to see if the germs are all cleared away. These germs lodge in little pockets in the gums, between the teeth and wait there until a favorable opportunity comes to give trouble again.

The most dangerous form of this disease is the chronic type. Instead of an acute attack, there are only mild symptoms—the gums are a little red, teeth are a bit tender, and there is a tendency to bleeding of the gums. Diseases of this sort are the kind that keep people feeling under the weather, yet they are so slight that they don't bother the patient enough to get him to do anything about it. The countless cases like this are what make the disease so widespread. If a person is really sick with acute trench mouth, he is careful about others. But if the case is chronic, he goes about carelessly leaving a trail of infection upon drinking glasses, spoons and the lips of those he kisses.

The proper person to see about a case of trench mouth is your dentist, although the doctor may be needed if the case becomes serious.

The Stars Say

For Sunday, September 1

SUNDAY'S horoscope is an excellent one for religious, mystical, humanitarian and kindred pursuits, with the prospect of romance, social adventure and attachments of an unconventional or irregular aspect having full swing. But it is likely that this may bring grief, calamity or regret if not discreetly handled.

Those whose birthday it is may have an exciting and dramatic year, with many peculiar or intriguing adventures, gainful and benefic if managed with discretion, but perilous and devastating if rushed into precipitately and rashly. Social and romantic activities may be paramount to business or ordinary interests.

A child born on this day may be active and dynamic, possibly in some unusual or spectacular way. It should be original, ingenious, artistic and genial.

For Monday, September 2

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for splendid opportunity for progress and prosperity, with high aims and aspirations attaining lofty goals by the use of greatly stimulated forces and faculties. It is a time for dynamic action and expansive purpose, with all contributing to eminent success and satisfaction, but be discreet with all writings and documents.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of high fulfilments, with great ambitions and worthy aspirations attained by splendid energies and initiative as well as sound plans, executive ability and solid support from those in exalted positions. It is a time for pushing with vigor and logic, but with precaution as to litigation and complications through papers or writings.

A child born on this day may be opulent, expansive, generous and great spirited for public welfare, although egotistic, bombastic and self-centered. However, it should attain popularity and high personal prestige, and perhaps public acclaim or trust.

Empire Rallies Men and Supplies To Help Britain

Dominions Achieve New Heights in Making Instruments of War for Fight With Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy

By H. M. PETERS
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

AFTER a year of war Hitler sprawls over Europe, behind him a string of military triumphs over weak nations. Before him, rising to greater military strength than ever before, stand Great Britain and the Empire. That's the picture—after a year of war. Britain has been fighting for twelve months—in Belgium and France and Norway and Africa—and has yet to achieve her maximum strength. She is just starting mass production of airplanes, to show Germany what she is capable of doing in the air. The Royal Navy is stronger than it was in September, 1939.

Backed by Dominions.

Behind her, contributing a never-ending stream of men and war materials, are Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the other nations of the Empire. Like Britain, they also are just starting to mass-produce the instruments of war that will stop Hitler.

After a year of war Hitler finds his greatest enemy—Britain—far more formidable than the Britain of 1939 or, indeed, the Britain of the First Great War. He has little time to review his successes against the weak nations because British bombing planes, steadily becoming more numerous, are dropping bombs on Germany every night.

A year of war, started Sept. 1, 1939, when Germany invaded Poland, divided itself into four main phases. They were:

1. The eastern campaign in which Germany and Russia defeated and divided Poland, and Russia attacked little Finland.
2. The winter of defensive behind the Maginot Line and the Westwall, of naval blockade and conflict at sea.
3. Land war in the West, the German overrunning of five nations from Norway south to France.
4. The Battle of Britain, and the attendant Anglo-Italian war in Africa.

Poland was fighting stubbornly when the Russians invaded her Sept. 17 from the east. Then the fight was over. Russia soon turned upon little Finland, and finally, after a hard struggle, penetrated the Karelian Isthmus defences and obtained the city of Viipuri (Viborg) and other concessions.

The Polish campaign gave the first real hint that this war was not to be fought as other wars. The Germans threw mechanized troops out far ahead of the main troops to disrupt communications, always in close co-operation with the air force. Subsequently in other campaigns the weapons of espionage, of fifth columns, ideological propaganda and of parachute troops further emphasized the difference between the Second Great War and its predecessor of 1914-18.

Winter Campaigns.

Through the winter was waged a war of position. It was the stage of the defensive behind the Maginot Line, the naval blockade of Germany and the examination of ships going to neutral countries surrounding the Reich.

In this period came the winter's brightest spot, the flashing of naval guns off Montevideo in the 14-hour running seafight in which three British cruisers—the Exeter, Achilles and Ajax—disabled and drove the pocket-battleship Admiral Graf Spee into the Uruguayan capital, ending a threat to Allied and neutral shipping in the South Atlantic. The Graf Spee was scuttled four days later, on Dec. 17.

The first contingent of the Canadian Active Service Force landed in the United Kingdom Dec. 17 and others followed during the winter until a strength of two divisions in the United Kingdom was attained. Later on Australians and New Zealanders joined in the defence of Britain.

The third stage—war of movement—opened with dramatic suddenness April 9 when Germany invaded and then overran Denmark and Southern Norway. Denmark accepted the rule of force from the start, but the Norwegians fought back bravely and welcomed British and French troops in an effort to drive out the invaders.

But although the Allies landed in some strength at Namsos and Andalsnes in mid-Norway, and around Narvik in the far north, the Germans were too securely based to be ousted. Their air force commanded the Skagerrak, across which they ferried troops in great numbers. The Allied troops had to be withdrawn from Central Norway on May 1. Subsequent events in the Low Countries and France compelled withdrawal of the Allied forces from Narvik for other duties.

Chamberlain Resignation.

The Norwegian campaign brought about the resignation of Prime Minister Chamberlain and the choice of Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, to succeed him. Mr. Churchill, declaring to the country tha he had nothing to offer but "blood and tears, toil and sweat," formed a truly National Government, with Ministers ranging from L. S. Amery, the Tory diehard, on the extreme right, across the breadth of British political life to Ernest Bevin, trades union executive, on the left.

Mr. Churchill's accession to office to oppose Hitler whose policies he had fought for five years came on the very day that Germany smashed into the Netherlands and Belgium. In their determination to remain neutral, King Leopold of Belgium and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands had refused to discuss defense measures with the Allies.

This refusal was fatal. The British and French troops moved into the Low Countries from behind the "Little" Maginot Line on the French-Belgian border, but no proper co-operation could be set up to weld the Allied troops into a unified fighting force.

At the psychological moment the Germans smashed with their mechanized forces at the hinge, near historic Sedan, where the advancing French troops pivoted from the permanent Maginot Line.

The Germans broke through, crossed the Meuse River and split off the British expeditionary force from the main French army. The Netherlands had already surrendered, and on May 28 King Leopold ordered the Belgian army to lay down its arms.

The defeat of France followed quickly. While Britain made an amazing rescue of more than 300,000 British and French troops from Dunkerque, Italy entered the war on Germany's side and struck France in the back. The French sued for peace.

The war's fourth stage opened with Hitler's declaration that Britain must "capitulate" or he would destroy the Empire. Britain fights.

East on Alert For Defence Of America

Maritime Provinces Form Basis of Powerful Atlantic Command

By JOHN LeBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

AS CANADA'S first line of defence on this continent, the Maritime Provinces after a year of war stand yet untouched by actual battle, but bristling with defences enlarged and strengthened in the months of conflict.

Just as the transition from peace to war did in 1914-15, the year has done much to change the face of these eastern Provinces. Now the war dominates their life, and always in the background is the certainty that if an invasion ever comes, the Maritimes will be the striking point.

Key cities are ready for that eventuality. An elaborate air-raid precautions setup is in full swing, with even mobile dressing stations ready in some places. The navy takes care of the threat by water, with big guns, too, guarding the shores.

Industrially and economically also the war has left its stamp on the Maritimes. Factories that used to turn out materials of peace are grinding out shells by the tens of thousands. Coal mining production is up. Farmers are striving to produce more, with the Empire's needs in view.

The recent appointment of Major-General W. H. P. Elkins to Canada's new Eastern Military Command was direct evidence of the Maritimes' importance in the defence of the Dominion. General Elkins is responsible for guarding thousands of miles of coastline.

Long Coastline.

The shores of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island are in General Elkins' command as well as the coasts of Newfoundland, the Gaspe Peninsula and the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Organization of this new command reminded the people of the Maritimes and adjacent territory they were not only in that part of Canada closest to the Empire's enemies in Europe, but also a vital link in the Empire's war organization.

Harbor traffic is booming in "east coast Canadian ports." The long convoys come and go, preceded by minesweepers and flanked by the watchdogs of the navy.

Says General Crerar:

Written for The Canadian Press
By MAJ.-GEN. H. D. G. CRERAR,
Chief of the General Staff.

SUCCESS in war, reduced to its simplest form, is largely a matter of obtaining the correct solution to a problem in dynamics. Generally speaking, it is a question of how to apply the right amount of force at the right time, in the right direction, and at the right place. If any one of the factors in the calculation are incorrectly assessed, then there will result either a surplus of effort or an ineffectual effort. If we are to be successful, therefore, we must not only arrive at a proper appreciation of the enemy's intentions and of the means he intends to employ against us in order to further them, but we must be quite clear in our own minds as to the military resources at our own disposal and the best way we can use them, not only to repulse the enemy, but to defeat him.

Maj.-Gen. Crerar

Present Task.

At this date it is no use indulging in laments and recriminations over the military inadequacies of the Allies as recently revealed by Hitler through his conquest of most of Western Europe. The task is now, with those bitter facts in our possession, to create the right amount and nature of armed force required to destroy him and all he represents, and to do so in the minimum of time.

From what the Minister of National Defence has said in Parliament, it can be taken that the maximum military effort which Canada is capable of producing is now in process of intense development. The essential thing is that such effort should be so co-ordinated and balanced, that really effective results should appear in the minimum of time.

I am giving away no secrets to the enemy when I state that our present major requirement is armament. We have no dearth of men in Canada, now enrolled in the fighting services, who clamor for a chance to press this war through to its final and victorious conclusion. We have a large and constantly growing Canadian Active Service Force now in the United Kingdom which, individually and collectively, is the match for anything it may meet on the field of battle.

But, what Canada and the Empire as a whole still lack is a sufficiency of the modern weapons of war to enable those men to destroy the enemy without sacrificing their lives unnecessarily.

At times it may appear to those who, by the very nature of things, cannot know all the factors in the military problem that the department is moving too slowly, that the staff is indifferent to presumed dangers from this direction or the other, or that the manpower of this country is not being enlisted or commissioned in the quantities which the situation seems to demand.

Reticences of War.

Believe me, the staff is indifferent to nothing which can assist Canada in waging war to the utmost, and in the most effective manner. The difficulty under which that staff labors, however, is that owing to the reticences imposed by war, it is usually quite unable to explain to the public through the Minister just why this policy is pursued and that one rejected. There are reasons, however, and believed to be sound ones.

The essential thing is to do first things first. The Minister of National Defence, in his recent speech, indicated an order of priority in the development of our military resources which now claims our every attention. We are working to a plan which, at this stage, seems best suited to the contingencies which we must be prepared to meet. If circumstances indicate that changes in that plan are necessary, in order better to contribute to the overthrow of our enemies in Europe and to the security of this country and of this continent, there shall be no delay in recommending them.

From recent and personal experience I might add that there will also be no delay on the part of the Minister in approving sound recommendations once they are placed before him.

High Destiny In 128 Words

We shall go on to the end. We shall fight in France, on the seas and oceans. We shall fight with growing confidence and growing strength in the air. We shall defend our island whatever the cost may be. We shall fight on the beaches and the landing grounds, in the fields, in the streets, and on the hills. We shall never surrender.

And even if, which I do not for a moment believe, this island or a large part of it were subjugated and starving, then our Empire beyond the seas, armed and guarded by the British Fleet, will carry on its struggle until, in God's good time, the new world, with all its power and might, sets forth to the liberation and rescue of the old.

—Prime Minister Churchill in the Commons, June 5, after Dunkerque.

Canada's Aid Cheers Britain In Battle "On to the End"

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 31 (CP).—At the close of the first year of war, Canada stands by the side of the Mother Country in the Battle of Britain. Residents of this embattled island have ever the cheery word for the youngest Dominion and its mounting aid in men and munitions.

When the First Division came to England in chill December, the country's hospitality warmed the hearts of the shivering Canadians. "Canada" on broad khaki shoulders promised aid to the Allies in a battle really not begun.

Announcement of the Commonwealth Air Training scheme in December and its development, after early delays, to wider scope than planned was accepted in official circles as one of the war's heaviest moral strokes against Hitler. Soon Canada will be producing highly trained airmen in such numbers as to turn the tide of battle in the skies.

Canada's own fliers, who saw little action until the "baby blitzkreig" of August, swept into the battle to ready British cheers. Recalling the daredevil Canadians of the First Great War, the public watched the tallies of potential Canadian "aces" almost more eagerly than of the battle-tried English pilots who fought through the war's first year.

Canada's defence liaison with the United States meant to England a guarantee of the utmost aid from America's indispensable arsenal. It was realized the lease to the United States of naval bases in the Western Hemisphere could never be possible failing the century-old co-operation between Canada and the States.

The steady flow of food supplies from Canada and the promise of increased war material gave confidence in the months when United States aid was not too certain.

In the rising tempo of the war for freedom, Canada kept step with Britain. The arrival in August of the crack Second Division, giving Britain the forces for a Canadian corps of two divisions and ancillary forces under Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, was the final, unnecessary assurance that Canada is as determined as the truest Briton that this war must be fought "on to the end."

War Industry Rises to Need

Year's War Orders Cost About $300,000,000

Canada's industrial plant, accelerating and expanding from day to day under the drive of war, has taken governmental war orders estimated at approximately $300,000,000 in the first year of the war.

The expansion itself, about equally shared by Canada and Great Britain, cost and is costing $150,000,000.

The almost daily publication of war orders means that Canadian industry is rising to the needs of war on a grand scale. Air training depots are to be built and equipped, army camps enlarged and equipped for winter occupation, naval craft are to be built, the enlisted forces to be clothed and armed.

The result will be that Canada is producing war material as never before. Plant building is largely accounted for by three categories of need: explosives, arms and commodities for manufacture of metals and chemicals.

Of war orders placed, the largest is for aircraft and aircraft supplies. It is worth about $75,000,000. Mechanical transport, shipbuilding and construction run this figure a close second. A large item is for clothing for the armed forces and in anticipation of the general military training plan.

War Power Of Canada Expanded

Land, Sea and Air Might Greatly Increased in First Year of Conflict

By C. B. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CANADA, a land of peace, has transformed itself within a year of war into a determined belligerent spending almost $2,000,000 a day in a grim war effort against Germany and Italy. Day by day the war effort and the cost grow.

Growth of Forces.

Twelve months ago when Nazi Germany hurled its strength against Poland and Canada followed Great Britain and France into the conflict, the Dominion had a small standing army, an insignificant air force, a tiny navy. It had great capacity for production of war instruments, but few orders.

Today the strength of the Canadian Active Service Force is 153,842, of which 39,839 men are in England guarding the island fortress beside troops from other parts of the Empire.

Spectacularly, the Royal Canadian Air Force has grown into a great striking force and continues to expand in size and strength. Its enlisted personnel on July 24 was announced as 19,453, and now probably exceeds 21,000 on the basis of a weekly enlistment of 400. At the outbreak of war R.C.A.F. strength was 4,061.

Equally spectacular has been the growth of the Royal Canadian Navy—in ships from 15 to 121 inside of a year and in men from 1,700 to 10,000. For the first time in her history Canada has sent warships to Great Britain to fight with the Royal Navy.

Changes in Capital.

Ottawa, nerve centre of Canada's unprecedented war effort, has undergone great transformation since last September. From this capital is directed the administrative and organizing force which has sent 60,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen overseas, created the nucleus of a great home defense army, built up a navy from the smallest beginning, and established an air force.

This has meant to Ottawa the addition of thousands of workers to the public service, appropriation of every foot of available office space, construction of two large temporary office structures and creation of new departments of government.

After the initial year of the first Great War Canada had more men overseas than in the present instance, but conditions were far different, although the same enemy threatened.

Then the main effort was to put manpower on the front line to hold the enemy or drive him back from his entrenchments. Now the call on Canada is for men, but also for materials in staggering quantities, for air fighters and for assistance in keeping the Atlantic lanes open.

To meet this responsibility the Government has set up Ministries for Air and Naval Services within the Defence Department, a new Department of Munitions and Supply, and a new Department of National War Services.

Air Development.

Most impressive of all phases of the war effort is the air development. In addition to building the Royal Canadian Air Force into a powerful unit which has been on active service defending eastern and western shores since war started, Canada has given leadership and administration for the gigantic Commonwealth Air Training Plan, which is designed to turn out an endless flood of trained air personnel from all parts of the Empire.

In July and August, 1915, after a year of conflict, Canada was mobilizing men for service overseas as a chief war responsibility. Industrial development for war purposes was practically nil—it was to come later. There was little or no thought of the possibility the Dominion itself might be invaded.

After a year of war in the present struggle Canada has not only sent two divisions to England, but has provided garrisons for certain of the British West Indies, Iceland, Newfoundland and the strategic Atlantic and Pacific fortifications.

Naval and air units are operating on both coasts, particularly on the Atlantic, convoying merchant fleets, patrolling against possible attacks by air or water, and assisting the naval blockade of Europe.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, always a man of peace and criticized by his political opponents for failure to co-operate fully with the British Government in defence matters, was in office with a record-breaking majority when war broke out.

Called Parliament.

He immediately called Parliament and obtained almost unanimous approval for a declaration of war against Germany. Within seven months after war started he went to the country in a general election and obtained an even greater majority of supporters in the House of Commons.

Diplomatically, the most important war development for Canada occurred at Ogdensburg, N.Y., where the Prime Minister and President Roosevelt recently met and agreed on a plan to establish a joint defence board for Canada and the United States.

Brooklyn Dodgers Split Series With Cincinnati Winning Second Game 6-2

(By Judson Bailey)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The weather man hasn't been very helpful this week in the efforts of the major league baseball clubs to iron out their pennant problems, but there is no indication that they could have accomplished anything even if he had been.

Cincinnati Reds and Brooklyn Dodgers collided in a two-game series that ought to have provided fireworks and instead fizzled like a damp fuse. The two games were split and the only difference they made in the National League flag chase was that Brooklyn, failing to improve itself, muffed a chance it could ill afford in the shortening days of the season.

The three top teams in the American League continued their parade with no important change.

It now appears that neither Cleveland's back nor Bobby Feller's heart was broken in that boisterous series the New York Yankees swept last week-end.

Feller gave the Indians their second straight victory last night, 4-2, at Chicago after saving their scalps with a relief appearance at Washington on Monday.

Boston Red Sox also closed in on the Yankees from behind by putting Philadelphia Athletics through a 5-4 wringer.

Brooklyn trampled over Cincinnati's champions 6-2 in the only game in the National League.

CALGARY BRONKS BEAT WINNIPEG

Winners Score Two Touchdowns, One by Former Queen's Star, Joe Turner

Calgary, Aug. 31 (CP)—Calgary Bronks beat Winnipeg Blue Bombers, present Dominion champions, 12-1 in the opening engagement of the 12-game western Interprovincial Football Union schedule yesterday. A home crowd of 3,000 howled approval.

The Albertans completed all five forward passes they attempted and took advantage of two Winnipeg errors to score touchdowns by Joe Turner, who played last year with Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., and Bill Wusyk, alternate quarterback. Both were converted by Paul Rowe, former University of Oregon backfielder.

The lone Winnipeg point came from the opening kick-off when Greg Kabat booted to Rowe and lanky Bud Marquardt raced in to throw the big fellow behind Bronks' line.

The lead lasted through the first quarter but early in the second Bob Cosgrove intercepted Andy Bieber's attempted forward pass to Ches McCance on the Calgary 35-yard line. Two forward passes figured prominently in Bronks' downfield march climaxed when Turner smashed through right middle for a touchdown.

The second score came early in the third quarter when Bieber fumbled a punt on the Winnipeg 15 and Wusyk picked up the loose ball and crossed the line.

Calgary made 14 first downs and gained 249 yards rushing to 15 and 189 for Bombers Bronks completed all five passes for a total gain of 47 yards while Winnipeg completed five of 15 for 122 yards. The champions lost 30 yards in penalties to Calgary's 10.

SNEAD DEFEATS GENE SARAZEN

Pre-Tournament Favorite Beats Thrice-Winner of Trophy One Up

By TOM REEDY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 31 (AP)—Sam Snead, pre-tournament favorite every time the professional golfers get together, stood on the threshold again today with only two players barring his way to the really big victory his all-around ability merits.

His performance yesterday in defeating Gene Sarazen, thrice P.G.A. champion, wiped out the memory of those tournaments in which he has been a front runner and folded.

Snead's one up triumph after a 36-hole uphill fight put him against Harold (Jug) McSpaden, whom he had to play off to win the Canadian open crown in Toronto recently. In the other bracket, Byron Nelson meets Ralph Guldahl. Both are former U.S. open champions.

They don't make competition stiffer than the kind Guldahl got from Ben Hogan, the Texas pile driver.

Guldahl won 3 and 2, which sounds easy. But Ralph had to shoot one of the most amazing rounds of his career to win.

Nelson and McSpaden had breezes. Byron brushed Eddie Kirk, Framington, Mich., dark horse, aside by a 6 and 5 margin.

McSpaden caught Paul Runyan when the little fellow, twice winner of this tournament, simply couldn't hit the ball straight, and the result was an 8 and 6 win.

Three Sent to Training School Until Twenty-One Years Old

Termed "Famous Three" Plead Guilty to a Series of Thefts

CHIEF TESTIFIES

Trenton, Aug. 31—With tears in her eyes, a mother of two teen-aged boys, pleaded with the Court yesterday afternoon as her two sons and another teen-aged boy were sent to the Boys' Training School at Bowmanville, until they attain the age of 21 years.

The three boys, who were termed as "The Famous Three," by Chief William Bain, were charged with 20 offences between them. The charges were for theft, shoplifting and breaking and entering.

Two of the boys pleaded guilty to a charge of theft, that happened only Thursday of this week. They had appeared before Magistrate Butler at a special sitting of the Juvenile Court on Saturday, August 24 and each had pleaded guilty to a number of charges.

"These boys have openly defied the court by their actions," stated Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson. "Even while they awaited sentence, on the other charges, they deliberately committed this offence. I move that they receive a severe sentence."

One of the boys, age 12 was charged with eight different offences, while the other two boys pleaded guilty to six charges each. "These boys are the ringleaders of a gang who have made stealing a business," stated Chief Bain. "These are the famous three."

Inspector Heard

Thomas Ruston, Superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, told the court of the actions of the boys. "Since July 28, they have stolen everything from small articles, valued a few cents to others much more valuable."

"They are a real problem," he said. "I suggest they be sent to the Boys' Training School until they are 21 years of age. There seems to be a lacking of parental control and it appears that they need to be sent away."

The father of one of the boys is now serving overseas and the boy was under the supervision of his mother.

"This gang of boys has been running a business of stealing and reselling the articles to other people," said Crown Attorney Robertson. "They are the ringleaders of the gang, who have caused the police of Trenton a great deal of trouble."

Magistrate E. J. Butler ordered the boys be sent to the Boys' Training School until they are 21 years of age. "These boys have committed many serious offences and the training they will receive at the school, will undoubtedly be of great value to them."

Three other boys, who appeared in the court on similar charges but who had only one or two offences chalked up against them, were placed on suspended sentence for six months.

"These boys just happened to get mixed up with the ringleaders and went with them on a couple of jobs," said Crown Attorney Robertson. "I am sure that a suspended sentence would be sufficient for them."

RAIN POSTPONES SOFTBALL GAME

Shell Oilers' and Kingston Tanners Will Battle it Out Tonight at the Flats

A steady drizzle of rain, falling from late afternoon, forced the postponement of the replay of the second game of the Kingston at Belleville intermediate O.A.S.A game here last evening.

Following a lengthy controversy, during which time neither team could agree upon a subsequent playing date, Convener Harry Rollins announced that according to the O.A.S.A. rules and regulations all games postponed on account of rain must be played the next day. It was following this announcement that Mr. Rollins added that the Tanner-Oilers' series will continue at Coleman Flats here this afternoon commencing at 5.30 p.m. if at all possible.

The same two pitchers who battled to a four-all draw here on Wednesday evening will be given the hurling assignment with Johnnie Bawden pitching for Belleville and "Cowboy" Smith firing for Kingston. The visitors won the initial game of the series and need but one more game in a best in three series to take the series, of which the winner meets the Oshawa-Peterboro champions.

Tennis Star Welby Van Horn, fourth ranking in U.S. amateur net circles, has hopes of breaking into a new racket, the baseball game. Welby wants to be a pitcher and already has been given a tryout with the Boston Red Sox. The results were not announced, but the youth comes from a baseball family and his tennis swing is terrific.

BOB GRAY WINS QUEBEC TOURNEY

Shoots Sub-Par 31 in Third Round of Contest to Finish With 139

Montreal, Aug. 31 —(CP)— Bob Gray of Toronto Scarboro held the Quebec Open golf championship today, after a sensational 31 on the third nine knocked out his closest competition over Summerlead layout here yesterday.

It looked like a close finish until Gray hit his stride on the outgoing nine in the afternoon, but after he had completed it, the tournament was all over but the shouting, and he coasted home with a safe 37 for the championship.

Gray had a 36-hole total of 139, just one stroke over the record for the Quebec Open. His three-under-par was just that many strokes better than the scores of Stan Horne of Islesmere, last year's title-holder, and Bill Kerr of Toronto Hunt Club. Horne added a two-under-par 69 to his morning total of 73, while Kerr blazed a 68 on his afternoon round, after carding a 74 in the morning.

ZELLERS TO PLAY ALL-STAR TEAM

Entire Proceeds of Game Between Champions and Pick of Loop Given to Red Cross

Completing their initial season's schedule, the clubs composing the Belleville Ladies' Mercantile Softball League, have taken it upon themselves to assist in the Canada's war charity proceeds whenever possible. Immediately upon the declaration of the 1940 league champions, the Big-Z of Zellers headed by Manager Charlie Barnett, the clubs concerned agreed to play a post season benefit game at Coleman Flats on Tuesday evening next with the entire gross gate receipts being given to the war efforts of the Canadian Red Cross (Belleville Branch).

An all-star team, selected by Leo "Stub" Barrett and composed of players drafted from Kresges, Corbins, Metros, Vikings and Woolworth, will battle the league champion Zeller nine in the first war charity benefit to be staged by the Ladies' Mercantile Softball League at Coleman Flats next Tuesday. The expenses of the game will be borne by the league executive leaving the entire gross receipts of the evening to be given into the hands of the Red Cross. Previously this season the ladies' league cooperated with the mens city league in the staging of a benefit game for the purchase of sports equipment for the Belleville boys now enlisted in the 3/47th Battery. However, Tuesday's game here is of equal importance in this city's sports annals towards the fraternity's effort in helping win the war.

The sports-loving public of Belleville is urged to not only attend but help swell the night's collection, all of which is going towards a worthy cause, while an exciting girls' softball game can also be assured the patrons who attend.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

When the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) leave for a two weeks' military training at Petawawa some time over the week-end, a goodly number of Belleville softball players will be aboard the train with either the Argylls or the 34th Battery, which also is going to the N.P.A.M. camp down east. Lieut.-Col. A. B. Gribble of the local Tank unit, is a keen sportsman and recently issued instructions for the purchase of sufficient softball equipment to outfit an Argyll team. Lieut. Jack Yanover, who headed many a strong baseball nine in Picton in years past, may act as coach of the team and it is the intention of the Argylls to challenge any and all other units at the Petawawa Camp at softball.

Looking over the Argyll unit we find that Col. Gribble's unit has several top-ranking softballers with his battalion. For pitchers there are Connie Harris and Eddie Schrieder, although whether the latter is making the trip to Petawawa or not could not be learned this morning. Alfie Rowbotham is available for catching duties, Jack Moon for first base, Art Mansfield at second, Alex Simpson can play either infield or catch, while Johnnie Ronsky can ably look after the hot corner spot. Diminutive Jimmy Barriage and 'Wimpy' Reynolds of Corbys and Shell respectively, will make two good outfielders, so all that is needed from the remainder of the ranks is an outfielder and a couple of spare men. With so many ranking softball players in their midst the Argyll Light Infantry nine should just about rule the softball roost at Petawawa Camp.

Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, 73-year-old commissioner of baseball, departed for a midsummer fishing vacation to Burt Lake, Mich., some 250 miles north of Grand Rapids, August 2nd. When the Judge arrived at Grand Rapids by plane to motor the rest of the way to the lake, a reporter asked him: "Judge do you think the fishing will be good at Burt Lake?" "Young man," answered the commissioner, "that's what I am going up there to find out."

After coming to Belleville twice the Kingston 'Tanners' are no further ahead than they were last Monday night after beating the Oilers in Kingston. Last evening old Jupiter Pluvius doused the diamond and the players, who stood idly by arguing as to what was to be done until the picture bordered upon the comical stage. Most every suggestion was brought forth including one to play in the rain. We cannot blame the Tanners for their attitude as it's pretty tough medicine to have to foot the financing of three trips to Belleville without any remuneration whatsoever. However, after much contorversy, during which Skipper Bawden held out for his pound of flesh, the game is scheduled to be played this afternoon commencing at 5.30 p.m. Both the Tanners and Oilers will be considerably weakened next week through the loss of players, who are going to Petawawa military camp. Incidentally the Tanners have three players who are with the Artillery in the C.A.S.F. and Manager Tabby Gow admits it's no easy matter to get them off to play softball.

Believe it or not, we're to have some baseball in this district yet. Monday afternoon the Toronto Juniors are in Kingston in the Junior O.B.A. playdowns and we'll be sadly disappointed if the Limestone City kids don't win. Out in Bancroft the Deloro nine will open their intermediate O.B.A. play-offs today with the return game scheduled for Deloro next Wednesday. The South Hastings team, managed by H. G. "Twig" Woodley, will meet the winner of the Bancroft-Deloro series the week after next, which gives Skipper Woodley all next week to practice and select his team. According to this schedule local baseball fans should be prepared to see their first baseball game of the season here along about Sept. 11th as the South Hastings "All-stars" are using the Fair Grounds as their home diamond.

Do you remember when Gene Kunes, 26-year-old Norristown, Pa., professional, fired a two-under-par 68 in the final round for a 72-hole total of 280 to win the Canadian open golf championship at Montreal five years ago today. Vic Ghezzi of Deal, N.J., placed second, two strokes behind Kunes.

Just how the country's N.P.A.M. elementary training camps will affect other softball teams, qualifying for direct O.A.S.A. playdowns we cannot say, but both the Shell and Point Anne will be hit rather hard, as will the Kingston Tanners we understand. Besides those we referred to previously in today's notes, there's Vern Goyer, also with Shell and who goes to military camp with the 34th Battery under Captain Hare. The Point Anne "Cementmen" may happen to edge out Wooler at Trenton this afternoon but after today they'll have no first string pitcher as "Ding" Luffman is going to Camp Borden with the 2nd Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment under Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan. This will doubtless prove a serious loss to the Ox-Point nine, but then again they've got to beat Wooler first. Incidentally Convener Harry Rollins just dropped in to make a social call and informed us that if the grass at Coleman Flats didn't show signs of drying up by noon he wuold call off the Tanner-Shell game. "You wouldn't be able to keep the balls dry for a single moment, if the sun doesn't shine soon," added Harry.

SPORT SPICE — Jimmy McGuire, veteran Belleville hockey player, joined the ranks of the benedicts last evening and now will have two telling him how to score, the coach and his bride. "Congrats, Jim." . . . Signs of winter—talk of Toronto operating a farm hockey team in Buffalo with Eddie Powers as coach. . . . Roy Covert, 'member when he used to play hockey here, was the hero when Oshawa beat Peerboro' at softball the other night. Roy smote a mighty tenth inning homer with one aboard to give Oshawa an 8 to 6 win over the Petes. . . . It was just 20 years ago that Cleveland and Brooklyn met in the world series, Flatbush fans are hoping that a miracle will see a repitition this year. . . . The Brooks beat the Reds yesterday to help their cause, however. . . . Bobby Feller chalked up his 23rd win of the season as the Indians gained slightly over the idle Tigers and Yankees.

'Wolves Don't Bite'

Book of Tales of Algoma Collection of Lightsome Stories by James W. Curran

("Wolves Don't Bite," Joyous Tales of Algoma, by J. W. Curran, The Sault Daily Star, Sault Ste. Marie. 273 pages. $2 net.)

Those who love the hunt, those who love the woods, those who love good humor, have a rare experience waiting for them in "Wolves Don't Bite," a book of the Algoma north by that famous newspaper figure J. W. Curran of the Sault Daily Star. Here are tales aplenty of the Algoma wolf so well known to the people of Ontario through the writings of Mr. Curran, and of those very human figures, those rugged men who have the virility, the love of adventure which have always been associated with the people of the North. Mr. Curran has been writing stories of this type for years and newspaper readers all over the continent have delighted in such tales. Some of the best of these are gathered in "Wolves Don't Bite."

The stories are written in a peculiarly lightsome vein and in them their author explores a happy hunting ground through which he guides his readers—a book of many stories, of hunters, guides, lumberjacks, prospectors, voyageurs, settlers and others. It is a saga of the north in the great spaces where adventure abounds. The record is an accurate one, revealed in every human touch of character in the personages who appear in these stories and in the habits of wild life.

The book is healthy and tonic-giving. The stories make readers want to know the men whom the editor of the Sault Daily Star has brought before them and to take a deep breath of the life which Mr. Curran knows.

His style is his own. That is what readers like. They love the writer and romancer who hews his own style out of the life he knows. He has created something new and true to fact.

The book leads off with a pen and ink sketch by Jimmy Frise of old Sam Martin, whose dictim "any man that says he's been et by a wolf is a liar." It is full of illustrations of the stories of man in relation to the wolves of Algoma. It is the world's first wolf book and it makes an effort to tell all there is to be known about the "grisly terror" which Algoma, from long experience thinks is no more dangerous than a rabbit.

From the dedication the reader learns that the pages are dedicated to the Algoma wolf, in grateful recognition of his fine co-operation in dispelling a myth dear to mankind, to the now famous Algoma Wolf Club, to the people of the types Jim Curran portrays and shows in action, and to all those live cooped up in cities and dream of the campfire, the silence of the forest, the trail and the portage, long rivers, lonely lakes and untrodden ways. Canadians and Americans too will revel in the book.

SHIPS SUNK DURING WEEK

(By The Canadian Press)

Although the British Government maintained its usual silence on the day-to-day sinkings of British merchantmen on the high seas, enough news leaked through neutral ports to indicate that the Nazi U-boats were active in the week ending Aug. 30.

The sinking of five British ships with a total tonnage of 26,644 became known. One of them was the 3,457-ton Empire Merchant, which was the former German vessel Pomona, captured by the British Navy early in the war.

Other sinkings during the week were the 3,868-ton Finnish ship Elie and the Venezuelan tanker Bolivar, 2,651 tons, which was the first vessel of that country lost in the war.

The British Admiralty summary for the week ending Aug. 18 showed 13 British, allied and neutral ships totalled 52,899 tons lost in that period.

Virginia Bruce, George Brent and Brenda Marshall are co-starred in "The Man Who Talked Too Much," opening with a preview performance after Sunday midnight at the Capitol.

Britain to Refuse Immunity From Attack For Nazi Red Cross Ships

London, Aug. 31 (CP)—Britain announced today she would refuse to recognize as Red Cross ships immune from attack German vessels which the Nazis claim are used to rescue Nazi airmen shot down at sea.

A German note announcing the Nazis intend to mark 64 ships with the Red Cross for such a purpose was countered by Britain with the assertion that the "character and functions" of so many vessels were open to "the gravest suspicions."

Germans have attacked British vessels engaged in saving both British and German airmen, officials said, and have "repeatedly and flagrantly" attacked bona fide hospital ships.

The reply to the German note was sent via Switzerland, through whom the original German announcement was made.

It said the claim of Red Cross privileges for such vessels was "wholly inadmissible."

TWO FREIGHTERS COLLIDE IN FOG

Vessels Off New Jersey Coast Apparently Not in Serious Trouble

New York, Aug. 31 —(AP)— The freighter Seatrain Texas, a new $2,500,000 United States ship, and the Norwegian freighter Rolf Jarl collided in a fog off the New Jersey coast early today, Mackay radio reported, but both apparently were not in serious trouble.

Four hours after the Seatrain Texas sent an SOS call reporting she had struck an "unknown ship," the 1,917-ton Norwegian vessel sent a message to the Texas, intercepted by Mackay, which said:—

"We will try proceed for five fathom bank daybreak. Please standby until further notice."

The Seatrain Texas earlier had reported she was in "no need of assistance."

The collision occurred about 35 miles east southeast of Cape May, N.J., Mackay said, adding that the "five fathom bank" referred to meant five fathom bank lightship off the Cape May point.

The Rolf Jarl is registered from Trondheim, Norway, and made Philadelphia Aug. 21 after a voyage from Lisbon, Portugal.

The 14,200-ton Seatrain Texas, owned by Seatrain Lines, Inc., is used for carrying loaded railroad freight cars and operates between New York and Texas ports. It was launched March 9, 1940.

Press Correspondent Describes Night Raid Across London

Drone of Heavy Dornier (German) Engines Distinctly Heard High Above Capital

(By G. H. P. Anderson, Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 31—(AP)—From an observation post on a rooftop I have just heard the first two German night raiders cross the London sky.

Strong searchlight concentrations escorted them carefully every yard of the way, but failed to pick them up immediately in their ice blue beams.

The drone of the heavy Dornier (German) engines was unmistakeable as one plane slowly followed the other. Once there was a vivid series of flashes in the outskirts of the London area which might have been caused by the explosion of bombs.

The Germans fly very high; well above the balloon barrage. Even now I can hear the engines of two planes almost directly above. One is the heavy drone of a German bomber; the other has the lighter note of what probably is a Spitfire.

They seem to be playing cat and mouse across the sky, with the searchlights still following.

Explosions Faint

Once there were sharp explosions in the direction from which they came. Now there are heavy bursts of bombs from two directions but the explosions are faint, indicating that the scene of their fall was several miles from the heart of the city.

Searchlights are concentrated in clusters.

The Germans seem to be flying above 20,000 feet.

After a long period of inactivity a deep rumble of bursting bombs breaks the stillness and searchlight after searchlight climbs the sky, coming like wheat-sheaves around one corner of the heavens.

They catch an enemy plane attempting to machine-gun barrage balloons and the anti-aircraft splutters.

The distant thunder of explosions is sounding.

A few moments later searchlights tracked a raider and a salvo of bombs was dropped by the Nazi bomber.

Great flashes light the sky.

Now there's another heavy roll of explosions from the same direction followed by the whining note of what apparently are British fighters diving sharply to attack.

From the large number of explosions it seems as if this raider jettisoned his full load of bombs. Now he's overhead, pinned against the sky by converging searchlights that hold him in their centre like a star. Moving fast, his course must be rocky because anti-aircraft shells now are bursting all around him. He's having a hot time of it, but now he's escaped, veering sharply out of the blinding beams.

Caught in Lights

Now there's another, also caught in the lights, and a lighter roaring suggests he's pursued by a British fighter. Swiftly the whole panorama moves across the night skies out of sight.

From the opposite direction there is another roll of bombs exploding in the outskirts, setting up a distant glow.

Down in the streets, the shrill whistles of air raid wardens suggest there are others who have left their shelters to watch the brilliant show.

Many of them have been underground for hours while the fighting rages aloft.

Thunderous Applause Greets A. L. I. in Full Dress Parade

Battalion Marches to Fair Grounds for Review by Fair Patrons

PARADE ROUTE LINED

Spontaneous reception and thunderous acclaim greeted the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) as the unit paraded in full battle dress for the first time in Belleville last night. Thousands of citizens lined the route of parade and braved a drizzling rain for fully an hour prior to the unit swinging out of the Armouries to the skirl of the bagpipes.

Parked automobiles lined the entire route of parade from the Armouries to the Fair Grounds, where the battalion under Lieut.-Col. A. B. Gribble passed in review before a capacity-filled grandstand, that literally rocked as the result of the thunderous applause afforded Belleville's own N.P.A.M. unit on their initial dress parade. Wearing their new khaki battle dress with black beret, (the latter being symbolic of the Tank units of the Canadian army,) the entire unit marched smartly to the strains of the martial music of the Regimental and the Pipe Bands of the unit. It was the final dress parade previous to the Argyll Light Infantry leaving for a two-week elementary military training camp at Petawawa next week.

Credit to Community

The enthusiasm of the thousands of civilians who lined the streets in the route of parade and at the Fair Grounds, was outwardly demonstrated in the spontaneous and tumultuous applause that was afforded the unit as it paraded in splendid military style to the credit of the community which it represents and the N.P.A.M. of Canada.

As the parade swung onto the race rack in front of the grandstand at the Fair Grounds, a spotlight was directed upon the leading pipe band and the entire stand to a man rose to cheer and applaud the local N.P.A.M. unit as it passed in review. The parade was headed by Regimental Sergeant-Major H. Willerton followed by Lieut.-Col. Gribble, his smartly-attired staff of officers and fine body of marching men. The Regimental band entered the reviewing space before the grandstand playing a lively martial tune to keep the soldier boys in step and marching in military precision. The brass band was headed by Sergt. Reg. Wardle. The new khaki battle dress uniforms worn by the Argyll Light Infantry last evening for the first time on parade was brought clearly before the grandstand patrons as the men marched past under the powerful electric spotlights directed from atop of the stand. After parading past the grandstand in review the battalion wheeled about and retraced its steps to again march by and again the applause from the stands was that of full appreciation for what the officers and men of the Argyll Light Infantry N.P.A.M. stand for and have attained in Canada's war effort. Favourable comment was heard on all sides regarding the splendid military-like precision in which last night's parade was conducted could be heard by the many hundreds who witnessed the review despite the inclement weather.

Leave for Camp

On Monday the Argyll Light Infantry some 375 strong, will leave for a two-week elementary military training period at Petawawa camp. The unit will entrain at Belleville and will be accompanied by the 34th Battery N.P.A.M. under Captain Hare, both units travelling on the same special military train.

LOCAL POULTRY BREEDERS EARN PRIZES AT C.N.E.

R. J. Messervey and son, local poultry breeders and fanciers, took many prizes at the Toronto Exhibition in the poultry division this year, it was learned here today.

Especially of note was the showing of Orpingtons and Partridge Rocks by the Messervey pens. Thirteen prizes in all were awarded, including several firsts and seconds gained in the two above mentioned classes. In the Orpington class Mr. Messervey's prize bird took the silver shield as one of the best birds on exhibition.

30,000,000 Pounds of Bacon Taken From Storage

During the winter months the Bacon Board were responsible for the storing of some 30,000,000 pounds of bacon, which they hoped to use to make uniform the export shipments during the summer months. In spite of the heavy marketings that were not anticipated the Bacon Board have followed their original plan and have taken the bacon out of storage.

As a result we find the storage stocks cleared and the marketing problems are connected only with the present production.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of August 30, 1940 are as follows:

Few Price Changes On Produce Markets

Toronto, Aug. 31—Price changes were few on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, with eggs and top-grade butter closing the week on a steady footing. Undergrade butter slipped fractionally.

Eggs, which advanced sharply throughout most of the week, were unchanged yesterday in fair trading. Receipts were light but buyers were not too anxious to overstock at high price levels. Prices on A-pullet and Grade C eggs showed improvement in the graded section, moving to ranges of 26c to 27c and 16 1-2c to 17c respectively. Grade C eggs sold to retailers at 18 1-2c to 19c, up 1-2c from Thursday. During the week Government inspected shipments commanded a premium of 1c and there was a fair volume of inspected shipments to northern points.

Offerings of butter were light and demand was sufficient to keep first-grade receipts moving steadily. This stock was steady at 22 1-4c while undergrades, however, continued to drag. Butter of 37 score or under was difficult to move even at cut prices. With buying interest absent, undergrades eased to a range of 20 1-4c to 21 1-2c.

Dressed poultry was easier in tone but unchanged in price from last week. Receipts increased somewhat.

BRITISH BOMBERS

Nazi officials claimed damage to establishments which might be regarded as military objectives was extremely small.

A number of bombs also fell in the southeast section of the city causing large fires.

60 Feet of Wall Ripped Out

(This was the section where the Royal Air Force bombed selected military targets Thursday morning.)

The vast Siemens Schuckert Electrical Works in West Berlin was hit by one high explosive bomb, which ripped out about 60 feet of wall of one plant building. In another part of the big factory two incendiary bombs started fires in a yard where lumber was stored in scattered piles.

Observers in the Associated Press offices (which are located on the five-block long Zimmerstrasse between Linden Strasse and the Wilhelmstrasse) could see the low-flying plane clearly in the glare of the searchlights and could see the flash of exploding bombs a few blocks away.

The alarm was sounded at 1:30 a.m. (7:39 p.m. E.D.T.) and the all clear signal came at 3:16 a.m. (9:16 p.m. E.D.T.)

Throughout the south and southeast of Berlin numerous small fires were started by incendiary bombs.

German officials led newspaper correspondents about town after the raid but the newsmen could not visit every spot where incendiary bombs had landed.

The correspondents did not visit Tempelhf Airdrome, but were told that one bomb had landed on a distant field.

NINE GERMAN

Street Crowded With Shoppers

One plane dived out of the sun on a town in the London area. The streets were crowded with shoppers There were half a dozen explosions Women and children ran for shelter and the fire brigade and air raid precautions services rushed into action.

About the time of the third thrust against London an elderly Swiss couple were remanded in custody at a West London Court, charged with having made torch signals three days ago under circumstances which authorities charged indicated they were trying to guide raiding planes.

The prisoners, Emil Wirth, 62, and his wife, Alma, 61, denied the charge.

A dogfight raged over a southeast town as the Germans sought to stab into the London zone about 60 miles from the Dover coast. Spitfires, Fighter planes which can climb to 11,000 feet in less than five minutes checked a large bomber formation before it crossed the Channel.

A movie cameraman, filming action on the Dover "battlefront" was hit by a bullet which pierced his tin hat. German planes were attacking a balloon barrage at the time.

Five Parachutes Seen Descending

Several raiders were shot down and five parachutes were seen descending as the surviving attackers fled.

A photographer reported Nazi Messerschmitts brought down "a lot of balloons" at Dover.

Waves of more than 70 bombers flew high over three southeast coast towns, accompanied by strong escorts of fighters.

Nine persons were found dead today in debris of a cellar in a northeastern town bombarded Thursday night.

An eye-witness in one southeast coast town gave this account of today's fighting:—

Battle Colossal

"It was colossal. Some of the battles were fought out close to the ground.

"No sooner had the enemy appeared than anti-aircraft guns set up a terrific barrage, followed very soon by British Spitfires charging to the attack.

"About 40 of the raiders were engaged and dispersed in short order."

In a revision of yesterday's losses the Air Ministry said 25 British craft were downed but that 15 of the pilots were saved.

There were some casualties in the daylight raid on the London area, but their number and the extent of damage could not be established immediately.

The first London alarm, at 8:26 a.m. (3:26 a.m. EDT), lasted 37 minutes, and the second, at 10:38 (5:38 a.m. EDT), lasted 41 minutes.

Two formations of Nazi bombers under fighter-plane escort swept over the southeast coast this morning, with about a dozen bombers and 20 fighters in the first flight and additional bombers and 30 Messerschmitts in the second.

Royal Air Force fighters roared into action and early reports on the battle said nine Nazi craft out of a squadron of 30 bombers and fighters were shot down. Watchers on the coast said the British defenders "scattered the German formations all over the sky."

German Messerschmitt fighters shot down several barrage balloons at a southeast town. One of the raiders was reported to have plunged into the sea when struck by rifle fire from a ground crew.

Four Shot Down at Once

Four more German planes later were shot down in another encounter with British fighters.

London, meanwhile, had been under air raid alarm for 10 hours and seven minutes in the 24 hours since the sirens shrieked their shrill warning at 11:46 Friday morning.

That was the first of four raids during the day and night in which the blazing guns of the R.A.F. and their supporting anti-aircraft defences took a heavy toll of the Nazis. Altogether 62 German planes were shot down, 12 by the all-Canadian squadron of the R.A.F. during a single patrol.

Canadians Get Their Share

In what the Air Ministry's news service laconically described as "a useful hour's work," the Canadians of the R.A.F. shot down eight Messerschmitts and four Heinkel bombers without suffering any losses or damage. British losses for the day were 19 planes but 10 pilots bailed out to safety.

The day's "bag" brought the German losses for the month to more than 1,000 planes, the Air Ministry announced, and it was learned that the 1st Canadian Fighter Squadron of the R.C.A.F. had bagged 12 of these since it began operating as a unit Aug. 24. Yesterday, under Sqdn.-Ldr. Ernest McNab, they fought at least one hot action against a Nazi attack on a factory near their base. Three German bombers fell to the Canadians.

On Way to Work

Rooftop watchers failed to catch a glimpse of the planes that caused the early-morning alarms and there was no repetition of the rumbling anti-aircraft and British fighter plane fire that marked the 6 1-2-hour night engagement which ended at 3.50 a.m.

The first raid this morning came as thousands of Londoners were on their way to work. Trains maintained uninterrupted service and street traffic was undiminished.

The Press Association commented that when the sirens sounded "the reaction among most train passengers heading toward the city was, 'Oh, blow it!'"

Estimate 600 to 1,500 Planes

Newspaper estimates of the number of German planes engaged in the daylight and night attacks which carried over until just before dawn ranged between 600 and 1,500. The News-Chronicle's headline said: "Biggest Air Attack on London." One German night raider was reported shot down in a suburb. A government bulletin this morning said there were "some" casualties and damage to houses and buildings in residential districts from the Germans' haphazard bombing.

The bulletin said a considerable number of planes took part in the attack.

For the first time observers in the streets and on house tops were able to follow the progress of pitched battles between Nazi Dorniers and Heinkels and British Spitfires and Hurricanes, fought to a rumbling undertone of anti-aircraft fire.

Watchers on Ground Cheer R.A.F.

Where formerly dog fights had been waged at such heights the planes were mere specks, this time thousands of watchers in the streets cheered as they saw R.A.F. fighters pump lead into bombers caught in the swiftly-moving maze of searchlight beams.

The four raids on London in the 16 hours up to 3.50 a.m. set a record. The Empire capital underwent three raids in one day previously. The fourth alarm has been surpassed in length only by the Wednesday-Thursday alarm of seven hours and 10 minutes.

Hospital Hit

The Press Association reported a hospital had been hit, and in one London district Nazi machine-gun bullets, apparently intended for barrage balloons, splattered in the streets.

Casualties were reported in another London area where four explosive and many more fire bombs were dropped, while firemen were called out to extinguish three fires in another borough. Two casualties were reported there, and high explosive bombs were said to have caused little damage.

Daylight revealed the bodies of two women and a small boy in the debris of two houses wrecked by a bomb in the London area. In another district an incendiary bomb damaged a house within a few yards of a telephone exchange.

The local civil defence organization handled one incendiary dropped on a boat.

Incendiary bombs fell on an institution in an outer London district. The bombs were extinguished by the local fire brigade, while the patients were safe in air raid shelters.

A whistling bomb fell in a main road in the London area, demolishing two houses and causing some casualties. The explosion shattered many shop windows.

Visit 16 Provincial Towns

Outside London, Nazi warplanes were reported during the night over 16 provincial towns, following up daylight attacks.

In northwest England, bombs hit a school in one town and started fires in another. A Midlands town had its eighth successive night of air attack but, despite high explosive and incendiary bombs, reported few casualties.

A public house roof was damaged by a bomb in a Midlands town but the customers inside were not hurt. At another town a high-explosive bomb hit a brewery.

Four groups of bombers ranged over part of Wales during the night and for nearly four hours the sky was lit by gun flashes. The Germans dropped some bombs but there was no report of damage.

The daylight attacks were concentrated on airdromes and industries in the home counties, surrounding London. The government reported no serious damage to airdromes. The statement said there were casualties and damage to "industrial premises" in one town.

GERMAN ESCAPEE

Two police dogs of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police led the searchers to the district where Steyrer was caught after the hunt switched to the farm of Leo Deault, relief officer for nearby Hallam township, who reported seeing one of the fugitives.

Tricked their Guards

The escapers tricked their guards with aid of other prisoners who partially buried Steyrer and Kibart in a trench in the prison recreation grounds during a football match. The two escaped after the other prisoners were led back to their quarters by burrowing under the first of two high wire fences and taking advantage of a washout under the second.

A guard spotted them as they ran towards nearby bush. He fired but the shot went wide and the prisoners zig-zagged to safety. Search for them had been pressed relentlessly, day and night, from that moment.

The scene of Steyrer's recapture and the search itself recalled the murder of Sergt. Fred Davidson of the Sudbury Police Force, whose killers were trapped in a rocky cut on the C.P.R. line near the same Spanish River bridge three years ago.

One of the slayers, Victor Szymonski, was shot and killed in the gun fight with police, while the second, Tom Pornomarenko, was seriously wounded. He recovered, however, and was hanged January 22, 1938.

The War This Week

(By Don Gilbert Canadian Press Cable Editor).

After a full year of hostilities, the people of Berlin had their first large-scale air raids in the 52nd week of the war. Every night but one bombers of the Royal Air Force visited the German Capital, attacking war industries and communications facilities.

Aircraft factories in northern Italy were another important target for the British night raiders and while the Nazi authorities kept up the prteense htat no vital damage was caused, the Italians were frank enough to admit hits on the Fiat factory at Milan and elsewhere.

The intensity of the German raids on Britain was not maintained on the scale of the previous week. The attacking formations were smaller, and on no day did the number of Nazi machines shot down reach the 100 mark that was twice exceeded previously.

The Germans however, concentrated on the more important centres. Attempts ewre mad to reach London several times each day, and such industrial centres as Liverpool, Manchester and Birmingham were visited in the coruse of the week. The British authorities conceded damage to industrial establishments, but naturally they did not help the enemy by disclosing the extent.

While the air war went on, and the long threatened attacks by thousands of Nazi planes at a time and the predicted invasion seemed no nearer, the Nazi regime sought to consolidate its position in southeastern Europe by forcing Rumania to cede half of her province of Transylvania to Hungary.

Russia Behind Haste

The German action in summoning a meeting on the matter at Vienna had the earmarks of urgency, and it was widely reported that the uncertainty of Russia's intentions was behind the haste to get the question settled.

In the Mediterranean, Italy's plans for an offensive against Egypt seemed to have been thwarted temporarily by surprise British naval attacks on Italian ports in Libya, where ports facilities were blasted at point blank range. It was rumored that the Italians were so preoccupied with preparations inland that they had left the ports practically undefended.

A new factor in the North African situation was seen in a developing revolt against the Petain regime in French African possessions. The authorities in Chad, Cameroons and French Congo, all in equatorial Africa, decided to continue the war at the side of Britain and in collaboration with Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Glancing back 25 years:

Squadron-Commander A. W. Bigsworth of the Royal Navy destroyed a German submarine off Ostend, August 26, 1915—The first submarine ever sunk by air attack. French air squadrons were busy, 150 bombs being dropped on the munitions plant at Dillingen, Germany. Allied artillery had its innings, pounding German defences to pieces north of the Aisne River and between the Aisne and the Argonne. The Russians captured 3,000 German prisoners and 30 guns.

PROBE ORDERED

will head the Board appointed to investigate organization and administration of internment camps. Associated with him will be T. Dann of Ottawa, former Deputy Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Warden Goad of Dorchester Penitentiary in New Brunswick.

Mr. Ralston said he was determined to "leave no stone unturned to see these people are held in safe keeping". It was a difficult problem to hold in custody in quickly organized camps "thousands of men who have 24 hours a day in which to plan their escape," he said.

Maj. Gen. E. C. Ashton, former Inspector-General for Central Canada, will be chairman of the Court of Inquiry to investigate the escape of Pietsch and Neumann. Mr. Ralston said the Court would convene in the Muskoka area at the earliest possible moment. Two senior officers of the non-permanent active militia also will be members of the Court.

Meanwhile, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, aided by police dogs, and Ontario Provincial Police scoured the countryside for Pietsch and Naumann. In addition search continued in Northern Ontario for Theodor Steyrer and Hans Kibart, also German war prisoners, who escaped from a Sudbury district camp last Tuesday.

The escape of Pietsch and Naumann was cleverly planned, internment officials here disclosed. The prisoners watched their chance and placed two planks on the chassis of a dump truck in the camp and then climbed on unnoticed.

The truck left the camp with the prisoners underneath and when the vehicle reached the dump the driver noticed two "suspicious looking" figures dart for the bushes. He took chase but the prisoners were too fast for him and after a roll call it was found the two prisoners were missing.

It was the second escape from this camp in recent times. Two weeks ago Guenther Lorentz, a naval lieutenant, tunnelled his way out, hitchhiked to Montreal where he was recaptured. Lack of a registration card led to his being held in custody, later to be identified as the missing prisoner.

The escape of Steyrer, an underofficer of the German navy, and Kibart, an airman, also was cleverly planned. During a football match in the camp recreation ground, other prisoners partially buried Steyrer and Kibart in a trench. When all prisoners left the grounds they got through a wire fence surrounding the grounds and made off.

The sixth prisoner to escape is being held by United States border guards near International Falls, Minn., where he was taken into custody after fleeing from a camp in northwestern Ontario. He is Manuel Fischer, 30, a German civilian. His case is still awaiting disposition and is in the hands of Washington officials.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were starting to eat dinner, being roast beef and things, and pop said, I'm hungry, give me plenty of everything and dont spare the gravey, and I said, I'm hungry too, ma, you can give me plenty of everything till you come to the spinnitch and you can leave that out.

Now dont let's have a tiresome song and dance about spinnitch, ma said. You know it's good for you and you know it's one of the prime necessities of life, so why cant you just eat it and be done with it? she said, and I said, Aw G, ma, I'd rather be done with it even quicker than that by not even starting it.

This is a democracy and not a dictatership and nobody is trying to force spinnitch on anybody, pop said. But if you'll just give the matter a little thought and let me tell you something I read in the paper only this morning, maybe you'll take the long view of the matter and realize that it's to your best intrists to eat spinitch and like it. It seems that some scientific labbatory workers have been makeing experiments on rats, and the rats that are fortunate enough to get spinnitch in their diet grow up peppey and vigorous, while the rats deprived of spinnitch become pale, listless and genrelly unintristing, he said, and I said, Well jimminy, pop, you dont want me to imitate rats, do you?

Yes Willyum, dont you think that's rather a far fetched comparison for land sakes? ma said. I mean dont you think it would be more inspiring if you dipped into mythology for your examples and told him that the Greek gods lived on a steady diet of spinnitch and ambrosia, for instants? I mean rats may be all right in their place, she said, and pop said, Please except my resignation to take effect immeeditly.

The result being I ate my spinnitch on account of ma claiming if I didn't it wouldn't be any use asking for a 2nd helping of meat.

Reading of Good Books A Lost Art

By Gary Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

In spite of the many splendid libraries and branches in our big cities it is appaling how small a proporton of the population really use them. Few persons of any age today will walk a block to read in a public library or borrow a good book from it.

Clearly we have two big library problems: 1, to induce more people to read the good books within their reach, to be had without money and without price; 2, to make good books available and free to everybody.

Required Reading

There never was a time before when the public school, especially in the elementary grades, did so much to stimulate children to read books for pleasure and to borrow more of them from the public library. Nor was there ever a time when so many high school and college students were required to read so many books from the public library. One sometimes wonders how much this burden of heavy reading is responsible for the relatively small amount of reading of good books for pleasure after high school or college. It may be, too, that the increased circulation of library books among American youth is accounted for in the increased school assignments rather than increased borrowing books from choice, to read for pleasure. Nor do we know how much the radio and movies have diminished good reading for pleasure, by our modern youth.

You who live near a library should urge your children old enough to read to borrow books from it. Go to the library and borrow books to read yourself; also books from which to read to the baby and young child. If you don't live near a library go to the library in the town or city where you do your shopping.

THE ITALIAN NAVY

As for the Italian fleet, if its exploits have not thus far been notable or heroic, we deprecate as strongly as possible cheap jibes and vainglorious boasting.

We have unbounded confidence that in the day when we can induce the Italian navy to accept battle against British forces we shall deal with it faithfully and finally as we have dealt with others who have challenged us upon the seas. But we do not expect an easy triumph over a pusillanimous and incompetent foe.—The Navy (London.)

Will it Give Nazis "An Out" to Abandon Blitzkrieg on England?

Hungarian troops are shown on the march near the Rumanian border recently. According to latest dispatches from the Balkans, Hungary has taken advantage of clashes between Rumania and Soviet troops, to harass the hapless Magyar nation from the north and west. Germany and Italy, dependent upon these states for food and oil supplies, have been trying to settle the issue and may enter the situation thereby claiming an "out" for not going through with the threatened invasion of Britain. A communique today from Bucharest stated that Rumania would arbitrate as result of the "ultimate demand" of the the Axis Powers.
